

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

The booke of the pylgrynage of man.

LE PELERINAGE DE L'HOMME COMPARED WITH THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS OF
JOHN BUNYAN

The Christian Pilgrimage is no phantasy, any more than the Gospel Promises. The one is contingent upon the other: the Promise makes the Pilgrim. A city to come has been held up to the affections and emulation of the world; a city that hath no need of sun, nor yet of moon to shine in it—whose walls are of Jasper, and foundations of precious stones laid by God; whose gates are pearls, and streets of shining gold. In the midst of it is a pure river of the water of Life, clear as crystal, and on either side the tree of Life, whose fruit is yielded every month. This is the City set in contrast to the Camp of this world, and this it is which makes the Pilgrim.

The Tongue of Time, by the Rev. Wm. Harrison.

THE ANCIENT POEM OF GUILLAUME DE GUILLEVILLE
ENTITLED LE PELERINAGE
DE L'HOMME
COMPARED WITH THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS OF
JOHN BUNYAN

EDITED FROM NOTES COLLECTED BY THE LATE MR. NATHANIEL HILL OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF LITERATURE WITH ILLUSTRATIONS AND AN APPENDIX

LONDON
BASIL MONTAGU PICKERING
196 PICCADILLY
1858

TO John-William-Spencer-Brownlow Egerton,

EARL BROWNLOW,

THESE PAGES ARE DEDICATED

BY THE EDITORS.

CONTENTS.

	Page
INTRODUCTION	vii
LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS	xiii
LE PELERINAGE DE L'HOMME AND THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.
PREVALENCE OF ALLEGORICAL LITERATURE IN THE MIDDLE AGES	1
WHEREIN CONSISTS THE REAL ORIGINALITY OF SUCH WRITERS AS BUNYAN	3
EVIDENCE OF THE POPULARITY OF DE GUILLEVILLE'S DREAM	5
In England:—Chaucer's translation and imitations, (5-7). Lydgate's, (7-10).
Other translations or imitations in MS. and in print, (10-11.)
In other Countries	11
INSTANCE OF PARALLELISM BETWEEN DE GUILLEVILLE AND BUNYAN	15
DETAILED COMPARISON BETWEEN DE GUILLEVILLE AND BUNYAN	18
The Pilgrim—the Wicket-gate—Grace Dieu and Evangelist—the Interpreter's House—the Slough of Despond—the Cross and the Burden—the Scrip and the Staff—the House Beautiful—the Armoury.
OTHER PREDECESSORS OF BUNYAN	31
Wicliff, (31)—Spenser, (32)—Geoffrey Whitney and Sir J. Mandeville—Emblematic Prints, (33)—Piers Plowman, (34)—Walter Mapes, (35)—Hampole, (36).
FURTHER PARALLELS BETWEEN THE ANCIENT ALLEGORISTS	38
APPENDIX.
Description of the Holy City, (i.) Baptism, (vii.) Ordre of Maryage, (x.) Nature, (xiii.) Charity, (xviii.) Memory, (xxiii.) Industry and Idleness, (xxviii.) Wrath and Tribulation, (xxx.) Avarice, (xxxv.) Necromancie, (xl.) Herefye, (xli.) Sathan, (xlii.) Fortune, (xlii.) Gladness of the World, (xlvii.) Agyographe and Flatery, (li.) Oraison (Prayer) and Latria (Worship), (li.) Infirmary and Old Age, (lii.) Mercy and Death, (liii.)
Illustrative Hymns and Allegories	lvii

NOTICE TO THE READER.

THE English quotations given in the following pages are taken from two different translations of De Guileville which are not known to exist in print, but of which two MSS. are found in the British Museum. Curiously enough, one of these is imperfect at the end, while the other, which is imperfect at the beginning, supplies the portion required. The former, Vitellius, C. XIII. is supposed to be translated by Lydgate—no account of the Tiberius, A. VII. has been discovered. Both have suffered by fire in various places; and some of the asterisks occurring in the following quotations denote the passages which have either been destroyed or rendered illegible. In some places, again, asterisks have been inserted where the great diffuseness of the English version rendered it advisable to omit some of the less striking descriptions and insert the substance of them in a prose summary.

The woodcut on the cover of the Pilgrim, with staff and cockle-shell and a clasped volume in his left hand, is taken from a rare book in the library of Queen's College, Oxford, entitled "The Booke of the Pylgrymage of Man."

INTRODUCTION.

HE late Mr. Nathaniel Hill intended to have made the following Papers the groundwork of a larger publication on the "PILGRIM'S PROGRESS" of BUNYAN, in which he proposed showing that Bunyan had been indebted, for many portions of his story, to some of the early Mediæval Romances.

The rough notes of Mr. Hill contain frequent allusions to the opinions put forth by Southey and Montgomery in their respective editions of that popular writer. When, however, these materials came into the hands of the present Editors, they could not but feel that the question of Bunyan's presumed plagiarism was one not likely to possess much interest for the public at large. They have not therefore deemed it advisable to print these references at any length; at the same time, they have judged the curious manuscripts, to which Mr. Hill's researches had directed their attention, well worthy of being brought before the public, on their own merits, apart from any influence they may perhaps have exercised on the composition of Bunyan's Work.

With this view, while noticing the "Pilgrim's Progress" only in a subordinate manner, they have devoted a considerable space to the Poem of De Guileville, the more readily as it is on this that Mr. Hill's views were principally grounded. So little is, indeed, known of our ancestors' daily life during the fourteenth century, and so welcome is any glimpse of their mental occupations or of their means of literary recreation at that remote period, that a work which enjoyed in its own day no little popularity may not, perhaps, prove wholly unacceptable to readers of the present generation ; reflecting, as it does, considerable light on the ways of thought and the occupations of by-gone times.

Yet, though apparently so well known about the period in which he lived, the Editors have failed to discover anything that can be called a biography of this once popular writer.

The following brief sketch, preserved in the “ Biographie Universelle,” is all that they have been able to meet with.

It is as follows, (vol. xix. p. 168) :—

“ Guillaume de Guilleville né à Paris vers 1295, prit l’habit de St. Bernard à l’abbaye royale de Chalis, en devient prieur, et y mourut vers 1360.

“ On a de lui : Le Romaunt des trois pèlerinages, le premier est de l’homme durant qu’est en vie, le second de l’ame séparée du corps, et le troisième de Notre Sauveur Jhésus Cbrist. Il avoue, dans le prologue, que c’est la lecture du Roman de la Rose qui lui a suggéré l’idée de son ouvrage. L’auteur suppose qu’ayant vu en songe la représentation de la Jerusalem Céleste il a conçu un vif desir de contempler en réalité une ville si remplie de merveilles.”

But though they have not found any fuller description of De Guileville, they have met with some notices of those who translated or profited by his work, which may not be uninteresting to their readers.

And first, of “ Dan John Lydgate,” (whose translation of the first “ Pelerinage ” of De Guileville will be found in the Appendix to this volume,) there is a curious record in the Harl. MSS. 4826. 1. to which allusion is made below, (see fol. 9.) This the Editors have thought it worth while to print in extenso as follows :—

“ John Lidgat, borne at Lidgat in Suffolke, was a Monk of ye order of St. Benet in ye famous Abbey of St. Edmundes Bury, so yt showeth Joseph Pamphilus was mistaken in his Cronicke, reckoning him among ye Augustin fryers. After hee had for a tyme frequented the Scooles of England and made a fayre Progresse in Learning, beeing desirous to acquaynt himself with ye manners and Language of strangers, he visited ye famous Univerfitye of Paris in France, and Padua in Italy, where he learned ye language of both nations, and studyed diligently in either Academy ; thus having well furnished himselfe with experience of ye worlde, umility, and learned disscipline, he returned into his Country, and opened a Schoole of Humanity for Noble-mannes Children : and although he were most expert in neare all the sciences yet in the favour of youth and to instruct them in good artes, manners, and virtues hee spent his tyme wholly in those inferiour studyes. Hee was not only an excellent Poet and eloquent Rhetorician, but an expert Mathematician and subtil Philosopher, and a good Divine. Hee was a great ornament of ye English tounge, imitating therein our Chaucer. To this end hee used to reade Dante ye Italian, Alan ye French Poet, and such like, which hee diligently translated into English—gleaning heer and there ye elegancys of other touns and enriching these with his owne. He wrote both in English and Latin, as well Prose as Verse, sundry treatises, many in number, excellent for learning, and among them these present—hee dyed about ye '60 yeare of his age, Anno Dm. 1440, (for Pamphilus is decieved in prolonging his lyfe to the yeare 1482,) Henry the Sixt, then raigning king of England and France, unto whom hee dedicateth his books—hee was interred in ye church of ye monastery of Bury, (now defaced,) where it is reported this Epitaph to have been engraven on his monument :—

Mortuus seculo, superis superstes
Hâc jacet Lidgat tumulatus urnâ
Qui fecit quondam celebris Britannæ Fama Poësis.

Dead to ye worlde yet living in ye skyes
The learned Lidgate heere entombed lyes
Who whylom was assumed for to bee
The honour of our Englishe Poefye.”

With regard to the life and writings of John Bunyan, they are so well known as to require little explanation here—yet the Editors cannot refrain from quoting the following eloquent passages from Cheever's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress, which have, naturally, attracted much attention in the New World. They seem to echo back the sentiments of gratitude felt in America for the benefits of that Christian Liberty, the planting of which was in so great a measure due to the Pilgrim Fathers, one of whom expresses himself in the following words :—" As we cannot but account it an extraordinary blessing of God in directing our course for these parts, after we came out of our native country, for that we had the happiness to be possessed of the comforts we receive by the benefit of one of the most pleasant, most healthful, and most fruitful parts of the world."

" The education of Bunyan," says Dr. Cheever, " was an education for eternity, under the power of the Bible and the schooling of the Holy Spirit. This is all that the pilgrims in this world really need to make them good, great, powerful ; he has given an account of his own conversion, and life—especially of the workings of the grace of God, and the guidance of his Providence—in a little work entitled ' Grace Abounding to the Chief of Sinners.' It is powerfully written, though with extreme and studied plainness ; and almost all the material obtained and worked into various shapes by his various biographers was gained in that book. In it you see at every step the work of the Divine Artist on one of the most precious living stones that ever His wisdom and mercy selected in this world to shine in the glory of His living temple. Nay, to lay aside every figure but that employed by the Holy Spirit, you see the refiner's fire, and the crucible, and the gold in it ; and the Heavenly Refiner Himself sitting by it, and bending over it, and carefully removing the dross, and tempering the heat, and watching and waiting for His own perfect image. How beautiful, how sacred, how solemn, how interesting, how thrilling the process !

" You follow with intense interest the movements of Bunyan's soul. You seem to see a lonely bark driving across the ocean in a hurricane. By the flashes of the lightning you can just discern her through the darkness, plunging and labouring fearfully in the midnight tempest, and you think that all is lost ; but then again you behold her in the quiet sunshine ; or the moon and the stars look down upon her, as the wind breathes softly ; or in a fresh or favourable gale she flies across the fleeing waters. Now it is clouds, and rain, and hail, and rattling thunder-storms, coming down as sudden almost as the lightning ; and now again her white sails glitter in heaven's light, like an albatross in the spotless horizon. The last glimpse you catch of her, she is gloriously entering the harbour, the haven of eternal rest ; yea, you see her like a star that in the morning of eternity dies into the light of heaven. Can there be anything more interesting than thus to follow the perilous course of an immortal soul from danger to safety, from conflict to victory, from temptation to triumph, from suffering to blessedness, from the City of Destruction to the City of God?"—CHEEVER's Lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress.

In conclusion, the Editors beg to express their sense of the kindness they have received from many friends during the preparation of the present work. Among these, they wish to name especially, Edward Levien, Esq. M.A., F.S.A., of the British Museum, through whose valuable assistance the following selection and arrangement of Mr. Hill's MSS. have been made, and at whose suggestion some old English translations of De Guileville's Pelerinage have been added to this volume: they wish, likewise, to mention the names of W. R. Hamilton, Esq. F.S.A., J. M. Atkinson, Esq., H. Foss, Esq. and W. S. W. Vaux, Esq. M.A., F.S.A., Hon. Sec. of the Royal Society of Literature—and to offer their best thanks to many other friends who have kindly supplied them with drawings and copies of woodcuts from old and rare works.

In laying Mr. Hill's collection of papers before their readers, the Editors would fain believe that the result of his many years' assiduous labour will not be wholly thrown away, but that some few ears of corn may be gleaned from them, according to the saying of Chaucer:—

“ For out of the olde feldis as men faieth Cometh all this new corne fro yere to yere
And out of olde bokis in gode faieth Comith all this newe science that men lere.”

LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS.

Frances Lady Albemarle
 Miss Joanna Alexander
 The Lady Marian Alford, 6 copies
 The Miss Allens, 2 copies
 Antonius Ameuney, Esq.
 Tyssen Amhurst, Esq.
 Mrs. Amhurst
 Mrs. Andrews
 F. R. Atkinson, Esq. 5 copies
 Henry Atkinson, Esq.
 Edward Atkinson, Esq.
 Miss Atkinson
 Miss Elizabeth Atkinson
 Miss Eliza Atkinson
 Miss Ashton
 Lady Astley
 Mrs. Hugo Astley
 The Lady Aveland
 J. Barkworth, Esq.
 Mrs. Harold Barkworth
 Mrs. Barlow
 Miss Elizabeth Barnett, 2 copies
 Mrs. R. Barton
 Miss Bentinck
 Mademoiselle Bertini
 Newell Birch, Esq.
 Miss Birch
 Dowager Lady Blackett
 David Blane, Esq.
 Thomas Law Blane, Esq.
 Lt.-Col. Robert Blane, C.B., 2 copies
 Mrs. Robert Blane
 Rev. Henry Blane
 Capt. George Blane, R.N.
 Sir John Boileau, Bart., V.P.R.S.L., 3 copies

Christian Boode, Esq.
 Miss Fanny Bouwens
 Miss Bowles
 Miss Bradley
 J. E. Bradshaw, Esq.
 Mrs. Bradshaw
 N. Bridges, Esq.
 The Lady Bridport
 Mrs. Brigstocke
 The Lady Alicia Bristowe
 Miss Brooke
 The Earl Brownlow
 Lady Bryant
 Duke of Buccleugh, K.G.
 Miss S. Bullen
 Mrs. Burton
 Miss Burton
 Mrs. Campbell of Blytheswood
 W. Capes, Esq.
 Hon. Mary Chetwynd
 Mrs. Walbanke Childers
 The Marquis of Cholmondeley
 The Marchioness of Cholmondeley
 Miss Clephane
 Col. F. Clinton
 Hon. Mrs. Clinton
 Patrick Colquhoun, LL.D., M.R.S.L.
 Mrs. Colquhoun
 Miss Colquhoun
 Sir William Cooke, Bart.
 Mrs. Cooke
 Bolton Corney, Esq. M.R.S.L.
 Miss Cotes
 J. Coverdale, Esq.
 The Viscountess Cranley

The Lord Cranworth	Henry Fols, Esq. 6 copies
The Lady Cranworth	Miss Fols, 3 copies
Miss Croker	Augustus W. Franks, Esq. Dir. S. A.
Miss Currie	Mrs. Charles Franks
Hon. Adalbert Cust	Mrs. Lynedoch Gardiner
Hon. and Rev. Richard Cust	Mrs. Garforth
Lt.-Col. Hon. Peregrine Cust, 3 copies	William Gaussen, Esq.
Maj.-Gen. Hon Sir Edward Cust, K. C. H.	Mrs. Armytage Gaussen
The Lady Elizabeth Cust	Mrs. Gibbons
The Lady Caroline Cust	The Countess of Glasgow
The Lady Amelia Cust	Mrs. Glegg
The Lady Anna Maria Cust	Miss Glennie
Hon. Mrs. Cust	A. Goldsmid, Esq. 2 copies
Hon. Miss Cust, 5 copies	Capt. A. Gordon
Hon. Mrs. William Cust, 3 copies	Miss Gordon
Hon. Lady Cust	The Duchess of Grafton
Capt. Henry Cust	Miss Greathed
Mrs. Henry Cust	Miss Emily Greathed
Miss Charlotte Cust	Mrs. Grosvenor
Capt. William Purey Cust, 3 copies	Augustus Guest, LL. D., M. R. S. L.
Rev. Arthur Percival Cust	Mrs. Collingwood Hall
Lady Dalrymple	William R. Hamilton, Esq. F. R. S., V. P. S. L.
Mrs. Dalrymple	Charles Hamilton, Esq.
Countess Dowager of Darnley	Mrs. Anthony Hamilton
The Countess of Dartmouth	Lady Hanbury
The Lady Elizabeth Dawson	Rev. William Harnes
The Lady Charlotte Denison	Lt.-Col. Haygarth, S. F. Guards
F. H. Dickinson, Esq.	Rev. George Heathcote
Thomas J. Dixon, Esq.	J. Hegan, Esq.
Miss Dixon	Frederick Hendriks, Esq.
Miss Douglas	Edward Herford, Esq.
Mrs. Frederick Drummond	Mrs. Herford
The Lord Bishop of Durham	Rev. Charles Hildyard
Mrs. Charles Egerton	Rev. Dr. Hodges
Miss Elliot	John Hogg, Esq. M. R. S. L.
Hon. Harriet Ellis	Wentworth Holworthy, Esq.
Hon. Charlotte Ellis	Miss Hornby
Mrs. Emeris	Mrs. James Hunt
Miss Ewbank	J. Hunt, Esq. M. R. S. L.
The Marchioness of Exeter, 2 copies	Edmund Hurt, Esq.
Mrs. Ferguson	The Lord Bishop of Jamaica
Hon. Mrs. Finch	Miss Sarah Johnson
Miss Finch, 2 copies	Mrs. Bence Jones
Miss Charlotte Finch, 2 copies	Walter Scott Seton Karr, Esq.
Miss Fitz-Hugh	Mrs. Seton Karr
Lady Flower	Mrs. Henry King

List of Subscribers.

xv

The Lady Louisa Legge, 2 copies
The Lady Caroline Legge
The Lady Mary Legge
The Lady Anne Legge
Col. Hon. Arthur Legge
Hon. Mrs. Arthur Legge
John Leven, Esq. 2 copies
Edward Leven, Esq. M.A., F.S.A.
W. Watkiss Lloyd, Esq. M.R.S.L.
Willoughby Loudon, Esq.
Mrs. Lumley
Miss Luxmore
Miss Lyndsay
Lady Macdonald
Mrs. Macleod of Macleod
Miss Macleod of Macleod, 2 copies
Mrs. W. D. Mackenzie
Miss Mansfield, 2 copies
Miss Marshall
Sir William Middleton, Bart.
Hon. Lady Middleton, 3 copies
Mrs. Osbaldeston Mitford
Admiral Mitford
Mrs. Mitford
Rev. Edward Moore
The Lady Harriet Moore
Miss Morier
Mrs. Mumbee
The Lady Georgiana Needham
The Lady Caroline Neeld
Mrs. Nepean
Miss Newman
Thomas Newnham, Esq.
Mrs. William Newnham
Mrs. John Newnham
Rev. Frederick Neville
Madame de Norman
Frederick Ouvry, Esq. F.S.A., M.R.S.L.
Mrs. Horsley Palmer, 3 copies
Rev. Dr. Parkinson
Hon. Mrs. Parnell
F. P. Payne, Esq. 2 copies
Mrs. Pemberton
Dr. Pettigrew
Col. Pinney, M.P.
Miss Pinney

The Duke of Portland
Mrs. Henry Rich
Miss Ricketts
Rev. John B. Riddell
Mrs. John B. Riddell
Baroness de Robeck
Miss Mary Robins
Lady Ross
The Lord John Scott
The Lady John Scott
Mrs. Hugh Seymour
Miss Catherine Sinclair
Miss Sitwell
George Skipworth, Esq. 2 copies
Miss Skipworth
Miss Susan Skipworth
Lady Smith
G. A. Smith, Esq. M.R.S.L.
George Smith, Esq. LL.D., M.R.S.L.
Miss Sneyd
Charles H. Sotheby, Esq.
Lt.-Col. Sotheby, C.B.
Capt. Edward Sotheby, R.N.
The Miss Sothebys
Miss Harriet Sotheby
The Bishop Spencer
G. Squibb, Esq. M.R.S.L.
Rev. Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, M.A.,
M.R.S.L., &c.
Mrs. Stanley
Mrs. Cowell Stepney
Miss Stevenson
Mrs. Richard Stopford
The Lady Stratford de Redcliffe
The Lady James Stuart
Miss Stuart
Hon. Mrs. Sugden
Miss Mary Sullivan
Mrs. Richard Sutton, 2 copies
Lady Tarleton
Rev. Patrick Mitford Taylor
J. G. Teed, Esq. Q.C., M.R.S.L.
The Marchioness of Thomond
Capt. Thrufton, R.N.
W. Tite, Esq. M.P., F.R.S., M.R.S.L.
J. Tollemache, Esq. M.P.

List of Subscribers.

Mrs. Tollemache	Rev. Horatio Westmacott
W. Tooke, Esq. Tr. R.S.L.	Miss Eliza Westmacott
Mrs. Torrance	Miss Wilbraham
W. Twopeny, Esq. 2 copies	The Lady Willoughby De Eresby
Rev. Edward Turner	Rev. Edmund Wills
Mrs. Uppleby	Charles Wood, Esq.
William S. W. Vaux, Esq. M.A., F.S.A.,	Rev. William Wright
Hon. Sec. R.S.L.	The Lord Wrottesley, Pres. R. S.
Mrs. Wainwright	The Lady Wrottesley
Hon. Miss Waldegrave	Hon. Miss Wrottesley
Miss Walmsley	Mrs. Griffith Wynne
Mrs. Warrender	Simon Yorke, Esq.
Miss Welch	Mrs. Yorke
Mrs. Western	Miss Young

The booke of the pylgrymage of man.

Le Pelerinage de l'Homme and the Pilgrim's Progress.

FOR the better understanding why Bunyan was led to choose the allegorical mode of writing, we should bear in mind that a taste for this kind of composition had prevailed for more than three centuries before he wrote, and that the most favourite literature of his own time appeared in the form of emblems and allegory. Early in the thirteenth century, before the time of Dante, the Norman "trouvères" had produced their Epics on "La Voie de Paradis"—"La Voie d'Humilité"—"Le Pelerinage de l'Homme"—"Le Songe d'Enfer," (from which Dante's "Inferno" was evidently derived,) all written under the similitude of a dream; and in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries their admirers and imitators in this country made them familiar to the English reader through the medium of translations. This species of composition had its origin in the monasteries, and became the religious literature of the common people, in opposition to the chivalresque compositions of the troubadours, and was popular beyond conception.

De Guileville and Bunyan both drew and embellished their compositions from the same sources.

1. From the Scriptures, as appears from their numerous marginal references to them.

The primary source of all the Dreams and Pilgrimages to the Celestial Jerusalem is to be found in the Vision of St. John in the Apocalypse:—

"And there came unto me one of the seven Angels. . . . And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. . . . And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are faved shall walk in the light of it."—Rev. xxi. 10, 11, 23, 24.

Of this origin Guillaume de Guileville furnishes us with sufficient evidence by quoting this very chapter in his description of the holy city, calling the "jasper" a "carbuncle;" and in the succeeding passage he places a precious carbuncle at the top of the pilgrim's staff, to enlighten him on his way, and says, "Le hault pommel est Jezu Christ."—Pel. de l'Homme, f. xxvii.

Philip, in his Life of Bunyan, mentions that "one Sabbath, whilst in prison, it was Bunyan's turn to expound the Scriptures, and he found himself empty, spiritless, and barren."

"Providentially, it so fell out at last," says he, "that I cast my eye upon the 11th verse of the 21st chapter of the Revelations; upon which, when I had considered a while, methought I perceived something of the jasper¹ in whose light you there find that this Holy City is said to come and descend."

2. From chivalrous literature;—witness the numerous adventures and combats with giants, dragons, goblins, sieges of castles, &c. De Guileville acknowledges that he founded his plan on the (dream) of the "Romance of the Rose;" and Bunyan knew, like his predecessors, the still lingering taste of the people for romantic history and adventure, and built his allegory on the plan of the Gothic romance,—a form so pleasing to our forefathers,—and thus introduced giants, lions, monsters, demons, and enchantments, into his edifice, which were familiar to him in the old chap-books. Great-heart was a perfect knight for the defence of the weak and feeble-minded.

* A red herring.

3. From the traditional literature of the people. De Guileville intersperses his poem with popular expressions, to suit it to the taste of the public, such as "harengfor,"^a &c.; and Bunyan's description of Great-heart's combat with the giants, Despair, Grin, Maul, and Slaygood, may evidently be traced to the chap-books,² the Gestes of Guy of Warwick, &c.

In his treatise on the Parable of Dives and Lazarus, Bunyan represents Dives as replying thus to Abraham:—"They have Moses and the prophets, let them hear them.' This is the thing (to be short), My brethren are unbelievers, and do not regard the word of God. I knew it by myself, for when I was in the world it was so with me. The Scriptures, thought I then, what are they? A dead letter, a little ink and paper, of three or four shillings price. Alack! what is Scripture? Give me a ballad, a news book, George on horseback, or Bevis of Southampton. Give me some book that teaches curious Arts, that tells old Fables."—BUNYAN'S Genius and Writings, by the REV. ROBERT PHILIP.

The very mention of these ballads and chap-books of George on horseback, and ¹ Hampole, in his Poem entitled "The Pricke of Conscience," describing the Holy City, calls it a beryl.

² These were short story-books which were hawked about the country; the word "chap" being used in our modern word "chapman," and derived from the German kaufen, "to purchase."

Bevis of Southampton, and the habits of Bunyan's early life, prove how familiar this class of old literature was to him as well as to his readers.

But with regard to the originality of such works, it may be stated, as a general principle, that the faculty of invention is necessary to all who by means of their productions in art, science, or literature, would wish not only to inform, but to amuse those who come in contact with their works. In what that faculty consists, however, is a matter which is not perhaps so universally known as it should be.

"Invention has ever been esteemed the highest and most distinguishing attribute of man, as that in which 'human power shows likest to divine : ' though not creative, but founded on previous acquisitions, it is originative, and seems to consist in the faculty of discovering and developing novel combinations, extending the boundaries of knowledge, and opening fresh sources of intellectual enjoyment. This is the true promise of Genius—the great privilege and characteristic of Bacon, Shakespeare, Newton, &c. (Milton, Bunyan, &c.) The painter must be indebted to the poet or the historian for his theme ; but the invention of the picture, as a whole, must be as much his own as if it had altogether proceeded from his own conception."—Lectures on Painting, (Royal Academy.) Vide Athenæum, Feb. 25, 1843.

Mr. Eastlake, in speaking of those who imagine that the excellence of art or of writing in former ages depended for their excellence or originality on some technical advantages which have been lost, says, "Such persons forget that materials and processes are to the painter's art what notes are to the musician, or letters to the author. The secret lies in their combination ; and it was that combination which made Handel, and Hayden, and Beethoven, and Mozart—as it made Shakespeare, or Milton, or Raphael, or Titian, or Rembrandt—superior to all others in their respective departments."

EASTLAKE on Oil Painting. Athenæum, Jan. 15, 1848.

"There n'is no newe guise that it n'as old."

The Knight's Tale, CHAUCER.

"For vnder a coloure, a truth may arise,
As was the guise, in olde antiquitye,
Of the poetes olde, a tale to furmise
To cloke the trouthe, of their infirmitye,
Or yet on ioye to haue moralitye."

Pastime of Pleasure, HAWES.

"Les abeilles pillulent de ça, et de là, les fleurs ; Mais elles en font après le miel, qui est tout leur."

MONTAIGNE.

Dryden, in the preface to his Fables, says, "Milton was the poetical son of Spenser, and Waller of Fairfax ; for we have our lineal descents and clans as well as other families." In like manner, Bunyan's pedigree may be traced, in numerous instances, to the olden religious poets of England, such as Hampole, Piers Plowman, Lydgate, and all the authors of Dreams and "Swevens,"* from the translations of De Guileville to Chaucer.

* "A dream or vision."

"Few things appear at first sight more easy, or upon trial are found more difficult, than the clear and orderly arrangement of many and varied particulars. To class them according to their several relations, so that they may follow each other in due subordination, would seem rather an exercise of patience than of intellect; to require industry, rather than a depth of thought, or an enlarged comprehension of the subject. But we soon learn how much easier it is to collect materials than to form them into a consistent whole."—GUEST'S English Rhythms, vol. ii. p. 1.

"L'étude littéraire donne un résultat donc bien des gens s'étonneront : c'est que le génie n'invente pas. Collier, muni de toutes ses preuves erudites, vous attestera que Shakespeare n'est qu'un sublime et délicat metteur en œuvre. Comme Molière et Corneille, il ne s'est jamais fait scrupule de prendre ses sujets et ses personnages partout, dans un roman, un conte, un drame, une ballade, une mauvaise comédie, une chronique rimée ou une chronique sans rimes. Les admirateurs de Shakespeare n'estiment en lui que les qualités qu'il n'a pas : c'est, disent-ils, le créateur de Lear, le créateur de Hamlet, le créateur d'Othello;—il n'a rien créé de tout cela.

"L'invention, vous dit-on de toutes parts, c'est la grande qualité, c'est le génie ! Voyons donc. Dante, Milton, Shakespeare, Bacon, Molière, Corneille, le Tasse, l'Arioste, Cervantes;—parmi les anciens Eschyle, Sophocle, Homère; ces noms semblent-ils assez grands? Et s'ils ne sont pas inventeurs, qui osera l'être? Qui marchera le front plus haut que ces hommes, proclamés par la voix populaire, par le cri des siècles et la vénération de tous, maîtres de la pensée, guides du troupeau humain, qu'ils éclairent en marchant sur les hauteurs?

"Qu'ont-ils créé? Commençons par Dante. De son temps, une tradition vulgaire a cours, moule commun, formule épique, aussi triviale que l'est aujourd'hui un vaudeville à tiroir; c'est une vision chrétienne, vue générale et mystique du triple royaume:—ici les damnés; là les bienheureux; plus loin les âmes qui expient leurs crimes dans le Purgatoire. Tout le monde s'est servi de cette forme. Le peuple ne connaît qu'elle, tant elle est usée et rebattue. Un moine, après bien d'autres moines, a décrit à son tour l'Enfer, le Paradis, et le Purgatoire. Un frère Alberic du Mont-Cassin a rimé la vision qu'il a disposée en triple entonnoir, et traitée grossièrement, lourdement et sans génie. Toute la charpente de la Comedia divina, est littéralement dans l'œuvre du frère Alberic. Dante n'a fait qu'une seule dépense, celle du génie; dans la pierre brute il a trouvé l'or.

"Ainsi des autres créateurs; Eschyle et Sophocle sont dans Homère, qui lui-même est accusé d'avoir recousu des chants plus anciens. L'ouvrage capital de Cervantes n'est qu'une parodie, par conséquent une imitation. Milton traduit de longs fragments de la Sarcothée de Masenius. (This assertion is taken from Lauder, R. H.) Molière doit ses meilleures scènes, non seulement à Plaute et aux Italiens, mais à Cyrano de Bergerac.

"Qu'estimez-vous dans Shakespeare? Est-ce le Roi Lear? Shakespeare a emprunté le roi Lear à une vieille tragédie publiée en 1594, jouée sur plusieurs théâtres: The Pitiful Chronicle of King Lear. Le fou, le roi, les deux filles, l'abdication du monarque, tout se trouve dans ce vieux drame. Ce grand homme retravaillant de mauvais drames surannés, les a rajeunis de sa verve et ranimés de sa touche puissante.

“ Les faits constitutifs du roman et du drame sont un fond matériel et commun dans lequel tout le monde va puiser. Le génie arrange et imite, étudie et approfondit, il n'invente JAMAIS.

“ Le génie consiste à mieux comprendre, à mieux pénétrer, à environner de plus de lumière ce que chacun fait superficiellement ou comprend à demi. Un des singuliers caractères de Shakespeare, c'est sa souveraine indifférence quant au sujet qu'il doit traiter. Il n'y regarde pas : l'excellent ouvrier fait tirer parti de tout. Il prend au hasard une pierre, un morceau de bois, un bloc de granit, un bloc de marbre. Peu lui importe que son prédécesseur ait fait agir et parler sur la scène un vieux roi déshérité par ses filles ; c'est un fait comme un autre, qui ne vaut ni plus ni moins. Shakespeare va trouver tout ce qu'il y a de larmes et de puissance dans l'âme de ce vieillard.

“ On court après l'invention aujourd'hui que l'originalité intime manque ; elle réside dans l'artiste, non dans les matériaux qu'il emploie. A tous les grands hommes c'est la tradition, c'est le peuple, c'est l'héritage commun des idées et des usages qui ont légué les matériaux. Ils les ont reçus tels quels ; puis ils les ont fondus, transformés, immortalisés.

“ Si ce que l'on nomme invention, n'était pas une qualité illusoïre, il faudrait estimer à bien plus haut prix que Dante le premier moine oisif qui écrit en style de carrefour la vision de Paradis et de l'Enfer ; les grossiers auteurs des canevas Italiens l'emporteraient sur Molière ; les écrivains inconnus de quelques chroniques, divisées en actes, éclipsaient Shakespeare.

“ Dans les décadences littéraires on prend pour inventeurs ceux qui, poussés par un certain ardeur de sang et une certaine fougue de paroles déplacent les mots et les images, et croient avoir fait voyager les idées. Ces gens se proclament créateurs. Montaigne, Shakespeare et Molière ne s'attribuaient d'autre mérite que celui d'étudier la nature, l'homme et le monde.

“ Le propre du génie, c'est de féconder.”—Etudes sur W. Shakespeare, &c. par Philariète Chastel, 1851, p. 88.

Evidences of the popularity of de Guileville's Dream in England.

1. The use made of it by Chaucer. Chaucer's “A, B, C,”—also entitled, “La Priere de nostre Dame ;” made, as some say, “at the request of Blanch, Duchess of Lancaster, as a prayer for her private use, being a woman in her religion very devout,”¹—has usually been considered his own composition. It is, however, a translation from De Guileville's Prayer to the Virgin, published in 1330, of which the first three stanzas are given as a specimen. Each stanza, it will be observed, begins with a letter of the alphabet, and this alphabetical order is preserved throughout.

¹ Brit. Mus. MS.

De Guileville.

TOY du monde le refuy
 Vierge glorieuse men fuy
 Tout confus car ne puis mieulx faire

A toy me tiens a toy mapuy
 Relieue moy abatu fuy
 Et vaincu par mon aduerfaire
 Et puis qua toy ont tous repaire
 Bien ie me doy vers toy retraire
 Auant que plus seuffre dennuy
 La luite nest pas neceffaire
 A moy se tu trefdebonnaire
 Ne me secours comme autrui

BIEN croy que par toy conforte
 Sera mon cuer desconforte
 Car tu es de salut la porte
 Si ie me suis tres mal porte
 Par sept larrons pechez morte
 Et foruoye par la voye torte Esperance me reconforte
 Qui a toy ennuyt me raporte
 A ce que ie soye deporté
 Ma dolente ame a toy iaporte
 Sauue la ne vault plus que morte
 En luy tout bien est avorte

CONTRE moy font grant action
 Ma vergoigne et confusion
 Que deuant toy ne doy venir
 Pour ma trop grant transgression
 Raïson de desperation
 Contre moy veulent maintenir
 Mais pource que veulx plait finir
 Deuant toy les faiz conuenir
 En faïfant replication
 Cest que ie dis appartenir
 A toy du tout et conuenir Pitie et miseration

Chaucer.

ALMIGHTIE and all-mercif
 quene
 To whom all this world fleis for succour

To have relefe of sinne of so'row oft Glorious Virgine of all flouris flour
 To the I fle confoundid in errour
 Help and releve almightie debonaire
 Have mercy of mine perillous languor
 Venquist me hath my cruill aduerfaire

BOUNTIE so fixe hath in my hert his tent
 That well I wote thou wilt my succour be

Thou canst not warnin that with gode entent
 Axith thine helpe thine hert is aye so fre
 Thou art largesse of plaine felicite
 Having and refute of quiete and rest
 So how that Thevis sevin chafing me Helpe ladie bright or that mine ship to brest

COMFORT is none but in you,
 Lady dere!
 For lo! mine sinne and mine confusioun,
 Which ought not in thin presence for to apere,
 Han taken on me a grievous actioun,
 Of veray right and disperatioun,
 And as by right they mighten well sustene
 That I were worthy mine damnatioun, Ne were it of thy mercy, blisfull Quene!

1

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11 12

13

14

15

16

17

Lidgat presenting his booke called y^e Pilgrime, unto y^e Earle of Salisbury.

J. Thomas Montacute Earle of Salisbury

2. Chaucer's evident imitation, at the end of his dream called "The Book of the Duchefs," of De Guileville's description of being awoke by the convent-bell.

De Guileville.

Ce me sembla en ce moment
Si que de lespouementement Esueille et desdormy fu
Et me trouuay si esperdu
Quauiser ie ne me pouoie
Si ia mort ou en vie iestoie
Jusqua tant que iouy sonner
Lorloge de nuyt pour leuer
Et aussi lors chantoient les cocqs
Pour quoy leuer me cuidoy lors
Mais ne peu car fuy retenu
De la grant pensee ou ie fu
Pour le myen adventureux songe
Ou quel se quelque vne menfonge
Estoit meslee ou contenue
Ou qui fust de peu de value

Chaucer.

Right thus me mett, as I you tell,
That in the castle there was a bell,
As it had smitten houres twelve,
And therewith I awoke my selve,
And found me lying in my bed,
And the book which I had read
Of Alcyone and Ceyx the King,
And of the goddeffs of Sleeping,
I found it in my hand full even ;
Thought I, this is so quaint a sweven,
That I would, by proces of time,
Fond (strive) to put this sweven in rhyme
As I can best, and that anon :
This was my sweven, now it's done.

3. To these may be added the different English translations of De Guileville, both in prose and verse, which are still existing, printed and in manuscript.

The most important of the metrical translations is that by the "venerable monk Dan John Lydgate," mentioned above as being now in the British Museum Collection of MSS., and numbered Vitellius, C. xiii. It is, however, but little known ; and, curiously enough, not even a single passage of it has been quoted by Warton. Stowe, the only writer who has alluded to it, casually mentions it, and has stated correctly the date of its translation. It was made, as Lydgate himself informs us, in 1426, by the command of [Thomas de Montacute] the Earl of Salisbury, "being bound," as he says, "to be his man."

I mene the book, "Pilgrymage de Monde," Morall of vertu, of materys ful profonde,
Maad and compyled in the Frenche tonge,
Full notable to be rad and fonge.
To every pylgreme vertuous of lyff,
The mater ys so contemplatyff
In all the book ys not lost a word,
Thys confydred full wyfly of my lord
Of Salybury, the noble manly knyght
Wych in fraunce, for the kynges ryght
In the werre hath many day contunyd.

And of the tyme playnly, and of the date,
 When I began thys booke to translate,
 Yt was a thousand by computacion
 After Cryste's incarnacion
 Ffour hundryd and nouthur far nor nere,
 The surplus over fyxe and twenty yere;
 My lord that tyme being in Parys,
 Wych gaff me charge by his dyscrete avys,
 As I feyd erst to settel myn entent
 Upon thys booke to be dyllygent, &c.

The following passage is curious, in a literary point of view, for the conclusive evidence it contains of the poem, quoted above, entitled "A, B, C, or a Prayer to the Virgin," having been previously translated by "hys mayster, Chaucer," which Lydgate says "he will ympen after hys translacion (as he is bounde of dette), in order that it may enlumine:"—

"Thys lytyl booke, rude of making
 With some clause of hys wryting."

He then proceeds as follows:—

And touchynge the translacion
 Off thys noble oryson, Whylom, yff I shal nat feyne^a
 The noble poete of Breteyne,
 My mayster Chaucer in hys tyme,
 Affter the ffrenche he dyde yt tyme,
 Word by word, as in substance,
 Ryght as yt ys ymad in France,
 Ffull devoutly in sentence,
 In worschepe and in reverence
 Off that noble hevenly quene, Bothe moder and a mayde clene,
 And sythe he dyde yt undertake
 Ffor to translate it ffor hyr sake
 I pray this, that ys the beste
 Ffor to bring hys soule at reste
 That he may through hyr¹ — prayer
 Above the starrys bright —
 Of hyr mercy and hyr grace,
 Apere afore hyr sonys face

^a "Not flatter."

¹ The missing words are quite illegible, from the MS. having been partially destroyed by fire.

With ſeyntys ever for a memorye,
Eternally to regene in glorye,
And ffor memorye of that poete,
Wyth al hys rethorykes ſwete,
That was the ffyrſte in any age
That amendede our langage;
Therefore, as I am bounde off dette
In thys book I wyl hym ſette,
And ympen thys oryſon
After hys tranſlacion,
My purpoſe to determyne
That yt ſhal enlumyne
Thys lytyl book rud off makyng
Wyth ſome claufe off hys wryting,
And as he made this oryſon,
Off full devout entencion,
And by maner of a prayere
Ryght ſo I wyl yt ſetten here,
That men may know and pleynty ſe
Off our ladye the A, B, C.

In the MS. Vitellius, C. xiii., there is a blank left for the inſertion of the above-mentioned "A, B, C," or oraſon to the Virgin; but it is bound up with a volume of Lydgate's Poems, which belonged to Humphrey Wanley, and now in the Grammar School of Coventry, under the title of "A Preiour to our Ladye, made by Geffreie Chaucer, after the order of the 'A, B, C.'"—Vide Bernard's Cat. Tom. ii. p. 23.

In the official catalogue of the Cotton MS., in folio, this MS. of "The Pilgrim," tranſlated from De Guileville by Lydgate, is deſcribed as "A Poem in old Engliſh verſe, containing Directions for a Pilgrimage to Jeruſalem. It appears to have been written in French, by a monk of Calais (for Chaliz), and tranſlated into Engliſh about the year 1426." Thus the compiler of the catalogue leaves others in the ſame ignorance of the names of both author and tranſlator as that in which he himſelf was, although the introduction to the tranſlation contains three diſtinct proofs of its being the production of Lydgate. 1. The mention of his mayſter Chaucer as the "poete of Breteyne;" giving him the ſame title he had already uſed in the thirty-fourth chapter of his "Life of the Virgin Mary," where he calls him "poete of Breteyne, who uſed to amende and correſte the wronge traces of my rude penne." 2. His teſtimony that Chaucer tranſlated the "Hymn to the Virgin." And 3. That he was commanded to tranſlate "The Pilgrim" by the Earl of Salisbury, which is confirmed by an ancient illuminated drawing—probably coeval—of Lydgate preſenting this poem, called "The Pilgrim," to the Earl. See Harl. MS. 4826.

Notwithſtanding all this, and though Warton quotes Stowe's words, where he speaks of "Lydgate's 'Pilgrimage of the World'" (the very title given to it by Lydgate), written "by the commaundement of the Earle of Salisburie, 1426," it is surprising that both he and Sharon Turner should have been so utterly unconscious of its existence as never to have quoted a line! At the head of it are the following verses:—

" Qui peregrinaris hunc per librum docearis, Quæ bona vel dubia sit fugienda via."

" O worldly folk avyse yow be tymes, Wych in thys lyff ben but a pylgrymage,
Lyk straungerys far fro yowr contre, Unfranchysed and voyde of libertie."

The popularity of De Guileville's works is further proved by the numerous English translations, both in verse and prose, still contained in our public libraries, which it has cost great pains to discover, as the catalogues are almost universally mute upon the subject. These translations influenced our literature down to the time of the Great Rebellion, which formed, as it were, a chasm between our ancient and modern literature.

A list of these, both in print and MS., is herewith given, in the hope that it may prove interesting to those who are disposed to cultivate a more intimate acquaintance with De Guileville and his works.

MSS.

Among the Cecil MSS. at Hatfield is "Ye Dreame of the 'Pilgrimage of ye Soule,' translated out of Frensch into Englysch, with some addicions, ye yere of our Lord M iii. 'and prittene.' (1413). This is a folio MS. on vellum, adorned with many humourously designed illuminations."—W. READER, Gent. Mag. Nov. 1843. p. 488.

Cod. MSS. of Samuel Pepys.—The Pilgrim, Moral Discourse, illustrated with drawings, and written originally about the year 1330, fol.—Vide Bernard's Cat. Lib. MSS. Angliæ et Hiberniæ. Folio, Oxford, 1697, V. 2. p 209, No. 6797, Art. 78.

Cod. MSS. penes R. P. Joannem Morum, Ep. Norvicensem.—"The Pilgrim, or the Pilgrimage of Man in this World;" wherein the author sets forth the wretchedness of Man's Life without Grace. Written 1331.—Vide ibid. p. 390, Art 64.

In the British Museum.—"Grace Dieu, or a dreame of the pilgrimage of the Soule." On vellum. Written in 1413. Egerton, No. 615.—"The Pilgrimage to Jerusalem," on vellum, imperfect at the beginning; xv. Cent. Cotton Coll. Vitellius, C. xiii.—"The Pilgrim," on vellum, imperfect; xiv. Cent. Cotton Coll. Tiberius, A. vii.

At Oxford.—"The Pilgrimage of the Sowle," in the library of University Coll. —"The Dream of the pilgrimage of the soul, translated out of French into Englysh," in the library of Corpus Christi Coll.

At Cambridge.—At Caius College, "The Dreame of the Pilgrimage of the Soul, translated out of French, 1414."

In the Public Library.—"The romaunce of the monk of Chailis, of the pilgrimage

of the lyfe of the manhode, which ys maad for good pylgryme that in this world swich way wole holde that he go to good havene, and that he have of hevene the joye; taken upon the 'Romaunce of the Rose,' whereinne the art of love is al enclosed." Imperfect. On vellum. xv. Cent. This copy has the following Colophon:—

"Here endeth the Romaunce by the Monk of the Cisteaux, in France; of the pilgrymage of the lyffe of the manhood, which is made for good pilgrymes yt^a in this world such waye wol holde that w^d goo to good haven, and that they have hevens Ioye, ymagined after the manner of the Romans of the Roos,^b which al parte of love doth cloose, translated oute of frenshe in to Englyshe by oon that cleped him Johan the preeſte, preyeth for the maker, the translatour, the wryter, the reders hereof and thys waye goon or in wille to goo."^c—Vide J. O. Halliwell's MS. Rarities of the University of Cambridge, 1841, p. 166.

^a That.

^b Romance of the Rose.

^c Either go this way or with to go.

Printed Books.

"The Pylgremage of the Sowle: translated oute of Frenshe in to Englyshe." Printed by W. Caxton, at Westminster, 1483. An imperfect copy. This edition is in the library of Lord Spencer, at Althorp Hall, Northamptonshire.—Vide Dibdin's "Bibliotheca Spenceriana," vol. iv. p. 263.

A fine copy (but wanting last leaf) was purchased at the sale of White Knight's Library for £152 5s. by Mr. Evans.

According to Herbert, (the Antiquary,) copies were apparently in the libraries of Sir Hans Sloane, Mr. Brandon, and his own.

Vide for specimens, &c., Dibdin's Edition of "Herbert's Ames' Typographical Antiquities." (London, 1810.)

"The Peregrination of Mannes Lyfe," by Guillaume de Guileville, appears from the following lines of Skelton—

"Off mannes lyfe the perigrinacion He dyde translate, interprete, and discloſe"— to have been translated by him. John Skelton was poet laureate to Henry VIII., but the translation referred to above has not come down to us. Warton, however, mentions it in his History of English Poetry, vol. ii. f. 489, in (Ed. 1844.)

The following French Editions may also be mentioned as existing in the Brit. Mus.:—

Le Romant des trois Pelerinaiges, 4to. Goth. Bartholde et Jehan Petit, Paris. Sans date.

Le Pelerinage de l'homme—avec des figures en bois. Fol. Goth. Anthoine Verard. Paris. Sans date.

"Le premier de l'homme durant quest en vie."

"Le second de lame separée du corps."

"Le tiers de notre Seigneur Jesus Christ en forme de monoteſſeron."

The following are examples of the illustrations contained in the Delft and Harlem editions:—

Facsimile of the engraving representing the Pilgrim turning his back on the City of Destruction, and looking up towards the Celestial City, as reflected in a mirrour.

Delft Edition.

Facsimile of the engraving representing the meeting of the Pilgrim with the Celestial Lady.

Facsimile of the engraving representing the passage of the Pilgrim to the castle of the Celestial Lady, through water.

The Royal Library at the Hague contains a manuscript on vellum, of about the end of the xivth century; it is adorned with twenty-three miniatures. In the Prologue it is entitled, "die pelgrimage von der menschliker creaturen;" and it is said there that it was translated from the Walschen in the vlaemschen tale; which was composed by a holy monk in a monastery called Chaalie.

In the first dialogue of gracie gods with the Pilgrim it is said that gracie founded her house ouer XIII. en XXX. (1330) iuer; and in that part of the 1st Book where redene (reason) reads her commission to rude verstantesse, this commission has been given in the year M. CCC. en XXXI.

The Dutch Edition is an extract from the MS. translation in prose; it was never printed in extenso.

The celestial lady who appears to the Pilgrim is, through the whole edition, called gracie gods.

In none of the woodcuts is the Pilgrim represented in armour or fighting with drawn sword; in one only he occurs in armour, which directly after he pulls off, not being able to bear it any longer. In the before-named woodcut the Pilgrim has no sword at all, and he is not in presence of any enemy. He is leaning on the Palster;^a only gracie gods is with him.

^a A Pilgrim's staff.

In the Royal Library at the Hague exists another edition of this story. It is in folio size, printed in double columns. Except some very little difference in spelling, the Delft edition has been faithfully copied in the Haerlem edition. One little part only is omitted in the edition of 1498; in the last chapter of the Haerlem edition the Pilgrim having breathed his last, the author awakes from his dream; this part is left out in the Delft edition. The woodcuts are the same in both editions.

The following attempt to translate a portion, C. 1., of the "Boeck van den Pelgrim," printed at Delft, in Holland, in 1498, was made by the King's Interpreter; imperfect as it is, it will be sufficient to show that the Dutch translator took it from De Guileville's Poem of the "Pélerinage de l'homme durant queft en Vie, ou le Pélerinage de la Vie humaine," which was afterwards done into prose by S. Gallopez, and printed at Lyons by Math. Hufy in 1485.

"Then she took a pourpoint or doublet made in a wonderful manner: * * * * * Will you know how it is called? Men call it Patience, which is made to bear pains and to begin great strides without murmurings or Anger, but to be therefore more thankful.

"The king Jesus had this pourpoint on, for thy sake, as he hung on the Cross, and was covered with this Doublet which is Patience, for he suffered all patiently.

"Thus it is well to remark that it is good, since that the great King had it on, thus should ye strive. Then take it, and put it on I advise, for of all arms it behoves first to know how to put it on, whoever will arm himself rightly."

In order, however, still further to show the concurrence—at least of ideas, if not of diction—between De Guileville and Bunyan, the following passages may be quoted from amongst many others of a similar nature:—

DE GUILEVILLE. 1330.

Pour qui a bon ſens cōprendre
Tout ce que ce livre contient Moralement le fault entendre Et non pas litteralement
Car l'auteur la fait cointement Tenant forme parabolique
Pour aguifer l'entendement
A tout chaſcun ſcientifique.

Prologue, Ed. de B. et J. Petit, imp. par Berth. Runboldt, s. d.

une foiz
Lan mil trois cēs dix p trois foiz
Ung ſonge vy bien merueilleux
Lequel ainſi com ſommeilleux Jeſcripz a mon reveillement.

Description of the Holy City.

Il neſt nulle cite ſi belle^a
Ne qui de rien lui ſoit pareille Maſſon en fut ſeulement dieu
Nul autre ne feroit tel lieu
Car les chemins et les alees
Dor fin eſtoient toutes paucees
En hault aſſis ſon fundement^b Eſtoit et ſon maſſonnement

BUNYAN. 1678.

I have uſed ſimilitudes.—Hof. xii. 10.

Motto in title-page.

The Prophets uſed much by Metaphor
To ſet forth Truth: Yea, who ſo conſiders Chriſt, his Apoſtles too, ſhall plainly ſee
That Truth to this day in ſuch Mantles be.

* * * * * Holy Writ
Is every where ſo full of all theſe things
Dark figures, allegories yet there ſprings
From that ſame book, that luſtre and thoſe rays

Of Light, that turns our darkeſt nights to days

BUNYAN's Apology for his book.

Nay, I have leave, (Examples too, and that from them who have

God better pleaſed by their words and ways
Than any man that breatheth now-a-days)
Thus to expreſs my mind, thus to declare Things unto thee that excellenteſt are.

Ibid.

As I walked through the wilderneſs of this world, I alighted on a certain place where was a den, and laid me down in that place to ſleep: and as I ſlept, I dreamed a dream.

Chriſtian's deſcription of the Holy City to Pliable.

"There is an endleſs kingdom to be inhabited, and everlaſting life to be given us, that we may inhabit that kingdom for ever.

"There are crowns of glory to be given us, and garments that will make us ſhine like the ſun in the firmament of heaven.

"There ſhall be no more crying nor

^a Heb. xi. 10.

^b Rev. xi. 12,
18, 19.

Le Pelerinage de l'Homme

DE GUILLEVILLE. 1330.

De vives pierres fait estoit
 Et hault mur entour la clooit
 Dessus lequels anges estoient
 Qui tous temps le guet y faisoient
 Et gardoient tresbien que lentree
 Nullement fust abandonnee Fors aux pelerins seulement
 Qui y venoient deuotement^a Leans auoit moult de mansions
 De lieux et habitacions
 Illec estoit toute lieffe
 Et toute joye fans tristesse

^a John xiv. 2.^b Gen. iii. 24.

* * * * *

Cherubin portier en estoit^b
 Qui ung glaive forby tenoit
 Bien emolu a deux taillans
 Tout versatile et tournoyans
 Dont il se scauoit bien aider
 Nest aucun tant se sceust targer
 Qui par la porte passer peust
 Que occis ou naure¹ ne fust Mesmement car executeurs^c
 Y auoit et tirans crueulx
 Qui tres durs tourmens pourpensoient
 Et tous les plus griefz quilz pouoient Moult y eut grant occision
 De pelerins de grant renom

^c Acts xiv. 22.

BUNYAN. 1678.

sorrow, for He that is owner of the place will wipe away all tears from our eyes.

"There we shall be with Cherubim and Seraphim, creatures that will dazzle your eyes to look on them. There, also, you shall meet with thousands and tens of thousands that have gone before us to that place. In a word, there we shall see the elders with their golden crowns; there we shall see the Holy Virgins with their golden harps; there we shall see men that by the world were cut in pieces, burned in flames, eaten of beasts, drowned in the seas, for the love that they bare to the Lord of the place, clothed with immortality as a garment."

¹ Worldly-wise-man tempts Christian not to go up to the Wicket-gate, because of the dangers of the way, assuring him he is like to meet with wearisomeness, painfulness, hunger, perils, nakedness, swords, lions, dragons, darkness, and, in a word, death, and what not!

Christian arrived at the Wicket-gate (which he had left to follow Worldly-wise-man's counsel) saw written over it, "Knock, and it shall be opened unto you;" he knocked, therefore, more than once or twice. At last there came a grave person to the gate, named Good-will, who asked who was there? and whence he came? and what he would have?

Christian "Here is a poor hardened sinner; I come from the City of Destruction, but am going to Mount Zion, that I may be delivered from the wrath to come. I would therefore, Sir, since I am informed that by this gate is the way thither, know if you are willing to let me in."

"I am willing with all my heart," said he; and with that he opened the gate.

So when Christian was stepping in, the other gave him a pull. Then said Christian, "What means that?" The other told him, "A little distance from this gate there is erected a strong castle, of which Beelzebub is the Captain; from thence both he and they that are with him shoot arrows at them that come up to this gate, if haply they may die before they enter in." Then said Christian, "I rejoice and tremble."

* * * * *
 Puis vne grant merueille vy
 De grans maistres et prelaz qui Aux crenaulx tout en hault estoient
 Monstrans semblant quilz enseignoient
 Plusieurs des pelerins daual
 Qui a grant peine et grant trauail
 Selon ce quapris ilz estoient
 Aeles pour voler leur faisoient
 Par eles de bon exemplaire
 Telles comme ilz les deuoient faire
 Que ces grans maistres leur monstroient Monstrant que moult chier les auoient

* * * * *
 ¶ Puis vy en vng autre coste^a Dessus les murs de la cite Vaillans hommes auctorizables
 Mais quant a moy peu congnoissables

* * * * *
 Entre lesquelz aduis me fu
 Que sainct benoist y recongneu

* * * * *
 ¶ La endroit sainct francoys aussi

* * * * *
 Moult dautres ie vy sur les murs

* * * * *
 Mais tant dire vueil briefuement
 Que nul nentroit en la cite^b
 Par quelque part quaye compte
 Qui de hors les murs ne laissast
 Lefcharpe ou bourdon que portast
 Acomply lors estoit leur veage
 Et fait tout leur pelerinaige

Before we proceed to give an analysis of, and to trace a parallel between, the two works of Bunyan and De Guileville, we must premise that the allegory, which becomes in the hands of the former a fascinating narrative, full of vitality and Christian doctrine, is in the work of the latter only a cold and lifeless dialogue between abstract and unembodied qualities.

^a "Lecharpe et le bourdon" represent the Certificate of pilgrimage. The latter is thus explained in the Dict. de l'Académie Française, "Sorte de long bâton qui est fait au tour, avec un ornement au haut, en forme de pomme, et que les Pèlerins portent ordinairement dans leurs voyages."

* * * * *
 "Now, upon the bank of the river, on the other side, they saw the two shining men again, who there waited for them.

"Now, you must note that the city stood upon a mighty hill; but the pilgrims went up that hill with ease, because they had these two men to lift them up by the arms, &c.

"Then I saw in my dream that the shining men bid me call at the gate, the which, when they did, some one from above looked over the gate: to wit, Enoch, Moses, and Elijah, to whom it was said, These pilgrims are come from the city of Destruction for the love that they bare to the King of this place; and then the pilgrims gave in unto them each man his Certificate,¹ which they had received in the beginning."

^a Rev. vii. 9.

^b Rev. xxii. 14.

^a Rev. xxi. 2—9.²
Heb. xi. 10, 33
—39.

^b Matt. xi. 12;
xix. 24; v. 3.
Ecclef. v. 15.

^c f. 3, b. Appendix, f. iv. "And I roos vp."

^d Ecclef. xlv. 8.
Baruch v. 2.

The poem of De Guileville opens by informing his readers that, in the year 1330, being then a monk in the monastery of Chaliz, he had a dream, in which he saw afar off, as if reflected in a mirror, similar to the "shining light" of Evangelist,¹ the celestial city of Jerusalem, and felt himself excited to go thither on a pilgrimage.^a He dwells on the wondrous beauty of its construction, on the elegance of its mansions, on the character of its inhabitants, and their happiness and blessedness after their trials and sufferings (even such a description as Christian gives to his unstable friend Pliable on their setting out); and particularly points out the little wicket-gate, which he recognizes for the one described by our Lord, as being so strait, that it was easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter in thereat.^b "Homme vestu n'y pouvait passer." He then bethinks himself that a staff and a scrip will be necessary for his journey, like those in the hands of the pilgrims he sees before him on his way. Anxious to supply himself with them, he rushes out of his house, weeping and lamenting to know how he shall obtain them in the manner Christian is described as doing, when he left home and made as if he would run. "I dreamed," says Bunyan, "and behold I saw a man clothed with rags, with his face from his own house, a book in his hand, &c. I looked, and saw him open the book and read therein; and as he read he wept and trembled, &c." His prototype thus introduces his pilgrim:—^c

Lors men yffy de ma maison^d

* * * *

Bourdon commancay a querir
Et escharpe qui neccessaire
Mestoit a ce quauoye a faire ¶ Ainsi comment querant aloye Et en pleurant me guermentoye
Ou ce bourdon peusse trouuer
Et celle escarpe pour porter³
Une dame de grant beaulte
Et de *tresgrant nobilite*⁴
Je rencontray droit en ma voye
De qui au cueur me vint grant ioye
Fille sembloit dun empereur
Dun roy ou dun tresgrant feigneur
Vestement auoir dor batu
Et cincte estoit dun verd tiffu
Qui tout au long ce me sembloit

¹ In Bunyan.

² The texts referred to in the margin are those given by De Guileville in his marginal references. Extracts from the MSS. descriptive of the Holy City, &c. will be found in the Appendix.

³ See Woodcut I.

⁴ Christian describes Evangelist as "a man that appeared to me to be a very great and honourable person."

I

II

Le parrain du pelerin

III

Le ioumencel et ioumencelle

IV

De charboucles seme estoit
 Sur le sein auoit ung fermail
 Dor fin et dessus vng esmail
 Sur lequel vng estoille auoit
 Qui grant clarte par tout rendoit
 Ung coulon lui yffoit du sain Quelle applanioit sur sa main Son chef dor couronne estoit ^a
 Et tout en entour lenuironnoit
 Grant foison destoilles luisans Moult fut certes cil bien puiffans
 Qui telle lui auoit donnee
 Et qui ainfi lauait paree Moult courtoise et de douce chere ^b
 Me fut grandement car premiere
 Me faulua en demandant
 Pourquoi nauoie meilleur semblant ¹
 Et pour quel cause ie pleuroye
 Et saucune defaulte auoie

Adonc ie fuz comme surpris
 Pource que pas nauoye appris
 Que dame de si grant atour
 Daignast vers moy faire vng seul tour ^c
 Fors et seullement pour autant
 Que cil qui a bonte plus grant
 Plus a en foy dhumilite
 Grant douceur et benignite
 Car plus a le pommier de pommes
 Plus bas sencline vers les hommes
 Et ne scay signe de bonte
 Si grant comme est humilite
 Qui ne porte ceste banier
 Na vertu ne bonte entiere

^a Ezek. xvi. 12.

^b Song of Sol. iv.
3.

^c Ecclus. iii. 18.

The same gracious salutation is made by Evangelist to Christian whilst he is weeping. "I looked then," says Bunyan, "and saw a man named Evangelist coming to him, who asked, 'Wherefore dost thou cry?' 'Because I fear,' replies Christian, 'that this burden that is upon my back will sink me lower than the grave, and I shall fall into Tophet.'"

A similar reply is made by De Guileville's pilgrim (taken by De Guileville from ¹ Being, like Christian, in a bad plight.

Ephesians iv. 17—24; for he, like Bunyan, built his poem on the Scriptures, and quoted his texts in the margin), who complains to Gracedieu when he feels that the burden of his sins and the weight of his body prevent him from rising to the skies:—

^a f. 39, b. Appendix, f. v.
“Certys quoth I.”

A larmoyer et a plorer^a Commencay et a fouspirer
A dire helas
Adonc me dist grace quas tu
Pourquoy te desconfortes tu
Certes dis je pource je pleure
Car de present en moins dune heure
Jay perdu trestoute ma joye

* * * * *
Ainsi comme ung cinge acroche
A ung bloqueau et atache
Lequel en hault ne peut monter
Que tost ne faille reualer
Ainsi *meist ung bloquel pesant*¹
Le corps et ung retenail grant
Il me rabat quant vueil voler
Et retire quant vueil monter^b

^b Eph. iv. 17—24.

* * * * *
Le corps corumpu et pesant
Griefue lame et opprime tant
Que la tient en chetiuoison
Et luy fait perdre sa faison
Par quoy merueille ce nest pas
Sen plorant je dy dieux helas
Desconforte moult grandement
Je suis et doy estre dolent

The Pilgrim having said to Gracedieu that he is in search of the heavenly city, which he had had a sight of in a glafs, but that his grief was he had no means of getting thither, she replies, if his search be sincere, she will be his guide; having been sent into that country by the Lord of the way to guide halt and lame, but willing pilgrims in the way of salvation, to relieve the fallen, to support the lame, to strengthen the doubtful, and to open the eyes of the blind. Gracedieu then proceeds to warn him that he is going to travel through a country beset with difficulties, trials, enemies, and adversities; and, as he will doubtless often be in trouble and stand in need of help, he must always call upon her.

^c f. 4, Appendix, f. vi. “To pylgrymes.”
John i. 9.
2 Sam. xxii. 7.
Titus ii. 11.

Je suis celle que tu dois querre^c

¹ This bloquel pesant is the burden on the back of Christian.

Quant tu vas en eſtrange terre Jenlumine les non voyans
Et donne force aux recreans Je relieue les trebuchiez
Et radrece les foruoyez
Je ſuis grace dieu appelle
Par le coulou blanc deſignee

She bids him keep in view the ſtraight and only entrance,¹ that wicket-gate, which none ever entered till they had put of their own clothing²—that is, mortality; and then only by her grace and favour.

The Pilgrim humbly thanks her, and prays that ſhe will guide and ſupport him on his journey. Gracedieu then kindly leads him towards her houſe—a magnificent building, which had been founded 1330 years ago.

Lors elle me priſt en celle heure ^a
Et toſt me mena ſans demeure
Vers une maiſon quelle auoit
Qui ſienne eſtoit comme diſoit
Et la me diſt que trouueroie
Tout ce de quoy meſtier auroie Laquel maiſon auoit fundee
Selon ſon dit et maſſonnee
Treize cens et trente ans auoit
Comme bien lui en ſouuenoit ¶ Ceſte maiſon volentiers vy
Et a la veoir fuz eſbay
Car toute en hault en lair pendoit
Et entre terre et ciel eſtoit
Tout ainſi que ſel fuſt venue
Du ciel haultain eſt deſcendue
Il y auoit clochiers et tours
Et moult eſtoient beaulx ſes atours Ainſi comme fuſt vng lieu royal Et ſur tous autres principal ^b Deuant vne riuere auoit
Ou paſſaige ne nef nauoit

^a “ Tho hyr lyſt.”
Appendix, f. vi.
Pſalm cxii. 3.

^b Eccluf. xxvi.
16.

This is the church of Chriſt, for the expounding of the Scriptures; it is, in fact, the

¹ As Evangelist ſays to Chriſtian, “ Keep that light in your eye.”

² Bunyan ſays, “ They had left their mortal garments behind them in the river; for though they went in with them, they came out without them.”

Interpreter's house of Bunyan. But the Pilgrim is alarmed at finding himself stopped by a stream without bridge or ferry, and desponds.¹

"Dolent en fu et fort pleuroie."

This stream, in De Guileville's dream, represents the water of baptism² at the entrance to the church, but is transformed by Bunyan (agreeably to his views) into the Slough of Despond, the duration of which he gives as 'above these sixteen hundred years'—the age of the Christian church in his time.

Gracedieu expostulates with the Pilgrim on his want of firmness before so small an obstacle, when he has so many greater waters to pass through before arriving at the celestial city. He then inquires why it should be necessary to bathe in this water? To which she replies, that, as sin came into the world, it is necessary to be cleansed from it—that water is an emblem of purification, and that a King has passed through this Jordan. Then a person appears who helps him out to the other side,³ and, being purified, he is admitted into the house of Grace. Here a number of pilgrims are assembled, and Moses—or the Law, the Legality of Bunyan—in despite of Gracedieu,⁴ who reproves him, offers them many things for their relief on the journey—such as ointments for curing their wounds after their conflicts with their enemies.

Moses is succeeded by personifications⁵ of Reason or Prudence, and Nature, corresponding to Worldly-wise-man in Bunyan, who is 'obstinate'⁶ and railing. These are followed by Sapience or Discretion, by Repentance or Piety, and by *Charity*⁷ or Love; the latter presenting to her auditory the last Will and Testament of Him who, for love of mankind, died upon the Cross; which runs thus:—

"I, who am the way, the truth, and the life, make this my last testament, and voluntarily bequeath my soul to my Father, to be in his safe keeping, whilst I descend into hell to release those who love me. My body I bequeath to be interred in the sepulchre Joseph has made, and to the pilgrims who keep in the right way, in order that they may be nourished by it, and helped on their way. My heart I leave to those who love and keep my commandments. To John I leave the care of my mother, and my blood I leave for the salvation of all those who had compassion on me."

A cross is here represented with the letters P A X, at the angles.

Ces trois lettres font assaouir^b
Qua trois choses doit auoir paix
Icelluy a qui est laisse
Ce beau ioyel et octroye

^a John xiv. 6, 21.
¹ Cor. xi. 24.
John xix. 27.
Matt. xxvi. 28.

^b f. 18. Appendix, f. xx. "And evermore."
John xiv. 27.
² Cor. xiii. 11.

¹ Christian also desponds at the sight of the lions, and thought of going back, till Watchful, the porter, cried unto him, saying, "Is thy strength so small? Fear not the lions, for they are chained."

² See Woodcuts II. and III.; and cf. the account of Baptism, Appendix, f. vii.

³ As Help comes to the assistance of Christian at the Slough of Despond.

⁴ "Law and Grace" is a favourite work of Bunyan's.

⁵ See Woodcuts V. VI. VII. and VIII.; Appendix, f. xi—xx.

⁶ Obstinate accompanies Christian and Pliable over the plains, and rails at them both.

⁷ Discretion, Piety, Prudence, and Charity inhabit the palace called Beautiful, and entertain Christian.

V

VI

VII

VIII

Ceſt que premierement en hault
 Du X eſt mis en eſchauffaut
 Par qui ie ſuis ſignifie
 Briefuement et en ſobriete
 Il doit auoir parfaicte paix ^a En tel maniere que tous faiz Commis et faiz oultre mon gre
 Si ſoient reſtraints et amende
 Apres en langlet bas affis
 Du A eſt colloque et mis
 Par qui lame de foy entent Doit auoir paix entierement ^b
 A celle fin que point ny morde Sindereſis ne ne remorde
 Apres encor a ſon prochain
 Qui par le P mis primerain
 Eſt entendu doit paix auoir
 A quoy le doit moult eſmouuoir
 Le meſme degre ou il eſt
 Car point plus hault ne plus pas neſt
 Tous deux en vng degre les mis ^c
 Quant au commencement les fis
 Tous ſont mortelz et lun et lautre
 Vers et fiens eſt lun ſi eſt lautre
 Rien ny vault cuer felon ne fier
 Ne riens orgueil ne riens danger
 Tous paſſeront par vng pertuis ^d
 Groz et menuz grans et petis
 Or facent tant que ce ioyel ^e
 Ne perdent pas par leur orgueil
 A ſon prouchain chaſcun ait paix
 Si fera le patron parfaiz
 Tel que doit eſtre par raiſon
 Ceſt vng ſeing de tabellion ^f
 Duquel doiuent eſtre ſignez
Tous bons teſtamens et marquez
 Et de ce ſeing publicquement
 Ay ie ce preſent teſtament
Signe et tabellionne
 Puis que lent eſcript charite
Paix ay donne a toute gent
 Or la garde chaſcun deuement

^a Rom. xiv. 17.

^b Pfalm lv. 18.

^c Heb. xii. 14.

^d Strait gate.

^e Rom. xii. 18.

^f Seal of engroſſment.

"Now I saw in my dream," says Bunyan, "that the highway, up which Christian was to go, was fenced on either side with a wall, and that wall was called Salvation. Up this way did burdened Christian run till he came to a place on which stood a cross, and a little below, in the bottom, a sepulchre; and, just as he came up with the cross, his burden loosed from his shoulders, and fell from his back into the mouth of the sepulchre. Then was Christian glad and lightsome, and said, with a merry heart, 'He hath given me rest by his sorrow, and life by his death.'"

And it is here that Christian sees the 'three shining ones,' who saluted him with "Peace be to thee;" and the first said to him, "Thy sins be forgiven thee" (here is peace and pardon); the second stripped him of his rags; and the third set a mark on his forehead, and gave him a roll (the above testament) with a seal upon it, which he bid him look on as he ran, and that he should give it in at the celestial gate.

In the dream of De Guileville, as soon as Charity had made an end of her oration, many of the pilgrims appeared very desirous of accepting her proffered conditions, and addressed themselves first to her, and afterwards to Repentance. But he also perceived many unfortunate ones amongst them, who, secretly concealing themselves from the eye of Charity, and eluding the observation of Repentance, addressed themselves exclusively to Moses for relief, to whom he granted it without exception. But it happened ill for them; for, as soon as they had left him, they looked as if they had come out of a miry slough, like Pliable, 'bedaubed with dirt,' or had been 'dipped into a sack of charcoal.' They were black, filthy, vile, says De Guileville—enbordiz et encore tous familleux; but when they were tired of this relief they returned trembling, and begging to accompany the other pilgrims. So Christian, after having 'turned out of his way, to go to Mr. Legality's house for help,' from his brethren, stands trembling before Evangelist; and Bunyan, from his familiar knowledge and love of Scripture, from the resources of his genius, and his acquaintance with the human heart, has wrought out a striking picture of the insufficiency of the law to take off the burden of sin. Hence, when Evangelist meets Christian, and shows him that no man can be justified by the deeds of the Law, that Mr. Legality was a cheat, &c. Christian, like the trembling pilgrims, falls down at Evangelist's feet as dead, and prays to be put again into the right way.

"Yffys du boubier ou dun noir sac a charbonnier;"

The monk of Chaliz afterwards introduces a long allegorical description of the Eucharist, and the Pilgrim expresses a wish to be furnished with some of this spiritual provision, to support him on his journey, and eagerly desires to proceed. Gracedieu replies, that she has everything necessary for him, and for his journey, in her palace;¹ but that he must wait, before he sets out, until she has shown him the curiosities contained therein, or, as Bunyan has it, 'the rarities of the place;' and that afterwards he shall receive a staff and a scrip, with provisions to put into the latter. She then leads him into a cabinet, where she points out to him a great collection of precious jewels;

¹ The Church, or House of the Interpreter.

IX

X

XI

XII

(and here Bunyan must have revelled in allegory to his heart's content, for every article is described with the same mystic and symbolic precision as in Durand's "Rationale of the Church.") The first things shown to him are the scrip and staff, which Gracedieu takes out of a casket of curious workmanship. The scrip, or scarf, is made of green filk, with fringe of the same colour sprinkled with scarlet spots, like gouts of blood.

"These,"^a said Gracedieu, "are things necessary for thy journey: look well to them, for thou wilt stand in need of them. The name of the scrip is faith, and in it thou wilt carry thy provisions; and if thou wouldst know more of its virtues, consult the prophet Habakkuk, and St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, chap. x. where thou wilt learn that the just indeed live by faith."¹

^a f. 23, b. App. f. xxi. "Thys lady goodly."

¶ Voy cy lescharpe et le bourdon Que promis tay ie ten foiz don Mestier tauront en ce voyage
Garde les si feras que faige
Lescharpe si est foy nommee
Sans laquelle nulle iournee
Tu ne feras ia qui rien vaille
Car tout ton pain et ta vitaille
Doys en tous temps dedans auoir^b
Et se tu veulx cecy sauoir
Par autre dit que par le myen
Sainct paul ten informera bien
Qui racompte quil est escript Que iuste de lescharpe vit^c
Lequel mot en abacuh prift
Qui ou second chapitre gift
* * * * *
Le sang esmeut et achoifonne^d
De prendre cuer et faire ainsy^e Que les glorieulx martirs qui Trop mieulx amerent a respondre
Leur sang pour leur foy fort deffendre^f
Quaucunement leur feust ostee
Pour sa vertu quaauoient goustee

^b Rom. x. 4—6.

^c Hab. ii. 4.
Rom. i. 17.

^d f. xxiii. b.
^e Heb. xi. 33.

^f Eph. ii. 8.

¹ See Woodcut IX.

Gracedieu further enlarges on the scrip by saying, "It is true that in olden time these scrips were plain and simple in their form, and without these emblems; for then it sufficed that faith should be pure and holy. But since many errors and heresies have crept in, and each foolishly would believe of his own fashion, (some being Arians, some Pelagians, and others such as I will not name,) it became necessary to establish a unity of belief, and these twelve clochettes will serve to keep thy faith awake."

Bunyan tells us that the shepherds, from the top of Mount Error, showed the pilgrims the bodies of Hymeneus and Philetus dashed to pieces at the foot of the hill.

Cest pour te donner exemplaire
 Que se tu trouues qui souffraire
 La te vueille point ne oster
 Auant occire et decouper
 Te laiffes plus tost que ten voyes
 Descharpey car trop y perdroies

This allocution of Gracedieu to the Pilgrim, with an allusion to the 'glorious martyrs,' as an example for him to follow, corresponds with the exhortation of Evangelist to Christian and Faithful, before they arrive at the town of Vanity:—

"My sons, you have heard, in the words of the truth of the gospel, 'that you must, through many tribulations, enter into the kingdom of heaven;' and again, that 'in every city bonds and afflictions abide you:' and, therefore, you cannot expect that you should go long on your pilgrimage without them, in some sort or other. You have found something of the truth of these testimonies upon you already, and more will immediately follow; for now, as you see, you are almost out of this wilderness, and, therefore, you will soon come to a town, that you will, by-and-by, see before you; and in that town you will be hardly beset with enemies, who will strain hard that they may kill you: and be you sure, that one or both of you must seal the testimony, which you hold, with blood: but 'be you faithful unto death, and the King will give you a crown of life.' He that shall die there, although his death will be unnatural, and his pain, perhaps, great, he will yet have the better of his fellow; not only because he will be arrived at the Celestial City soonest, but because he will escape many miseries that the other will meet with on his journey. But when you are come to the town, and shall find fulfilled what I have here related, then remember your friend, and 'quit yourselves like men!'"¹ The same counsel is given by Gracedieu in the above passage to the

¹ Ridley thus addresses Latimer at the stake:—

"Be of good heart, brother, for God will either assuage the fury of the flame, or else strengthen us to abide it."

"And now the chariot of fire, which was to transport the martyrs to glory, began to be illuminated. A blazing faggot was placed at Ridley's feet, upon which Latimer addressed him, with a degree of composure which passes all understanding, in those memorable words of almost prophetic import:—'Be of good comfort, Master Ridley, and play the man; we shall this day light such a candle in England, as I trust shall never be put out.'"—Lives of Eminent Christians by the Rev. R. B. HONE.

Similarly, in a stanza under the woodcut of the trial of Faithful in the 33rd edition, (see plate f. 33), Bunyan writes:—

"Now Faithful, play the Man, speak for thy God;
 Fear not the wicked's malice, nor their rod:
 Speak boldly, man, the truth is on thy side,
 Die for it, and to life in triumph ride."

Again, Bp. Ridley says to Latimer in prison:—

"Hitherto, you see, good father, how I have, in words only, made (as it were) a flourish before the fight which I shortly look after; and how I have begun to prepare certain kinds of weapons to fight against the adversaries of Christ; and to muse with myself how the darts of the old enemy may be borne

Pilgrim, and she says that he is to serve as an example, and to suffer himself rather to be killed and cut in pieces, than lose his scrip, or his faith. And this counsel is followed by the fellow-traveller of Christian, when he is condemned, in the town of Vanity, "to be put to the most cruel death that could be invented. They, therefore, brought him out to do with him according to their law: and first they scourged him, then they buffeted him, then they lanced his flesh with knives; after that they stoned him with stones, then pricked him with their swords; and, last of all, they burned him to ashes at the stake!" Thus came Faithful to his end.

"Now," continues Bunyan, "I saw in my dream that Christian went not forth (from the town of Vanity) alone; for there was one whose name was Hopeful, who joined himself unto him; and entering into a brotherly covenant, told him that he would be his companion. Thus one died to make testimony to the truth, and another rises out of his ashes to be a companion with Christian."

In like manner, the second companion of De Guileville's Pèlerin, given to him by Gracedieu, is the Pilgrim's staff, whose name is Hope; on which she bids him lean with confidence, telling him it will sustain him in all slippery places.

This staff is light, strong, and straight, and is made of Shittim wood, which is imperishable; and on the top is reflected the whole country, as far as the Celestial City itself—the whole illuminated by a brilliant carbuncle.

Or entens bien de ce bourdon ^a
 Qui est bon en toute saison
 Car trebucher ne peut celluy
 Qui fermement s'appuye a lui
 A lui appuyer te deuras
 A tous maux pas ou tu iras Esperance le dois nommer

* * * * *
 Le hault pommel est Jesu Crist ^b
 Qui est comme la lectre dit
 Ung miroer du tout sans taiche
 La ou chascun peut voir sa face
 Ou tout le monde se mirer
 Doit toujours

The Pilgrim now proposes to proceed on his journey; but he is told by Gracedieu that he must first be armed at all points, in order that he may be proof against the many off, and after what sort I may smite him again with the sword of the Spirit. I learn also hereby to be in use with armour, and to essay how I can go armed."

This language may be compared with Christian's fight with Apollyon, and many of the expressions of these two martyrs remind us of Christian and Faithful in the "Pilgrim's Progress," and show us also how intimate Bunyan was with Fox's "Book of Martyrs."

^a f. 27. App. f. xxii. "But fyrst tak." Gen. xxxii. 10. Prov. xxiii. 17. 18.

^b John xii. 16. Wisdom vii. 26.

^a Isaiah xi. 5.
Luke xii. 35.

^b f. 30, b. App.
f. xxiii. "Come ner."
¹ Kings xxii. 30.
Numbers xxxii.
29
Zech. viii. 9.

^c Rom. vi. 13;
viii. 18.
Heb. x. 36; xi.
34.
Rev. ii. 11; xiii.
10.

^d f. 31.

^e Isaiah liii. 7.

^f Psalm cxxix. 3.

dangers which he will meet with by the way. She puts on him the girdle of Righteousness,^a to keep him in the path of rectitude and temperance; and also furnishes him with a writing, or scroll,¹ (containing the credo written in Latin rhymes,) which she enjoins him to consult to take the film from his eyes.

We now come to the prototype of the armoury contained in the 'stately palace called Beautiful,' which Bunyan thus describes:—"The next day they had him into the armoury, where they showed him all manner of furniture, which the Lord had provided for pilgrims—as sword, shield, helmet, breast-plate, all-prayer, and shoes that would not wear out. And there was here enough of this to barnes out as many men, for the service of their Lord, as there be stars in the heaven for multitude." Armour^c of precisely the same description is earnestly recommended by Gracedieu to the Pilgrim.

Or regarde dist-elle hault^b
A ceste perche fil te fault
Pour chercher armes loing aller
Assez en voys pour bien tarmer
La font heaulmes et gambesons
Gorgerettes et haubergeons
Targes et quanque faillir peut
A cil quil deffendre se veult

She first presents to him a 'gambeson' or coat of mail called Patience, saying, "This was wrought by the great armourer above, who, without tools, created the sun and starry host; it is of such excellent temper that it will be proof against all kinds of adversity and tribulation, and will withstand to the death. It was worn by our Lord on the Cross—by holy martyrs since—and will resist, like an anvil, all the strokes of thine enemies."^c

Ce gambezon vestit iesus^d
Quant pour toy fut en croix pendus
Sur luy fut poinctoye et poinct
Et mesurey a son droict poinct
Tout souffrit et tout endura^e
Nul mot ne dist ne ne sonna
Enclume se monstra et fu
A chascun coup dont fut feru
Et lors fut sur luy monnoyee
Ta rançon batue et forgee
Dessus son doz la monnoyerent^f
Les crueulx feures et forgerent
Par quoy tu doys bien supposer
Puis que le roy sen vout armer

¹ Christian's roll, which he loses in the arbour.

² See Woodcut X.

Quil est bon et bien esprouue
Et grant loz est den estre arme

"And now put on this helmet, which is Temperance, to defend the eyes from folly and vanity, the ears from murmurings and detraction, and the heart from evil imaginings. It is the helmet called, by St. Paul, the helmet of Salvation."

¶ Le heaulme comme dois fauoir^a Est atemperance de veoir
Descouter aussi de odorier
Choses qui te puissent greuer
Car sicomme cœuure et refraint
Le heaulme tes sens et refraint
Tout ainssi atemperance fert
De garder loeit que trop ouuert
Ne soit ne trop abandonne
A folie et a vanite
Car se loeilliere assez nestoit
Estroicte entrer dedans pourroit
Telle sagete^b qui occire
Pourroit (the arrows of Satan.)

"This 'gorgette' is called Sobriety,^c which is akin to Temperance, and is to prevent gluttony. These gauntlets^d are the third part of Temperance, and their name is Continence: therefore, take example of St. Bernard. So be sure to arm thyself carefully, as did formerly Saint Guillaume, Abbot of Chaliz, who knew how to fast even at a feast.¹

"But the best weapon of all is this sword, for if thou hadst no other armour this would suffice.^e Its name is Justice, (Righteousness,) and a better blade was never forged or girded on the loins—and it far exceeds those of an Ogier, a Rowland, or an Oliver."

Par son nom iustice elle est dicte^f
Entre les autres plus eslite
Et la meilleur quonques ceignist
Roi ne conte ne ne tenist Ducque ne fut lespée ogier
Celle de roland noliuier
Si vertueuse ne puissant
Si noble ne si excellent

"This sword thou must wear to defend thyself against those who attack thee, and against thy hidden enemies in particular—for there is nothing worse, or more perilous, than a concealed foe. And here, also, is the scabbard, the true name of ^a f. 32. App. f. xxiii. "Thys helm."

Isaiah lix. 17.
Eph. vi. 14—17.
Prov. iv. 23.
Psal. xxxv. 2;
cxix. 37.
Job xl. 24.

^b Dart.

^c 1 Pet. v. 8.
Wisdom ix. 11.

^d Psal. cxliv. 1.
James iv. 8.

^e Ezek. xxxviii.
4.
Psal. xxxv. 27.
Prov. x. 2.
1 Mac. iii. 3, 58.
Ecclus. xiii. 13.

^f f. 32, b. App. f. xxiii. "Take a swerJ."

¹ De Guileville's object in adding this last paragraph seems to be to introduce the names of St. Bernard and St. Guillaume, the former as the founder of his monastery, the latter, probably, as his ancestor.

^a John xviii. 11.
Pl. cxxxvi. 23,
24.
Luke xviii. 10.

^b Prov. xxxi. 17.
Joshua xiv. 11.
Song of Sol. iv.
4.

^c 1 Kings iv. 29;
xi. 4.
Prov. ix. 6.

^d 2 Cor. vi. 7.
Hab. iii. 19.
1 Pet. ii. 5; iv.
12.
Rom. xii. 16.
Gen. viii. 21.

^e 1 Sam. xvii.
38—50.

which is Humility, for it must conceal thy justice or vengeance.^a Remember the Publican and the Pharisee. The name of the girdle is Perseverance, and of the buckle, Constancy, &c. But forget not the shield^b—for without this no one can defend himself well—it serves to protect both the warrior and his arms. The name of this is 'Prudence,' (Wisdom or Understanding,) and it was once worn by King Solomon; but when he lost it he lost his honour along with it, and, in comparison with it, all his other golden shields^c were not worth a red herring:—

(Toutes ses autres targes dor Et ses escus ung haren for Des onques puis ne luy valurent.)

"And now," continues Gracedieu, "it is time to arm." So the Pilgrim proceeds to accoutre himself; but when he is panoplied^d he complains that the armour is too heavy for him, pleads his ignorance of the use of arms, and implores her to allow him to follow the example of David, who found himself obliged to put off the armour he had essayed to wear before going to combat the Philistine. She consents: but warns him that he has not, like David, the courage to encounter the enemy armed only with his staff and five stones in a scrip.^e

Gracedieu then leaves the Pilgrim, and, in her absence, he sorely laments his having refused her good counsel. During his lamentations she returns, and, severely rebuking him for his want of energy, when there is no enemy to combat, she presents him with the identical pebbles that David had in his scrip when he fought against Goliath.¹

In Bunyan's narrative, the damsels of the Palace called Beautiful "showed Christian some of the engines with which some of the Lord's servants had done wonderful things. They showed him Moses' rod; the hammer and nails with which Jael slew Sisera; the pitchers, trumpets, and lamps, too, with which Gideon put to flight the armies of Midian. Then they showed him the ox's goad, wherewith Shamgar slew six hundred men. They showed him also the jaw-bone with which Samson did such mighty feats. They showed him, moreover, the sling and stone with which David slew Goliath of Gath."

Bunyan shows these treasures to Christian, but wisely prefers sending him on his pilgrimage armed at all points. De Guilleville allows his pilgrim to go forth armed merely, like David, with a shepherd's sling; and then, by a less happy allegory, furnishes him with an attendant, (called Memory,)² who is to carry and produce the armour which he had refused to wear, whenever he found himself in the presence of an enemy.

Having thus provided him with the necessary means of defence, she tells him it is now time to apply himself to his journey, as soon as he has stored his scrip with a

¹ The 1st stone, called "Memoire de la mort Jesu," is "un Rubiz."

2nd. "Remembrance de la Dame, une pierre blanche, La Blancheur."

3rd. "Sainte eternelle Gloire, un Saphir azure."

4th. "Memoire du feu d'Enfer, Abefton, couleur de fer."

5th. "La Sainte Escripiture, qui en soi a telle verdure. Cest une esmerald moult fine."

² See Woodcut XI. Appendix, f. xxiii.

supply of the bread (of life) necessary for his support during his long journey, and then accompanies him on the way, giving him good counsel on the best mode of defence against his enemies, and bids him be of good courage.

Gracedieu also exhorts the Pilgrim to be vigilant, and constantly on his guard against an enemy of which he seems to be the least aware, though he carries that enemy about with him—that is, his own carnal desires. She also explains to him the conflict, which never ends, between the flesh and the spirit—shows him the best means of combatting the carnal will by fasting and prayer, and counsels him, with the Apostle, to take upon himself the whole armour of God, that he may be able to withstand in the evil day. Thus she exhorts him to perseverance in the great struggle; and to impress this more powerfully on his mind, she calls his attention to an ant-hill which lies in their path, and shows him (as the Interpreter does in the Pilgrim's Progress) that, like the persevering ant, which rolls, again and again, down the slippery sand-hill, but, ultimately, attains her object, so he, by struggling against temptations, will conquer, if he will only persevere: whilst, to the indolent, the wise man says, “Go to the ant, thou sluggard, and learn wisdom.”¹

Bunyan says:—“Then Christian began to go forward; but Discretion, Piety, Charity, and Prudence, would accompany him down to the foot of the hill. Then said Christian, ‘As it was difficult coming up, so, so far as I can see, it is dangerous going down.’ ‘Yes,’ said Prudence, ‘so it is; for it is a hard thing for a man to go down into the valley of Humiliation, as thou art now, and to catch no slip by the way; therefore,’ said they, ‘are we come out to accompany thee down the hill.’ So he began to go down, but very warily, yet he caught a slip or two.

“Then I saw in my dream that these good companions, when Christian was gone down to the bottom of the hill, gave him a loaf of bread, a bottle of wine, and a cluster of raisins; and then he went on his way.

“But now (in this valley of Humiliation) poor Christian was hard put to it, for he had gone but a little way before he espied a foul fiend coming over the field to meet him; his name is Apollyon. . . . Then Apollyon said, Prepare thyself to die; for I swear, by my infernal den (he speaks as the fiend of hell of Wicliff), thou shalt go no further; here will I spill thy soul; and with that he threw a flaming dart at his breast, but Christian caught it on his shield. Then did Christian draw, for he saw it was time to bestir him, (that is, to assail the enemy, as Wicliff says;) and Apollyon as fast made at him, throwing darts as thick as hail!”

Wicliff, who, doubtless, was a favourite author of Bunyan's, has also left us, in a tract entitled “The Lantern of Light,” a description of an armoury, the phraseology of which seems likely to have suggested many of the peculiar expressions which occur in the description of Christian's battle with Apollyon.

“Peace-makers in Christ's Church move men to the rest that Christ promised to his disciples when He was here among them, John xi. 4. Christ hath left among us peace, that we should love together, hating sin and loving virtue; for thus He loved us. For there is no charity unless sin be hated and plucked up by the roots, in us and all others.

¹ “Whilst Christian,” says Bunyan, “was sleeping in the arbour, one comes and awakes him, saying, ‘Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways, and be wise.’”

"These peace-makers stand armed at all pieces, for dread of their enemies, in the armour of Jesus Christ, that Paul teaches, Eph. vi. Six armours, the Apostle rehearſes, that arm the ſoul, five to defend, the ſixth to aſſail. 1. A girdle of chaſtity, (truth.) Take up this girdle, that ye may ſtand perfect in the peace of your ſoul, againſt all fleſhly ſtirrings. 2. An habergeon of righteouſneſs that is thickly mailed, for falſehood ſhould not enter to grieve God or man, or diſturb this true peace. 3. Leg-harneſs, (gambiere,) or ſhowing of affectionſ in the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, and then they are diſpoſed to make peace among men. Not as the world aſketh, but that they ſtand perfectly in all adverſity, with Chriſt and his Goſpel to the death-day. 4. A ſhield of faith. In this they ſhall quench all the fiend's burning darts, that are his temptations. Then may no deadly blow ſteal upon that man who hath the ſhield of true belief hanging on his heart. 5. A helm of health, (or helmet of ſalvation,) which is called truſty hope; for it bears off the ſtrokes the fiend throws at man's ſoul, with pitileſſ gins; the one is obſtination, or hardneſs of heart; the other is deſperation, or wanhope. But whoſo hath the helm of hope, though ſtrokes light on him, they ſhall in no wiſe burſt his head-piece, or ſink into his ſoul. Therefore, he liveth peaceably in hope of God's mercy. 6. Is the ſword of the ſpirit, that is God's word. With this ſword Jeſus Chriſt aſſailed the fiend of hell, when Chriſt ſaid, 'Go, Sathan;' and he fled away. For this ſword is full ſharp, and biteth on both ſides; it parteth, at a ſtroke, the ſoul from the body; and it parteth, in this life, virtue from ſin; and it ſhall part at doomsday the good from the evil. God give us grace to take this ſword, for all that take up this ſword, and ſtand in this armour, Chriſt, our Captain, bleſſeth them, and calleth them his children, Matt. v.: 'Bleſſed are the peace-makers, for they ſhall be called the ſons of God.' And Chriſt ſaith, 'Love ye your enemies, do ye well to them that hate you, and pray for your purſuers and your ſlanderers. That ye may be the ſons of your Father that is in heaven.'"

It may be obſerved that Wicliff's ſixth arm is one of offence; and it is with this "two-edged ſword" that Chriſtian (who had previously acted only on the deſenſive) aſſails, wounds, and makes Apollyon ſpread forth his dragon wings, and ſpeed himſelf away.

Spencer alſo, in the expoſition of his "Faerie Queene," refers to the ſame Epiſtle as Wicliff:—

"A faire lady (Una) in mourning weedes, riding on a white aſſe, beſeeches the Faery Queene to aſſign her a knight for the deliverance of her parents; a perſon deſires the adventure; but the lady tells him, unleſs the armour ſhe has brought would ſerve him, (that is, the armour of a Chriſtian man, ſpecified by St. Paul, Eph. vi.) that he could not ſucceed in the enterpriſe."

From this text, and the viſion of St. John in the Apocalypſe, are derived all the allegories of De Guileville, Wicliff, Spencer, &c.—down to Bunyan; and this flight

Peregrinus
Christianus
Loquitur

Iacob I.
Ecclesiast. 14.
Isaia 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Page 40.

Peregrinus
Christianus
Loquitur

Iacob I.
Ecclesiast. 14.
Isaia 40.

2 Corinth. 5.

Via veritas vita
Ioan. 14.
Math. 6.

Apocal. 6.
Apocal. 21.

1 Corinth. 15.

Apocal 21.

1 Corinth 2.

introductory exposition of De Guileville's allegory will show that it contains sufficient subject-matter, as well as personages, to have suggested to Bunyan the outline, at least, of his own.

Mr. Montgomery (in his Introductory Essay to the Pilgrim's Progress) has suggested that a print in Geoffrey Whitney's book of Emblems, published in 1586, representing a Christian pilgrim spurning the world, may have given Bunyan his first idea of his Christian pilgrim.

We cannot doubt that the popular book of emblems were great favourites of his, and we here insert the facsimile of one, (with three small prints taken from an old edition of the Pilgrim's Progress,) which is sufficient of itself, to his inventive imagination and natural love of allegory, to have excited him to write the appalling details of the Christian's progress through the Valley of the Shadow of Death.

But a parallel still stronger may be found where perhaps it would be least expected, and that is in the "Valley Perilous" of Sir John Mandeville.—See his "Voyage and Travails to Hierusalem," chap. 28.

"SPIRITALE XIANI MILITIS CERTAMEN."

The engraving of the Christian Warrior is one of those emblematic prints so constantly issued by the artists of the Low Countries at the end of the sixteenth and beginning of the seventeenth century. They were spread very generally over Europe by the book and print-sellers of Holland and Germany; and it was no unusual thing for the English book-sellers to employ these copperplates or woodcuts to illustrate the works they published. Jerome Wierix, the designer of the present engraving, was born in 1548, and passed an industrious life in the production of a large number of engravings, remarkable as well for vigour of design as for extreme elaboration of finish. His Christian Warrior is here armed in accordance with the words of St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, (chap. 6,) and is surrounded by the various dangers and temptations which hinder his progress to the New Jerusalem, seen dimly in the distance. The Spirit of God hovers over him,¹ and he treads under foot the sins of the flesh;² beside his right arm, Christ, as the "corner-stone," has crushed the head of the Serpent. The World, arrayed in attractive garb, appears before him, holding in one hand a money-bag, in the other a

¹ The dove, the token of the Holy Spirit, hovers over the head of the Christian. So, in De Guileville, this token of love is often sent to relieve the "pelerin" by Grace Dieu—like the key Christian finds in his bosom to open the gate of Doubting Castle.

² Bunyan says, "One of the wicked ones got behind him, and, whispering, suggested grievous blasphemies to him."

Diabolus assaults him with flaming darts at his breast; but Christian had a shield in his hand with which he caught them. "Then," says Bunyan, "did Christian draw—for he saw it was time to bestir him."

The World is Madame Bubble, so truly described by Standfast. (2nd Pt. p. 165.)

The Flesh is Madame Wanton, (Bunyan, p. 82;) Death denotes the valley itself.

In these and other features of the Engraving there are many points of resemblance to Bunyan.

drinking-cup, whilst cards and dice are at her feet. Behind him the Devil aims his arrows, and in front Death prepares his scythe for the inevitable blow. In the background, and in advance of his path to the city of rest, Sin awaits to obstruct him, and remorselessly thrusts forth "the worm of conscience"¹ to his view. Between the different figures in this Plate are a great number of texts of Scripture taken from the Vulgate.

It has been already suggested² that, independently of De Guileville's writings, the works also of the author of "Piers Plowman's Vision,"³ "Hampole's Pricke of Conscience," and similar old English poems, furnished to John Bunyan his idea of the "Pilgrim's Progress." It is indeed natural to suppose that this was the case, not only from the method in which the latter author treats his subject generally, as, for instance, in the personification of the vices, &c. but also from the particular way in which he introduces it to the reader, under the similitude of a dream.

In order, however, to show how close this similitude is, it will perhaps be best to quote such passages from those earlier writings which bear most closely upon the point—and the reader will thus be enabled to judge for himself as to the extent to which Bunyan was indebted to his predecessors both for the "plot" and treatment of the "Pilgrim's Progress."

The Vision of Piers Plowman, then, contains a series of visions, which the author imagines himself to have seen, while he was sleeping, after a long ramble on the Malvern hills in Worcestershire.

^a East.

^b Mine own self.

^c Happy melody uttered by the birds.

^d Reclining on an open plot of ground under a lime-tree.

Than gan I to meten a marvelouse sweuen
That I was in wildernes wyft I never where
As I beheld into the aste^a on highe to the sonne
I saw a tower on a toft rychlych ymaked
A depe dale beneth a dungeon therin
With depe diches a darcke and dreadful of fyght

* * * * *

And thus I wente wide wher walkyng myn one^b
By wilde wildernesse and by a wodes syde
Blisse of the briddes^c broughtte me a stepe
And undir a lynde upon a launde^d lened I a stounde
To lythe the layes the lovely fowles made

¹ But why must they be thought to 'scape that feel Those rods of scorpions, and those whips of steel, Which conscience shakes?—Creech's Jew.

² See supra, p. 3.

³ There has been some dispute as to who the author of Piers Plowman's Vision really was. On the whole, however, it appears almost certain that it was written by Robert Langland or Longland, a secular priest, who was born at Cledbury Mortimer, (co. Shropshire,) and was a fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. According to Bale he finished his book in 1369; and Wood says of him, "Robertus Langland, Johannes Malvernus nonnullis appellatur; fertur autem inter sui sæculi poetas maxime facetos excelluisse."—Wood's Hist. and Antiq. Univ. Oxon. l. 11, p. 107.

THE CHRISTIAN WARRIOR.

Mirthe of ire mouthes made me ther to ſlepe
 The merveilous metets^a me mette than
 That ever dremyd wyghtte in world as I wene
 A much^b man as me thoughtte and lik to my ſilve
 Com and callid me be my kinde name
 What art thou coth I tho that thou my name knoweſt
 That thou woſt wel coth he and no wyghtte better
 Wot I what thou art Thoughtte ſeide he thanne
 I have ſuwid^c thee this ſevene yere ſey thou me no rather ^a Dreams.

^b Humble.

^c Sought.

Similarly, in the 2nd Part of Pilgrim's Progreſs, Bunyan ſleeps and dreams in a wood—and he fancies an aged gentleman comes and enters into converſation with him, whoſe name is Sagacity.

Walter Maſpes, who flouriſhed in the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., in his ſatire on the miſuſed learning and corrupt ſtate of the church, entitled “Apocalypſis Goliae Episcopii,” (Harl. Lib. No. 978,) fancies in his viſion, that, as he is lying in a grove, he ſees the form of Pythagoras ſtanding before him. In like manner, Dante ſees Virgil,—and De Guileville's Pilgrim ſees Ovid.

Again,—a tranſlation of Walter Maſpes's Apoc. Goliae, written about the year 1623, opens in a ſimilar manner to that of “Piers Plowman.”

When as the ſunnes hot lamp out of the Bull Darted his burning beames unto the full
 I tooke the way to a woodes ſhady grove
 The gentle weſt winds favour for to prove Juſt at the middle of a ſummers day
 Under Joves tree as all along I lay Pythagoras his forme I ſaw ſtand by &c.

A ſimilar exordium precedes a poem which was exceedingly popular throughout the Middle Ages, from the tenth century downwards, entitled, “Debate of the Body and the Soul.”

Als I lay in a winteris nyt
 In a dronkening before the day Vor ſouth I ſau a ſelly ſyt
 A lady on a bere lay

It may be remarked alſo, by the way, that a decided ſimilarity occurs between the preamble of Lydgate's Temple of Glas and Dante's Inferno.

Me dyd oppreſſe a ſodayne dedely ſlepe
 Within the whiche methought that I was Ravyſhed in ſpyrite into a Temple of Glas
 I ne wyſt howe, ful ferre in wylderneſſe
 That founded was all by lyyckelyneſſe

Not upon stile but on a craggy roche
 Lyke yfe yfroze
 Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita
 Mi ritrovai per una selva oscura

* * * *

I non so ben ridir, com' io' v'entrai Tant'era pien di sonno, &c. (Dante, Inferno.)

In the midway of this our life below,
 I found myself within a gloomy wood,—

* * * *

*How first I enter'd it is hard to say,
 In such deep slumber were my senses bound. (Wright's Transl.)*

The mention of Dante's Inferno will call to the recollection of the lovers of ancient English poetry the names of three of our northern middle-age poets, who have, in their Dreams, had similar Visions. The first of these was Richard Hampole, a doctor of divinity, better known as "the hermit of Hampole," who, about the year 1349, wrote his poem called "The Prycke of Conscience," divided into seven parts—the number of Limbes in Dante's Inferno, and of the deadly sins—in which he treats of Death, of Judgment, of the torments of Hell, and of the joys of Heaven; subjects often treated by both poets and painters under the title of the Four Last Things; or, as the Italians call the celebrated frescoes of Orcagna, in the Campo Santa of Pisa, the four Novissima or Ultimamenti.

Hampole, in his Inferno, gives a shuddering description of the torment of those he calls "the syn-folke," in that monkish legendary hell of fire and ice, described by Dante in the Inferno and Purgatorio, and since adopted by our two greatest poets, Shakespeare and Milton. Thus Hampole's description is:—

The syn-folke schulleth as I haue afore y-told Ffele outrageous hete and afterwards to much colde Ffor now he schulleth frooze and now brenne
 And so be ypynd that non schal other kenne
 And also be ybyte with dragonnes felle and kene
 The whuche schulleth hem destrye outrigte and clene
 And with other vermyn and bestes felle
 The whuche beothe nougt but fendes of helle &c.

"One of the torments of the damned, in Dante's Inferno," says Warton, "is the punishment of being eternally confined in lakes of ice:

'Eran l'ombre dolenti nell ghiaccia Mettendo i denti in nota di cicogna.'

"The ice is described to be like that of the Danube or Tanais. This species of infernal torment, which has been adopted both by Shakespeare and Milton, has its origin in the legendary hell of the monks. The hint seems to have been taken from an obscure text in the book of Job, (xxiv. 19,) dilated upon by St. Jerome, and the early commentators. The torments of hell, in which the punishment by cold is painted at large, had formed a visionary romance, under the name of St. Patrick's Purgatory or Cave, long before Dante wrote."—Warton's Hist. Eng. Poet. v. 3, p. 208.

In Act III. Sc. 3, of "Measure for Measure," Shakespeare makes Claudio exclaim :—

Aye, but to die, and go we know not where !
— and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice, &c.

And Milton thus describes that "dismal world :"—

The parching air
Burns froze, and cold performs th' effect of fire.
Thither by harpy-footed furies hal'd
At certain revolutions all the damn'd
Are brought ; and feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire, to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine Immoveable, infix'd, and frozen round,
Periods of time, thence hurried back to fire.

Par. Lost, B. II. l. 600.

Sir David Lyndesay of the Mount is another of our northern dreamers who has left us descriptions of the infernal and purgatorial regions, and the exordium to his poem called "The Dreme," produced in 1528, is modelled upon those of his predecessors.

The poet ascends the cliffs on the sea-shore, and entering a cavern, high in the crags, sits down to register in rhyme some mery matter of antiquitie. He compares the fluctuation of the sea with the instability of human affairs ; and, at length, being comfortably shrouded from the falling fleet by the closeness of his cavern, is lulled asleep by the whistling of the winds among the rocks, and the beating of the tide. He then has the following vision.

He sees a lady of great beauty, and benignity of aspect, who says she comes to soothe his melancholy by showing him some new sights. Her name is Remembrance. Instantaneously she carries him into the centre of the earth. Hell is here laid open—which is filled with popes, cardinals, abbots, &c. and a long satire on the clergy ensues. She then gives the poet a view of Purgatory :—

A lytill above that dolorous dungeoun
We enterit in ane cuntrie full of cair

^a Weeping and howling.

^b Many an unhappy fore, or trouble.

Quhare that we saw money ane legioun
Greitand^a and gowland with money ruthfull fair^b
Qhat place is this quod I of blis so bair

But the most extraordinary production of all that have appeared under the similitude of a Dream is that of William Dunbar, a native of East Lothian, about the year 1470, who, under the title of "Dunbar's Daunce," has given us a picture of the Inferno, in a burlesque style, in which he exhibits groups of figures worthy of Callot's pencil. Burns must have taken him as his model.

The poet in his Dreme sees a display of hell, and Mahomet or the Devil commands a dance to be performed by a select party of fiends: immediately the seven deadly sins appear, and present a mask or mummery.

The method which they take to introduce their allegory to the reader was so strictly adhered to by the ancient Dreamers, that we are naturally led to suppose it must have been founded on some conventional plan. The following passages from De Guileville's Pilgrim, and Chaucer's Dream, called the "Book of the Duchefs," form a curious parallel in support of such an inference. Chaucer dreams, whilst he is in his bed, in the same manner as De Guileville describes himself to have done—and the illuminated MS. of his poem represents him as sleeping on his bed in the cell of his convent. Chaucer is also aroused from his dream by the turret-clock of the castle, as De Guileville is awoken by the sound of the matin-bell:—

OURTANT le dy car vne foiz
Lan mil trois cens dix par trois fois
Ung songe vy bien merueilleux
Lequel ainfi com sommeilleux Jescripz a mon reueillement

Thus also Chaucer:—

So when I saw I might not sleepe
Now of late this other night
Upon my bed I fate upright
And bade one reachen me a booke
A Romaunce and it me tooke
To rede and drive the night away

After the reading of the Romance he falls asleep; and, according to his usual custom, dreams:—

Methoughten thus that it was May
And in the dawning where I lay Me met^c &c.

^c Dreamed.

De Guileville thus deſcribes his “reveillement :”—

Ce me ſembla en ce moment
Si que de leſpouement
Eſueille et deſdormy fu
Et me trouuay ſi eſperdu
Quauifer ne me pouoie
Se ia mort ou en vie ieſtoie
Juſqua tant que iouy ſonner
Lorologe de nuyt pour leuer
Et auſſi lors chantoient les cocqs
Pour quoy leuer me cuiday lors
Mais ne peu car fuz retenu
De la grant penſee ou ie fu
• Pour le myen aduentureux ſonge
Ou quel ſe quelque vne menſonge
Eſtoit meſlee ou contenue
Ou qui fuſt de peu de value

And Chaucer follows in a ſimilar ſtrain :—

Right thus me mette as I you tell
That in the caſtell there was a bell
As it had ſmitten houres twelve
And therewith I awoke myſelſe
And found me lying in my bed
And the book which I had read

He adds :—

Thought I this is ſo quaint a ſweven
That I would by proceſs of time
Fond to put this ſweven in rhyme
As I con beſt and that anon

But this is only an echo to what De Guileville ſays at the opening of his poem :—

OUUENTEFFOYS il aduient bien
Quant on a ſonge quelque rien
Quon y penſe ſur leſueillier
Et fil ne ſouuient au premier De tout le ſonge proprement
Bien aduient que ſon y entent
Quapres a plain il en ſouuient
Et tout a memoire reuient
Au leuer on eſt ſommeilleux

Et font les sens si pareceux
 Que son songe point on nentent
 Si non en groz sommierement
 Mais quant on sest bien aduise
 Et on ya apres pense
 Lors en souuient il plus a plain Mais quon nattendre au lendemain
 Car trop attendre le feroit
 Oblier et nen souuiendrait

There is, moreover, a similitude between the "Envoye," or "way of sending forth their books," of Bunyan and De Guileville, which appears to be sufficiently deserving of a passing remark: though it must, of course, be regarded as a circumstance perfectly fortuitous. De Guileville informs us that the first rough sketch of his Pilgrim had been stolen from him, and numerous copies circulated by the culprit—of which he thus complains:—

Afin que ie ne lobliaffe Et quapres le recorrigeaiffe
 Quant mieulx esueille ie seroye
 Et que pense plus y auroie
Ce que ie cuidois moult bien faire
 Se ie neusse eu en ce contraire
 Car sans mon sceu et volente
 Tout mon escript me fut oste
Par tout diuulge

Not being able to root out the copies of his original sketch, he resolves on publishing an amended edition of his dream, and sending it forth with an "Envoye" tied round its neck!

Tout entour le col luy pendray
 Pource quenuoyer le voudray
 Par tous les lieux ou a este
 Sans mon vouloir et sans mon gre

And he thus addresses his book:—

¶ Donques songe tu ten yras
Par tous les lieux ou este as A tous tes prouuains^a ie tenuois Pource que bien y scez la voye
 De par moy va les tous tailler
 * * * * *
Va donques tost ou ie tenuoye
 Car mieulx y scez que moy la voye

In like manner, Bunyan sends forth his Second Part, with an "Envoye" round its neck! to "every place in which his first pilgrim had already shewn his face," and thus denounces the numerous counterfeits of it in circulation.

^a The offsets, or copies of his 1st MS.

Bunyan. "Go now, my little Book, to every place Where my first Pilgrim has but shewn his face :
Call at their doors, &c."

Book. "But how, if they will not believe of me,
That I am truly thine—'cause some there be
That counterfeit the Pilgrim, and his name ;
Seek, by disguise, to seem the very same,¹
And by that means have wrought themselves into The hands and houses of I know not who."

Bunyan. "'Tis true, some have of LATE, to counterfeit
My Pilgrim, to their own, my Title set ;
Yea, others, half my name and title too,
Have stitched to their books to make them do ;
But yet, they, by their features, do declare Themselves not mine to be, whose e'er they are."

* * * * *

"Wherefore, my Book, let no discouragement Hinder thy travels ; behold, thou art sent To Friends, not Foes—to Friends that will give Place
To thee, thy Pilgrim's, and thy word embrace.
—Go then, my little Book, and shew to all That entertain and bid thee Welcome shall,
What thou shalt keep close shut up from the rest,
And with what thou shalt shew them may be blest
To them for Good, and make them chuse to be Pilgrims, by better far than thee and me."

This close similarity in the mode adopted by the early poets and dreamers, whether English or foreign, of "sending forth" their books, amounting almost to an identity of expression, can by no means be regarded as accidental. Though the subjects of their Dreams differed essentially, they were all formed in the same mould. From Jean de Meung, Rutebœuf, and De Guileville, down to Piers Plowman, Chaucer, Lydgate, and Hawes—they all followed in each other's wake ; and Bunyan, in admiration of his model, constructed and launched his unrivalled argosy, saying :—

O, let my little bark attendant sail,
Enjoy the triumph and partake the gale.

¹ This may refer to the publication of a pretended "Second Part of the Pilgrim's Progress," published by Thomas Malthus, a year before Bunyan published his own. Vide Southey's Life of Bunyan, p. lxxvii. and Offer's edit. of the Pilgrim's Progress, p. cxxiv.

Le Pelerinage de l'Homme and the Pilgrim's Progress.

Stephen Hawes, in his "Pastime of Pleasure," published in 1506, which he entitles "The Course of Man's Life in this World," thus addresses his book, in what he calls an "Excusation of the Author," a title much like the preamble to the 1st part of Pilgrim's Progress, which Bunyan calls "The Author's Apology for his Book."

Go, little boke ! I praye God thee save
From misse metrying by wrong impressiõ,
And who that ever list thee for to have,
That he perceyve well thyne intencion,
For to be grounded without presumption,
As for to eschewe the synne of ydleness ;
To make such bokes I apply my busines.
Beseeching God for to give me grace,
Bokes to compyle of moral vertue.

The following is from Lydgate's Poem in honour of St. Edmond, the patron of his monastery at Bury St. Edmond's :—

Go, littel boke, be ferfull, quaak for drede,
For to appere in so hyhe preface.

And Chaucer thus addresses his Book, at the close of his poem of "The Flower and the Leaf :"—

O little book ! thou art so unconning,
How dar'ft thou put thyself in pres^a for dread ?
It is wonder that thou waxest not red,
Sith that thou wot'ft full lite^b who shall behold
Thy rude language, full boistously unfold.^c

These passages are not only sufficient indications of the sources from which Bunyan drew his description, at the opening of his allegory, of the place in which he chose to dream, (a den or valley,) and the mode he adopted of "sending forth" his book, in the form of the ancient "Envoye," but also good evidence of his taste for, and attachment to, our old vernacular literature.

^a In public, or in the crowd.

^b Little.

^c Roughly displayed or unfolded.

APPENDIX.

Appendix.

Containing the Description of the Holy City, &c. and Explanation of the Woodcuts from Vitellius C. xiii., also Translations of the original French quoted in the Analysis.

The Woodcuts are copied from "Le Pelerinage de l'Homme," imprime en Goth. par Anthoine Verard, fol. Paris, 1511.

DESCRIPTION OF THE HOLY CITY.

THE seyde yer ho lyft take kep^a
 I was avyfed in my flep
 Excyted eke and that a noon
 To Jerufalem for to goon
 Gretly meved in my corage
 Ffor to do my pylgrymage
 And ther to fteryd inwardly
 And to tell the caufe why
 Was ffor me thouht I hadde a fyght
 With inne a merour large and bryht
 Off that hevenely ffayr cyte Wych representede vnto me
 Ther of holy the manere
 With inne the glas ful bryht and cler

And werrayly as yt fo thouhte me
 Yt excellide off bewete^b
 Al other in comparyfon
 Ffor god hym fylff was the mafown^c
 Wych mad yt ffayr at ys devys^d
 Ffor werkman was there noon fo wys

Yt to conceyve in hys entent
 Ffor al the weyes and paament
 Was ypavyd all off gold
 And in the fawter^e yt ys told How the ffyrft ffundacyon
 On hyllys off devocyon
 The mafounry wrouht ful clene
 Off quyke ftonys bryht and schene
 Wyth a clofour rounde a bowte
 Off enemyes ther was no dowte
 Ffor awngell the wach ykepte
 The wych day nor nyht ne flepte
 Kepyng fo strongly the entre
 That no wyht kam in that cyte
 But pylgrymes day nor nyht
 That thyder wentyn evene ryht
 And ther were many manfyouns
 Placys and habytacyouns
 And ther was also al gladneffe
 Joye with ovten hewynesse
 And pleyntly who that hadde grace

^a The faid year (let whoever listeth give heed.)

^b Beauty.

^c Mafon.

^d After his own plan.

^e Pfalter.

* Slain.	Ffor to entre in that place Ffond on to hys plesaunce Off joye al maner suffysaunce That any hert kan devyse And yet the entre in swych wyfe Was strongly kepte ffor komyng in Ffor the awngel cherubin Off the gate was cheff porter Hauing a fwerd flawmyng as cler As any ffyr evene at the gate And who that wold erly or late Passen the wal he was yflawe^a There ne was noon other lawe Ne bet helpe ne bet refut^b The vengeance ay was execute In the passage thyder ward The weye was so streiht and hard Ffor giauntys with ther felonye And with ther mortel tormentye Devyseden on ther entent Fful many wonderful torment Lyggyng awayt fro day to day To slan pylgrymes in ther way	The fellouns wern on hem so felle That yt ys pyte for to telle And ther ys no man now a lyve That kan the penys halff descryve Nor a sermon ther off make That they suffrede ffor the sake Off crist ihu vnto the deth Ffor love tyl they yald vp the breth Myd ther mortal peynes smerte Ffor ther ys noon so hard on hert So despytous nor so ffelon That he wold ha compassyon Ben agryfed^c off pyte And specyally ffor to fe That they suffrede for no synne But only off entent to wynne The love off cryft and ffor hys sake All they han up on hem take Seyng how full long afor Cryft to suffre was yborn And fforbar not to be ded And sythen he that was her hed Suffrede paynys deth and woo The membrys wolde endure also And ffolowe ther hed in al thyng As seyn Gregori in his wretyng Recordeth pleynty who taketh hed Of al those wyse ys had^f For wyth the membrys as was due After ther hed lyst to sue^g Wych by example went afore To whom thentre was not forbore Ffor swych as deyde ffor hys love By wyketys entrede in above Vp the gate hih a lofte Thogh there was passage was not soffte The porter lyst hem nat to lette And ther pencillys^h vp they sette On cornerys wher them thouhte good All steyned with ther oune blood And whan that I perceyved yt I conceyvede yn my wyt That who schold ther with inne Entre by fforce he most yt wynne By manhood only and by vertu For by record of seyn Mathew b Better refuge.
c Slaughter.
d Together.
e Affected with.	Makyng ful grete occyfioun^c Off pylgrymes of grete renovn Off men and wommen both yfere^d Whos martyrdom as ye shaal here Was ful grevous to endure Ffor somme of hem I yow ensure Wern out of ther skynnes flawe And somme by ful mortel lawe Were hew as bokys kan remembre Asonder partyd every membre Crucefyed of blood al red And many other lost hys hed Off somme the bowelys wer out rent And somme on hote colys brent Ffretyng salt cast in among Ffor to make ther peynys strong Myd the ffry flawmys reed Somme boyled in oylle and led And fore bete that yt was wonder Somme sawyd evene assonder Nerff and bon assonder rent And ther entraylles afor hem brent f He who heeds these things is esteemed wife.
g Follow.
h Banners.

The hevene as by hys sentence
 Wonnen ys by vyolence Crysoftom recordeth ek also Who lyfte taken hede ther to That gret vyolence and myght
 Yt ys who that loke aryght
 A man be born in erth her downe
 And raviſhe lyk a champyon
 The noble hih hevenely place
 By vertu only and by grace
 Ffor vertu doth to a man assure Thyngs denyed by nature
 Thys to feyne who lyft lere
 That vertu makyth a man conquere
 The hih hevene in many wyfe
 To wych kynde may not ſuffyſe
 To cleyme ther poceſſion
 But ſhe be guydedy by reſon
 Wych to vertu ys mayſtreſſe
 To lede hyr alſo and to dreſſe
 In hyr Pylgrymage ryght
 Above the ſterrys cler and bryght Ffor other weye koude I not ſe
 To entre by in that cyte
 Ffor cherubyn erly and late
 Ay awaytynge at the gate
 Was redy cuer and ther ſtood Whos ſwerd was bloodyd with the blood
 Off cryſtys holy paſſyon Whan he made our Redemption
 Mankynde to reſtore agayn
 The wych wey whan I hadde ſeyn
 I was aſtonyd in my fyght
 But I was comforted anoon right
 Whan I ſawh the ſwerd mad blont
 Off cherubin the wych was wont
 To brenne as any ſlawne bryht
 But now the ſharpneſſe and lyht
 Was queynte^a to do no more vengauce
 By vertu off cryſtys gret ſuffraunce
 Wych ſhal no more for man be whet
 * * * * *
 Afterward yt ys no ffayle
 Me thouhte I ſawh a gret mervayle
 Vp on tours dyuers eſtatys
 Off doctours and prelatys

Shewyng as by contenance
 By ſpeche and by dallyaunce
 Techyng pylgrymes to knowe
 That wer yn the vale lowe
 How with travaylle and peyne
 And how alſo they ſholde atteyne
 To make hem wynges ffor to fle
 Hih alofte to that cyte
 By wynges of example good
 Yiff they ther lernyng vnderſtood
 Wych they tauhte hem in ther lyff
 By doctryne contemplatyff
 Outward ſhewyng as by cher^b
 Ther love was to hem ful enter
 Ffovyndyd vpon charyte
 Amongys wych I dede ſe
 Gret nombre of thys Jacobins
 Off chanouns and of Awſtynys^c Folkys ful diuers of maner
 Both temporal and ſeculer
 Off clerkys and relygyous
 And other ordrys vertuous
 Mendykantys ful nedy
 That day and nyht werrych beſy
 To gedre ſfetterys bryht and ſhene
 And make hem wynges ffor to fleen
 And gan a noon withal ther myght
 To foren up and take her fflyht
 Hih in to that ffayr cyte
 And hiher vp they dyde ffe
 Above Cherubin that aungel cler
 For they wer out of hys daunger
 By the techyng and the doctryne
 And by examples ek dyvyne
 Wych theſe mayſtres hadde hem tauht
 Wherby they han the hevene kauht
 And ffonde ther in gret avauntage
 To fforthre hem in ther pylgrymage
 And how hem ſylff they ſholde guyde
 And vp on the tother ſyde
 Vnder the wal of the cyte
 I ſawh off gret autorite
 Ffolkys wych dyde entende
 To helpe her ffrendys to aſcende
 By ful gret ſubtylyte
 To make hem entre the cyte

^a Quenched ſo as to do.

^b By their countenance or geſture.

^c Auſtin friars.

^a Ladders.

^b Each one.

^c St. Benedi^ct.

^d I knew not.

^e Get again.

^f Affirm.

^g For ever his scarf and staff,
i. e. faith and hope.

^h Owe.

ⁱ Reason.

^k Moved.

^l I cared for no other joy.

^m See as in a vision.

ⁿ Better.

^o Before.

And ther to dyde her byfy cure
By scalys^a thorgh the strong clofure
And as me thouhte a mong echon^b
That faint benet^c in soth was on

Wych as I rehers shal
Ffor to scale that hih wal
That was so myhty and so strong
With hym brouht a ladder long
In the wych men myhte se ¹XII grees off humylyte
By wych thorgh deuocyon
Ffolk off hys relygyon
Ascendys vp gre by gre
With oute lette to that cyte
And the ryht weye han take Monkys greye whyte and blake
Ascending vp with oute ffeer
And feyn ffraunceys I sawh ek ther
And many another I beheld Off dyuers ffolkys that vp ran Off whom the namys I not kan^d
Nor how they dyde hem fylff assure
Over the wallys to recure^e
On eche party rounde aboute
Ffor I in soth that stood withoute
Myghte not be holden al the paas
But on the party that I was Wych was to me gret dysplefavnce
But I dar feyn^f in substaunce
That ther was noon off no degre
Wych entre myhte the cyte
But lefft withoute lowe don Ffor al hys sherpe and bordoon^g
But thentent off hys vyage
And ffyn ek off hys pylgrymage
Wer fet of herte fynally
Ther whyde perpetuelly
With feyth hope and charyte
To lyve at rest in that cyte
Ffor other thyng in hert and thouht
To her desyre they wolde nouht
Ffor as the phyhfofre feyth

To whom men mosten eyven^h ffeyth
That al ffolk wherfo they wende
What they do ys for som ende
And for that skyleⁱ more and more
I was fteryd^k wonder fore
Ffor to take my journee
Lyke a pylgryme to that cyte
Off more joye I nat kepte^l
And me thouht ek as I slepte
And in my dream did ek mete^m
That ellys I myghte ha no quyete
And thus feel pensyff in my guyse
A noon I gan me to a vyfe
And thouht in my avysion
I ffaillde a sherpe and bordoun Wych al pylgrymes ouhte to have In the wey hem fylff to save
And so the pylgrymes hadde echon
In ther vyage but I allone
They wer echon by ffore purveyd Betⁿ in ther wey to be conveyed

And I roos vp and that anoon
And fro my hous gan out gon
• • • • •

Off entente forth to procede
But than at erft I gan take hede
That to myn entencion
I myghte ffynden a bordoun
And a sherpe wyche off ufage
Ffolk han that gon on pylgrymage
Nedful to me and necessarye
Ffor wych cause I dyde tarye
Or I myghte gynne my journee
To holde my wey to that cyte
Ffor wych I went complaynyng
Oute off my fylff tryft and wepyng
Cerchyng toforn^o and ek behynde
Sherpe and bordoun for to fynde
And whil I dyde my besynesse
²A lady of ful gret ffayrnesse
And gret nobleffe soth to say

¹ This is an allusion to the foundation of twelve monasteries by St. Benedi^ct, and his restriction of the number of monks in each to twelve brethren and no more.

² See Woodcut I.

Appendix.

V

I dyde mete vpon the waye Ffor god wold I you behete ^a Sone that I sholde hyr mete
 Off grace for my owne prowth ^b
 Ther off I hadde joye ynowh
 And my hert gret gladnesse
 Ffor she as by lyklynesse
 Was douhter of som Emperour
 Somme myghty kyng or govenour
 Or off that lord that guyeth al
 Wych ys of power most royal
 And thys lady gracyous
 Most debonayre and vertuous
 Was yclad by gret delyht
 In a furcote al of whyt
 With a Tyssu gyrt off grene
 And endlong ful bryht and shene
 Sche hadde a charboucle ston
 That round abowte hyr body shon
 Was noon so reche as I was war
 And on hyr brest a nouche ^c she bar
 I trowe that nowher was no bet
 And in the awmaylle ^d ther was sette Passyngly a reche sterre
 Wych that cast hys bemys ferre
 Round a bowte al the place
 Ther was swych habondaunce off grace
 Out of whos bosom mylde ynowh
 Ther kam a dowe whyt as snowgh
 Wyth hys wynges splayng ^e oute
 Plauynyge round hyr honde aboute
 Thys lady of whom I han told Hadde on hyr hed a crowne of gold
 Wrouht of sterrys shene and bryht
 That cast aboute a ful cler lyht
 He was ful myghty who taketh hede
 That sette yt ferst upon hyr hed
 And made yt ffyrst by gret avys
 Off gret Richesse and gret prys
 Thys lady that I spak of here
 Was curteys and of noble chere
 And wonderly of gret vertu
 And ffyrst she gan me to salve
 In goodly wyse axynge of me

What maner thyng yt myght be Or cause why I shold hyr lere ^f
 That I made so hevy chere
 Or why that I was ay wepyng
 For lak of eny maner thyng
 Wher of when I gan take hede
 I ffyl ynto a maner drede
 Ffor unkonnyng and leudnesse ^g
 That sche of so gret noblesse
 Dysdenede not in hyr degre
 To speke to on so pore as me
 But yiff yt were so as I gesse
 Al only of hyr gentyllenesse
 For gladly wher ys most beute
 Ther ys gretteft humylyte
 And that ys verrayly the sygne
 Swych ar most goodly and benygne
 An apple tre with frut most lade
 To folk that stonden in the shade
 Mor lowly doth hys branches loute ^h
 Thon a nother tre withoute
 Wher haboundeth most goodnes
 Ther ys ay most of meknesse
 None so greet token of bewte
 As ys parfyt humylyte
 Who wanteth hyr in hys banere
 Hath not vertu hool and entere ⁱ

* * * *

¹ And then I gan to wepe anoon ^k
 Sihe and forowe and seyn allas
 What shal I don now in thys cas
 Or to what party in certeyne
 Shal I drawn off thys tweyne

GRACE DIEU.

Quoth Grace Dieu what may thys be Why wepyft thow what cyleth the So thysylve to dysconforte

* * * *

The PYLGRIM.

Certys quoth I I may wel wepe
 For yiff ye lyft to take kepe

^a Assure you that it was God's will that I should soon meet her.

^b Profit.

^c Necklace.

^d Enamel.

^e Spreading.

^f Inform.

^g Ignorance and surprise.

^h Bend down.

ⁱ Whole and entire.

^k ("A larmoyer," &c. f. 39,
 b.
 Vitell. C. xiii. f.
 154, b.)

¹ The French references are to Verard's Edition.

^a Let down or abased.

^b Follow or remain closely attached to.

^c Vitell. C. XIII.
f. 14.
"Je fuis celle."

^d Regard or respect.

^e Dove.

^f Since.

^g Make known.

^h "Lors elle me prist en celle heure." f. 4.

ⁱ Astonished.

My joye my myrthe and my plesaunce
Myn elthe and al my suffysaunce
Bodeynly me han forsake
I may compleyn and forowe make
For whilom above the skye
I was wont to fle ful hyhe
And hadde also ful glad repayre
With bryddis fleying in the hayr
In my most lufly freshe sefon
But now I am avalyd don ^a
And fynde by gret adverstyte
Al that ys contrayre unto me

* * *

Cheynd ryht as ys an ape
On to a clog and must yt sue ^b
And fro thenys may nat remue
For my body gret and large
Ys the clog that me doth charge
And letteth with hys grete wheyhte
That I may nat fien an hyhte
For ever with hys mortal lawe
Don to th erthe he doth me drawe

* * *

A body corrupt yt ys no nay
Greveth the body [spirit?] nyht and day
Kepeth hym in captyvyte
Yt may not gon at lyberte
Nouther wakyng nor a slepe
For wych certys I may wel wepe
And feyn alas and fory be Off my gret adverstyte

. . . . ^c To pylgrymes day and nyht
I enlumine and give lyht
To al pylgrymes in ther way
As wel in dyrknesse as be day
So they lyfte rewarde ^d me
And lyfte that I her guyde be
And yiff they erryn in her weye
Ageyn I han hem wel conveye
I wyl hem helpen and redresse
Ffor I am she in sothfastnesse
Whom thou owest seke of ryght

In straunge lond with al thy myght
I zive lyht to folk echon
That out of hyr waye gon
And releue hem on and alle
Lefte vp folkys that be falle
Ffrom al myscheff and from al blame
And Grace dieu that ys my name
Fful nedful in ech contre
And by thys dowe ^e wych thou dost se
Wych I bere with wynges fayre
Humble benygne and debonayre
I am tokeynyd who lyst seke
With hyr goodly eyen meke
And so thou shalt me calle in dede
Whan thou hast on to me nede
And that shal be ful offte sythe ^f
That I may my power kythe ^g
Telpe the in thy pylgrymage
Ffor fynally in thy vyage
As thou gost to that cyte
Thou shalt haue offte adverstyte
Gret mescheff and encombraunce Empechementys and dysturbaunce
Wych thou mayst nat in no degre
Passe nor endure withoute me
Nor that cyte never atteyne
Thogh thou ever do thy peyne Withoute that I thy guyde be

¹ Tho hyr lyst no lenger byde
But took me in the same tyde ^h
And made me wt hyr for to gon
To an hous of hers anoon
Wher I sholde fynde indede
Al thyng that I hadde of nede
She was hyr sylff yn sothnesse
Off thyk hous cheff foundereffe
Ffor on hyr word yt was fyrst groundyd
And by hyr wysdom bylt and foundyd
The yerys of the mafownry
Thyrtene hundred and thyrtty
And ffor the ffayrnesse and bewte
I hadde gret wyl that hous to se
Abayshed ⁱ for yt was so fayr

¹ See Woodcut II.

Ffor yt heng hih up in the hayr
Twen hevene and erthe stood the place
As yt hadde only by grace
Ffrom the hevene descendyd down
So stood that hevenely mancyon
With steplys and with toures hihe Frefshely arrayed to the eye
As a place most royal Above al other princypal
Wych stood vp on a fayr River
The water ther of holsom and cler
But ther nas passage in that place
Nor shepe wherby men myhte passe

BAPTISM.¹

* The pilgrim having been exhorted by Gracedieu to enter her housfe by the waters of Baptism, he thus replies:—

The PYLGRYME.

Ffor wych to gracedieu I fayde
And to hyr thus I abrayde^b
Madame me semeth in my thouht
That ive ben in perel brouht Ffor I kan sey no passage
To passe by nor avauntage

I kan nat fwymmen yt stondeth so Wherfor I not what I may do
And yiff I entre I am in doute
How euer I schold komen oute
Ffor wych tentre I stonde in drede
I haue of helpe so gret nede

GRACEDIEU argueth.

What menyth thys what may thys be
That thou art now as semeth me
So fore a dred of thys Ryver
Wych ys but lyte smothe and cler
Why artow ferful of thys stream
And art toward Jerusaleem
And mustest off necessitye Passen ferst the gret see

Or thou kome ther to her ys al
And dredyft now thys Ryver smal
And most kouth^c ys thys passage
To chyldre that be yong of age
And offer han thys ryver wonne
Than folk that ben on age ronne

For other weye ys ther noon
To Jerusaleem for to goon

And ek I wyl the telle a thyng
Ther passede onys her a kyng Ffyrst assuryng the passage
Unto euery maner age

To waschen hym yt was no nede
But that hym lyst off lowly hede
Schewe example by hys grace
How other folkys sholde passe
Wher by the same went Wherfore tel me thyn entent
Yiff thou thys ryver lyst atteyne
And I shal anon ordeyne
A fergeaunt of myn inspecial
Wych offycer the helpe shal
For to passe the water cler
And wardeyn ys of the Ryver
He shal the washe he shal the bathe
And make the passe the more rathe
And to put the out of doute
He shal crosse the round aboute
Make the sur as thou shalt se
From al tempestys of the se
Tescap the wawe of euery streem
And make the wyne Jerusaleem
By conquest and fynally
That thou shalt drede non enmy

The Pilgrim inquires the necessity of this washing.

In answer to this inquiry Gracedieu thus speaks—

* “ When God had created Adam and Eve, your first parents, He bestowed such favour up-

* Vitell. C. xiii.
f. 15, b.

^b Upbraid.

^c Well known.

¹ See Woodcut III.

² A summary of her answer is given in prose.

^a Pſal. xviii. 20.

^b Prov. xiii. 6.

^c 1 Cor. xv. 22.

^d Gal. v. 17.

^e Gen. ii. 8.

^f John i. 17.

^g Rom. v. 19.

^h Deut. vi. 5.
Lev. xix. 18.
Matt. xxii. 37—39.
Mark xii. 30.
Luke x. 27.

ⁱ John xiv. 21.
¹ Pet. i. 22.

^k James i. 14.

^l Titus iii. 5.

^m Chaff.

ⁿ Remains.

^o Mark iv. 28.

on them as enabled them to live without infirmity, and without necessity of death. He granted them uprightness, and power to keep that uprightness in freedom of will,^a so that the body then obeyed the soul,^b tendering it subjection as it ought in reason to do.

“God intended this Righteousness as an inheritance to their posterity; but Adam and Eve forfeited it by their disobedience. Then death became their portion;^c and as they no longer obeyed God they lost the command over themselves;^d for he who will not render subjection to a higher authority can no longer claim obedience.

“Adam was placed in Paradise, to dress it and to keep it;^e its felicity did not consist alone in delicious fruits and cooling waters, but in the uprightness which caused Adam and Eve to love their Creator better than themselves,^f and each other as themselves.

“But since human nature received so great a wound by their disobedience,^g that this Righteousness became effaced from it, the good God renewed it when He commanded Moses,^h saying, ‘Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength,’ and thy neighbour as thyself.

“Adam possessed this love by nature, the performance of it was therefore easy to him; but after his disobedience it became very difficult to his posterity, so that without my assistance it is impossible for you to do right; but if you make an effort to direct your course to the right haven

‘de tirer tousiours a bon port’ and to recover the power of lovingⁱ with a pure heart, your gracious Redeemer will accept your service as a duty done unto Himself, and will pardon that which is wanting; and though the flesh will still tempt you to evil, you must battle strongly against this sinful inclination;^k you will always find resistance necessary, but I will be with you to enable you to withstand against your enemy, that it shall not overcome you,^l which I cannot do unless you will submit to the washing” (of Baptism).

The Pilgrim does not acknowledge this necessity, saying, that if his parents had been cleansed from original sin, he must also have inherited their cleansing.

GRACEDIEU replies :

¹ Than quod she to me agayn
Tak hed when men sewen greyn
The husk the chaff yt ys no nay
But fyrst be clene put away
Or yt be throwe upon the londe
And sowe abroad with manhys hond
Whit and pur yff thow take hede
And afterward whan yt doth fede
Upon the tyme off hys ryping
And the seson of gadryng
Men fynde ageyn the same corn
Huskyd as yt was befor
And ther to clothyd newe ageyn
By which exaample in certeyn Thogh thy fadris wer by grace
Off ther orygynal trespase
Purged clene and frely quyt
The caff^m and the strowh abyⁿ
Reneweth ay and ever shal
Of the synne orygynal
Up on the greyn wych of hem spryngeth
The huske alway with hem they bryngeth
Al folkys as thow shalt lere

¹ Lors me respondit elle or voy
Comment en terre on seme ble
Et quel apres il est trouue
On ly met despoille et nu
Et on le retreuve vestu
De paille et de nouvelle cote
Qui estre te doit vne note^o
Que se tes parens sont purgez
De leurs originels pechez

Pource nest mie que tout tel
Nayes peche originel
Ceste paille tousiours reuint
Avec chascun quant nouel vient
En ce monde et en ceste terre Telement qua chascun fault querre
Ruiere ou preigne laument
Sil veult auoir son purgement

That kyndely be fowen here
In this world fro day to day
The huske with hem abytt alway
And feveryth not in no manere
Tyl they be walsched in the ryvere
Wherfor by short conclusioun
They nede eche on purgatioun

The Pilgrim acknowledges that he can no longer make any objection, lamenting that it is out of his power to assist himself; an advocate arrives, who undertakes to speak for him and to aid him to pass the river

"Et celluy Guillaume auoit nom Pas ne scauoie son surnom."

¹ The PYLGRYME.

Tyl at the laste an aduocaat
Kam to me tho in my nede
Without gerdoun ^a other mede
And for I hadde of speche lak
Wonderly goodly for me he spak Proffrede for to helpe of grace
To make me the Ryver passe
And that I myght over gon
And that I wer ek walshe anoon
In al that ever he coude or myghte
And Guyllyam ffor sothly he hyhte ^b
Hys surname I not ne knew
And thus he spak to Gracedieu
Myn almeffe ^c with your grace

I wol fulfyllen in thys place
And yiff ye wyl I calle shal
Off your hous the Offycyal
Ffor yt ys now ryght good sefon
Aftter your oppynyoun
That he mak by your byddying
Off thys pylgrym the walschyng
Wher of ye han so mych feyd
Quod she I am ryght wel assayd
And ther withal benygne of look
The advocate anoon me took
Of Charyte by gret plesaunce
Aftter the custum and usaunce
And made calle of fyrst of al
To helpyn hym the offycyal
Bad hem also among hem alle
Aftter hys name me to calle
The he shold ek don hys dever ^d
To helpe me pass the ryver
That I were walschen and noon ryght
And so he dyde withal hys myght
And many thynges as he abrayde
Over me methouhte he sayde
Wordys that hadde gret vertue
As he was taught of gracedieu
When thorgh me thouht and that anoon
That I saw ther fro me goon
A foul that was of colour blak
And in his lydene ^e thus he spak
Cryyng men herd hym every cost ^f
I wys quod he I have al lost

¹ LE PELERIN.

¶ Adonc cest aduocat me prist ^a
Et ie lui dis quil mappelait
Tout ainssi com lui et nommait
Et que tantost me fist passer
Leaue pour moy dedens lauer
Celui vint tost et ainssi fist
Mais quelque chose auant il dist
Sur moy qui auoit tel vertu
Qu'en ce point aduis il me fu
Que de moy vng oisel yff
Qui estoit noir et a hault cry
Disoit en lair iay tout perdu
Cest official mal venu
Soit qui ainssi moste mes droiz
Et maintenant et autrefois ¶ Puis official me baigna ^b
Et dedans leaue me laua
Trois foyz me croisa et si me oint

Gracedieu ne men mentit point
Et quant ie fuz oultre passe
Et l'aduocat sen fut ale
Qui me fist si grant courtoisie
Quoblier i'amaiz ne doy mie
Lors en sa maison gracedieu
Me mena ou moult a beau lieu Et la me fist elle semblant
Plus bel que nauoit fait deuant

GRACEDIEU.

¶ Puis dist elle que es laue
Et que la riuere as passe
Et de toy est hors lennemy
Qui ia y auoit fait son ny
Maintes choses te monstreray
Dont ton prouffit tresgrant feray
Se tu as volente daprendre
Et adroit y veulx bien entendre

^a Reward.

^b Truly he was called.

^c Alms.

^d "Devoir," behest.

^e Song or narrative.

^f Everywhere.

^a f. 6. b.

^b John iii. 5.

^a Same.^b Snatched away.^c Vitell. C. XIII.
f. 31.^d And always continue thus together.^e In good or evil circumstances.^f f. 8. b.^g Gen. xii. 10.^h Gen. i. 27, 28.ⁱ f. 7. b.

And from me now ys taken al
By thys ylike ^a offycyal
He hath my clothys fro me rauht ^b
And thre tyme he hath me kauht
And in the ryver plunged me
Croffyd as men myghte fe
Anoynted in the strems cold
Lyk as gracedieu me tolde
I fonde she lyede never adel
And when that I was fayre and wel
The Ryver passyd than anoon
And th avocat ek was gon
Wych only of gentrye
Hadde don to me gret curtoysye
That shal never out of mynd
Than Gracedieu most good and kynde
Ladde me forth in my repayre
To a place ryght inly fayr
And never she made me to fore
So good chere fyth I was bore
Nor was so benygn of hyr port
Unto me to don confort
Now fyth quod she that yt ys fene
Thou art wafshed and made al clene
And art passyd the ryver
Without a pereyl or daunger
Thyn enemy fled out of thy brest
Wher he afor hadde made hys nest
I shal the shew of gret delyt
Pful many thyng for thy profyt

¹ See Woodcut IV.LE IOUENCEL ET IOUENCELLE.¹

LE PELERIN.

Ung pelerin soudainement
Vy venir deuers orient
Et de lautre partie a droit
Une pelerine venoit
A lofficial font venuz
En disant sans actendre plus Ensemble nous voulons aler
Et ensemble peleriner
En ierusalem la cite
Mais que vous ayez voulente
De nous enseigner que ferons
Et comment seurement yrons

LE PRESTRE.

Lors leur dist il cest grant seurte
Que foyez deux en verite
Mais que bien vous vous entramez ²

¹ ORDRE OFF MARYAGE.²

The PYLGRYME.

And tho myn eye as I vp caste
I sawe komen wonder faste
A pylgrym al sodeynly
Holdyng hys weye fynally
As methouht in hys entent
Drawynge into the oryent
And even in the opposyt
I sawe ek kome by gret delyt
A woman wych that was also A pylgryme ek and both two
Her wey took in especial
Towardys the offycyal

(He) tolde hem yiff they wolde gon
They moste of herte be alon
Tweyne in on and on in tweyne
Both in joye and ek in peyne
And so to gydre ay perfevere^d
Tyl that deth make hem dyffevere

And that your trouthe on outhur fide Perpetually in on abyde
To your last that yt endure
And that ye shal to me assure
Both be feyth and ek by oth
And beth wel war for leff or loth ^e

Et loyaulte vous vous portez
Et ce que prometiez par foy
Tresbien a certes deuant moy
En gardant bien que vous ferez
Car sapres vous vous parierez
Et ne tenez vo conuenant
Je vous prometiz ne tant ne quant
Ne vous vaudra vostre voyage
Ne tout vostre pelerinage ^h

LEVESQUE.ⁱ

dy moy
Je te prie se le scez pour quoy
Ma len fait la teste cornue
Et baille la verge poinctue
Nest ce pas pour punicions
Des maulx faiz et corrections
Je crois que les mauvais hurter
Je dois des cornes et bouter
Et de laiguillon les fort poindre
Plus que de doulx oingement oindre

That ye for no varyaunce
Ne breke not your assuraunce
Ffor yiff ye don ye be forsworn
And ek I warne you to forne
Yiff that ye don in dede or thouht
Fful lytel shal avaylle or nouht
Than^a vnto yow your vyage
Your labour nor your pylgrymage
Yet wer welbet to my entent
That ech of you allone went Sool by hym sylf^b and not trespace
Than be found in any place
Untrewe to hys companye
For gret forfet and folye
Yt ys a man for to be founde
Untrewe to hym that he ys bounde

^c Reason¹ is consulted by the Bishop, who says:—

² Tell me, I beg of you, why the mitre is horned, and the crozier pointed? Are they not intended for the punishment and correction of evil?

And off my staff ek with the prykke
I should chastyne folkys that be wykke
Rather than lyke as ye me tolde
Hertofores how that I sholde
Enoynte hem with the oyntment

Reason answereth.

My fayre frend quod tho Reason
Tak hed in thy discrecioun
Understonde me euery del
I wot that thou meneest wel
And knowe platly^d thy menyng
Mesure ys good in euery thyng
Both thy hornys and pyk also Belonge to the bothe two
For punysshynge and for chastyfynge
Off folkys rebel in werchyng^e
Yet fyrst thou sholdest hym dyrekte^f

And with fayrnes hem correkte
Swych as thou sey day by day
Erryn from the high ryhte way
And yiff thou founde hem obstynat
That longeth yt to thy estat
To punyssh hem by thy offyce
And vpon hem don ek justyce
Legally for ther offence
The lawe yeldeth the lycense
But ferste thou sholdest trete hem fayre
Be goodly ek and debonayre^g
And don alway ful gret labour
To shewe sweetnesse afor Rygour
And thogh the prykke of Rygour be^h
For chastyfynge the yoke to the
Be alway war touchyng ryht
Whan thou chastyfyst any whyght
Do yt never by swych dureffe
But yt be meyntⁱ ay with swetnesse
Medle with al the unctyon
Off pyte and compassyon
In thyn entente to be mor clene
Thogh thyn hornys be sharp and kene
To punyssh folk by righteounesse
Thou sholdest ay the poynt so dresse
In thy Rygour of equitye
And in herte to have pyte
On hem that thou hast justefyed
Let mercy with ryht be so alyed
And think how many day toforen
Or^k thou haddeest any horn
That he to whom thou art vyker
And chose to be hys offyicer
Was humble meke and debonayre
Charytable and not contrarye Off whom thou shalt example take
To-forne or thou thy domys make^l
² Hornyd he was by apparence
Not usyng hem by vyolence
Thys was that holy Moyse^m
That ledde al Israel in pesⁿ

^a Then.

^b Sole, alone.

^c Vitell. C. xiii. f. 26. b.

^d Plainly.

^e People who dislike working.

^f Matt. xviii. 15.

^g Ecclef. xlii. 10.

^h Psalm xxiii. 4.

ⁱ Mingled.

^k Before.

^l Form your opinions.

^m Erat Moyse vir mitissimus. Numb. xii. 3.

ⁿ Peace.

¹ See Woodcut V. for a representation of the meeting between the "Bishop" and "Reason." Cf. also the note to the preceding page ("dy moy, &c."), where part of their dialogue is given.

² The English MS. is here nearly illegible.

³ The "horns," so often painted on the head of Moses, represent merely "the glory," or halo, which we see in the pictures of our Saviour, the Virgin, the Saints, &c.

^a Ex. xiv. 21, 22.	Myddys thorgh the large see^a And with hys yerde thys was he That passede the floodys raage And made hem have good passage	And in thy drauht be ay benygne Voyde off rancour and felonye Than dost thou trewly occupye^a The staff wych thou hast on honde
^b John x. 11. ^c 1 Pet. v. 2.	Understondeyth thys lessoun Ye that han in subieccion Peplys onder your prelacye To learn how ye shal hem guye	For thou shalt wel understonde Yt tokeneth who that can concerne That thou shalt therewyth governe The peplys I dar wel specefye
^d Flock.	Thogh ye be hornyd to sych outward Shewe as they wer styffe and hard Let hem not growen in your herte^b To make your shep^c so sore smerte	Commytted to thy prelacye Make hem passe thys thy charge The Ryuer of this world ful large Thy staff to ther avauntage
^d Perfectly.	Thogh ye shewe outward dredful Be the in your hertys merciful • • • • •	Shal conducte ther passage Sych are the pyk profound and depe In to the waves hem to kepe And with al thys thou most take hede
^e 1 Tim. i. 15.	Take example off thy staff Wych Grace dieu vnto the gaff Thogh the poynt be sharp and kene Yt ys vpward^d pleyn smothe and clene	Yiff they fayll thou shalt on make As thou art bounde for her sake And for that cause folkeys al Pontifex^e they doth the calle
^f Bridge.	Above crookyd to enclyne • • • • • Schowe hem euer of love a sygne	Making a bregge thys to feyne The passage that they may atteyne^e
^g Rom. xv. 14.	¹ From pons, "a bridge," and facio, "to make." ² Reason thus exhorts the priest:—"A sword to- day is given to you, which was used anciently by the Cherubin to defend the entrance into Paradise.	Et par tel cop faire mourir Par le plat du glaive sentent Bon et loyal aduisement^g Veritable monicion
^h Hosea xii. 6.	"This sword (of judgement) is perilous to those who do not understand how to use it rightly; the edge must be used to strike those whose sins deserve severe rebuke, the flat part of the blade in mercy towards those who have sinned from ignorance and require to be ad- monished.	Qui sient les maux en espurgant Et les espargne en les ferant Cest la parolle iesu crist Ou le respit de la mort gift
ⁱ 1 Cor. iv. 14.	"He is foolhardy who would exercise vengeance in anger, or judgement upon suspicion; and this sword is also wrongly given to him who blindly cannot discern good from evil.	De ce plat vser vous devez Quant voz subgetz errer voyezⁱ Exorter souuent et prescher Fait mainteffoys peche laisser
^k Heb. ix. 5.	"Mercy, which is designated by the flat part of the blade, should therefore always be first tried; namely, good counsel, true admonition, and earnest exhortation, in order to remove evil by condemning it, and to spare in striking. This is the doctrine of the Gospel of Jesus Christ which delivers us from eternal death.	Sainz les pouez garantir Mieux vault que du taillant ferir • • • • •
^l Prov. i. 20.	"The sword was delivered unto you flaming by Grace- dies for this reason, that whichever way you turn it, either in judgement, or exhortation, or punishment, or correction, you should exhibit it enflamed with love and charity, for love is the burning fire which enflames it; and fearful would be the reverse should the fire of an- ger burn with destructive violence, for that fire proceeds from hell."	Et pource est il droit quayez nom Tant par euvre que par renom Cherubin plain de grant science^k Et de tres viue sapience
^m Prov. xxix. 7.	Nul ne sient se premierement Du plat du glaive feru na Et quauant bien aduise na Cellui quil veult ainzi ferir	Car se cherubin vous nestiez Moult de maux faire vous pourriez^l • • • • •
ⁿ Ecclef. vii. 5.	En main aussi diracondeux^m Rest ce glaive bien perilleux Car flamboyant il fut baille Par grace dieu et oestroye	La cause se sauoir voules Si est car quant vous le tournez Soit en jugeant ou en preschantⁿ En punissant ou corrigeant
	Monstrer le devez enflambe

NATURE.¹

² I ha the governance^a
 Off fyr of hayr as ye may se
 Off erth and off the large fe
 Off ther accord and ther debat
 I leve no thyng in on estat
 But make eche thyng by declyn
 Ffor to drawe to hys ffyn
 I make alday thynges newe
 The olde refreshyng off her hewe
 The erthe I clothe yer by yer
 And refreshes hym off hys cher
 With many colour of delyte
 Blewh and grene red, and whyt
 At pryme temps with many a flour
 And al the foyl thorgh my fauor
 Ys clad of newe medwe and pleyn

De bon amour et charite
 Car amour est le feu ardent Qui le doit faire flamboyant
 Et moult grant mefchance seroit
 Se le feu dyre lenflammoit
 Car tel flamme denfer vient
 Qui trop au glaive mal aduient

The sword, as thus described by De Guileville, appears also to be an illustration of Proverbs xxv. 21, 22.
 "If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink: for thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord shall reward thee."

This text is quoted by St. Paul in his address to the Romans. Rom. xii. 19—21.

"Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head."

"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

The following lines may perhaps serve to illustrate this idea:—

See yonder Blacksmith urge the roaring blast,
 And on repeated heaps the embers cast;
 Th' increasing heat the stubborn Iron feels,
 And to the blacksmith's art its toughness yields.

So the obdurate heart, by favours won,
 At last repents the evil it has done;
 Fain would obtain thy friendship, pardon sue
 For all the malice it has borne towards you.

HON. W. CUST.

Thus the "sword" of De Guileville typifies the wrath of God against sinners; whilst the "flame" (by

And hilles hih ek spyce and greyn

And in to trees ek I brynge
 Ther lusty blofmys whyte and rede
 And in ther branchys ek I sprede
 Abrood my frefshe vestymentys
 And with myn vncouth paramenty
 I clothe hem wyth buddys glade
 Wych with wynter ded I made
 Thorgh confreynt of hys coldys kene
 Tornyng to russet al the grene
 Wt fretyng of hys bytter cold
 But al that wynter maketh old
 And with hyr stormys doth desteyne
 I make yt frefshe and yong ageyn

And off the feld the lyllyes ffayre
 And off herbys many a payre
 That winter slowh with hys confreynt which the hardest metal is melted) shows the softening influence of Divine Grace upon the heart, even although it may previously have been as inflexible as steel.

¹ See Woodcut VI.

² Maistresse suis des elemens
 Des impressions et des vens
 De faire variations
 Et diuerses mutations
 En feu en air en terre en mer
 Riens en estat ne laisse efter
 Tout faiz tourner et tendre a fin
 Tout varier soir et matin
 Nouvelles choses faiz venir Et vieilles choses departir
 La terre de mes robes est
 Paree en prin temps ie la vest
 Demy party dherbe florie
 De rouge de vert de foucy
 Et de toutes belles couleurs
 Quon peut trouuer en belles fleurs Aux arbres donne paremens
 Et contre leste vestemens
 Puis si les refais despoiller
 Contre liuer pour les tailler
 Autres robes autres cotelles
 Telles comme deuant nouvelles
 Il nest bruyere ne geneste
 Nabriceau que ie ne reueste
 De mes robes bien floretees
 Et trefgaient desguisees
 Oncques ne vestit salomon
 Tel robe que fait vng boisson
 Et ce que fais par loisir fas
 Car hastiue ie ne suis pas Toute mutation ie he Qui est faicte en hastiue

^a Vitell. C. xiii.
 f. 53. b.

^b Gen. i. 11.

And made hem of ther colour ffeynt
 Ffor no cost me lyft not spare
 But thar rycheffe I do repare
 Whan hete off cold hath the victorye
 That Salomon in al hys glorye
 Was not clad I dar wel say Half so freshly as ben they Nor hys robes wer nat lyche
 Off colour to the bushes ryche
 Wych Ive clad in my lyffree
 Fro yer to yer as ye may se
 And who that taketh hed ther to Al thyng that men se me do
 I do by leyser by and by
 I am not rakel or hasty
 I hate in myn oppynyouns
 Al sodeyn mutacyouns

^a Vitell. C. xliii.
 f. 57.

¹ GRACE replies thus to NATURE:—^a

Ye refemble who loke wel
 On to the wylde swyn savage
 Wych that rometh in hys rage
 In the woodys large and grene
 And ne kan no ferther sene
 But to the frut that he hath founde
 And the acornys on the grounde
 Ffor to felle hys hongry mawe
 Ffor he in hys swynys lawe
 Off hys rudnesse bestial
 Ne kan no ferther se at al
 Toward the hevene nor the tre
 Wher he receyveth hys plente

^b Do not have a grudge against.

That bar the frut for hys repaft
 Al that ys from hys mynde pafst Ffor to the acorn al only
 And to hys ffoode fynally
 Yt set hys herte and al hys thought

• • • • •
 Undoth your eynde derke and blynde
 The eynde of your entendement
 And by good avysement
 The lyddys off your eye unclofeth
 Knoweth wel and nat supposeth
 I am lady hool and entere
 And ye be but my chamberere Thys shal ye fynde al openly
 Yiff ye look avysely
 Leve your wordys hih alofte
 And lerneth for to speke soffte
 And renounceth al your rage
 Ffor he sholde me don hommage
 Off justyce and equyte
 Ffor that ye holde ye holde of me

• • • • •
 Yiff the round firmament
 The planetys and ech spere
 And the bryht sterrys clere
 Yiff I hem maade to cesse echon
 Than wer your power clene agon
 Abatyd and set asyde
 Wher upon lat be your pryde
 And grutchet nat ageyne me^b
 Syth I ha the foveraynte
 Lordshepe and domynacion
 And yt were abusyon

¹ GRACEDIEU.

• • • • •
 Vous semblez bien le porc sauuaige^c
 Qui mangeue souuent au boscaige
 Le glan et point na le regarde^d
 Dont il luy vient ne de quel part
 La teste en terre et les yeulx
 Et point en hault ne vers les cieulx
 Regarde dont ce bien luy vient
 Au glan tant seulement se tient
 Aussi point ne me congnoissez
 Ou ne me congnoistre faignez
 De qui tenez tout ce quaez
 Ne rien sans moy vous ne puez

^c f. 14.

^d Matt. vii. 6.

^e Psal. cxxiii. 2.
 Philipp. ii. 13.

^f Isaiah ii. 12.
 Isaiah xxix. 16.
 Job xxii. 12.

Ouurez doncques discrettement
 Les yeulx de vostre entendement^e
 Car se bien ouurez la paupiere
 Moy la dame et vous chamberiere
 Trouuerez tout apertement
 Et lors parlerez doucement
 A moy et hommaige ferez
 De quanque de moy vous tenez
 Car ainssi comme esiaie dit^f
 Cest grant orgueil et grant despit
 Quant encontre le charpentier
 Se veult la coignee redrecier
 Et quant de son potier se deult
 Le pot et arguer le veult
 De facon et se plaint de luy
 En luy disant ie te reny

Appendix.

XV

Sych as wryteth yfaye ^a
 And in his book doth specefye
 A gret despyte both fer and ner
 Yiff ageyn the carpenter
 The ex ^b were bold by surquedye ^c
 Ffor to holden chaumpartye
 Yt wer a thyng ageyne kynde
 In holy wryt as ye shal fynde
 And a thyng off gret dysdene
 And yiff the pot sholde also feyn
 To the potter that hym wrouhte
 And hys forme about brouhte
 Yiff he pleynede ^d off hys makyng
 Touchyng hys fasson and werkyng
 Yt wer a thyng not convenable
 And evene lyk in cas semblable
 Ye argue ageyne me
 Wych in effect nat ellys be Ffor al your sotel ^e argument
 But myn handwerk and instrument
 Wych I ha mad to helpen me

* * *

Anoon thys lady dame nature
 Whan she had herd hyr tale along
 Knowyng that she had do wrong
 And hyr compleynt to specefye
 Was ygrounded on folye
 Ful humbly in hyr degre
 She fyl anoon upon hyr kne

Nature cryede MERCY

The fyrst word that she gan seye
 Nature off mercy gan hyr preye
 And with humble cher and fface
 She confessede hyr trespae
 And to hyr sayde most mekly
 Ma dame quod she ful folylly ^f
 I have governeyd me to yow
 And ful ungoodly spoke now
 Wher off I repente fore

And certys I ne shal no more
 Offende yow in no manere
 Nouthur in speche nor in chere
 So that of mercy and pyte
 Ye wyl as now forgyve yt me
 That I ha don al outterly
 And that ye wyl so graciously
 Off alle that ever me afterte ^g
 No thyng reservyn in your herte
 Only off your benygne grace
 But clene forgete my trespae

Repentance and Charity ¹ then appear to the Pilgrim, the former holding a hammer and rod in her hands, and a broom in her mouth, and she thus describes herself:—

² I am the ffayre louyd but lyte ^h
 Off my port demur and sad
 Debonayre and gretly drad
 Off fele folkys ⁱ that me se
 And trewly I am ek she Now adayes lytel preysyd
 And yet ful worthy to be reysed
 Off prys to folkys that be dygne ^k
 Rygerous and ful benygne
 To al that be vertuous
 Happy also and right greuous
 The graciously of synal pleasaunce
 I am called dame penaunce
 I fmyte hertys vp and don ^l
 And make hem by contrycion
 Wyth salte terys thys the cas
 To forewe crye and feyn allas
 That they euere dyde amys
 Ye shal yt fynde and thus yt ys
 Off ther trespacys they repente
 And feyn in al ther beste entente
 A Lord God how off thy grace
 How shal I han off my trespae Allegement withoute the ^m

^a Ifaiah.

^b Axe.

^c Proudly to wage war against the carpenter.

^d Complained.

^e Subtle.

^f Stupidly, confusedly.

^g Escaped.

^h But little beloved.

ⁱ Many.

^k Worthy.

^l Down.

^m Thee.

¹ See Woodcut VII.

² Je suis la belle peu amee ^a La debonnaire trop doubtee
 La peu prisee peu plaissant
 Penitence suis appelee
 De ce maillet iamoliay

Jadis saint pierre et le froissay
 Qui si dur pierre avoit este
 Que son bon maitre avoit nie

Et grande amertume et douleur
 De la magdalcine ainsi fis

^a f. 15.

^a Job x. 20.

^b Ezra x. 11.

^c Guilt.

^d Soft.

^e Matt. xxvi. 75.

^f "Juice" of his weeping, i. e. his tears.

^g Strong.

^h Luke vii. 38.

ⁱ Isaiah i. 16.
Prov. xi. 20.
Ezek. xvi. 30.
Ecclus. iii. 26;
vii. 17.
Jer. xxiii. 29.

^k Matt. xii. 43, 44.
Romans x. 10.
Psalm xxvi. 8.

^l 2 Cor. vii. 1.

^m Walk.

ⁿ Eccles. vii. 2.

^o f. 14. b.

But thow grant off thy pyte ^a
That I may al outterly ^b
Off my gyltes ^c ha mercy
So that I do no more amyfs
Now good lord thow grante thys
Thus I maken hem crye offte
And with thys hammer I made soffie
Seyn petrys hert and yt to brak
That yt wente al vnto crak
Wych ffyrft was hard as any ston
But I made yt nefshe ^d anoon
Whan he hys maystee ffyrft forfook
But whan I the hammer took I smet hym so with repentaunce ^e
And made hym nefshe with penaunce
That the jows of hys wepyng ^f
Yffede out in compleynyng
Off verray forewe and bitterneffe
He felt theroff so gret dystresse
In hys greuous hertly ^g peyne
And also Mary Mawgdelegne ^h
With thys hamer I smot so
That hyr herte I rooff atwo Wych was fulhard with synnes old
But wt strokys manyfold
I made hyr tender yt ys no doute
That the terys yffede oute

Repentance adds that the heart of man ⁱ resembles an earthen vessel full of loathsome corruption; this vessel must be broken in pieces, for it is not sufficient to look upon sin in the abstract, but each particular sin must be done away with. There is also a worm contained therein, called the "worm of conscience." None could endure to live gnawed by the fangs of remorse were not the hammer of contrition capable of destroying it.

Repentance thus explains the use of the broom, ^k saying, "In the house of which Grace is the mistress, and I the attendant, there are six doors; five ^l of admission:

' La porte dodorer, doyt ou descouter, Du goust, du tast, et du regard.'

"By all these sin can enter; so if I were to turn my broom in their direction my labour would be lost; but the sixth is the single outlet for transgression:

' Cest la bouche au pauvre pecheur.'
' Thys gate ys called the mouth of man.'

"Towards this door I employ my broom to sweep, heap up and clean.

' Et mon balay si est ma langue
Et mon furgon et ma palangue.'

' And my bysme that al thys doth Ys myn owne tonge in soth.'

"For, as long as I am servant ⁱ to Grace, I am determined to allow nothing to remain within the dwelling that can injure it, even in the smallest hole or crevice."

^m I go to every place
Now here now ther aboute I trace ^m
By verray pleyn confession
Withoute fraude or deception
Ther may nothing me skape fro
For gracedieu wyl yt be so ⁿ
For she ne wyl nowher abyde
But yt be cleue on euery syde
Whos chambre and whos mansion

¹ These five gates are the same as those described in Bunyan's "Holy War."

"The famous town of 'Mansoul' had five gates, in at which to come, out at which to go, and these were made likewise answerable to the walls,—to wit, impregnable, and such as could never be opened nor forced but by the will and leave of those within. The names of the gates were these: Ear-gate, Eye-gate, Mouth-gate, Nose-gate, and Feel-gate."

There is an interesting little work on this subject, entitled "The Five Gates of Knowledge," by George Wilfon, M.D., F.R.S.E.

² Rien na dedans ne sus ne ius ^o Ne en anglet ne en pertus
Que tout ne vueille remuer
Cerchez tracer et hors geffer
Par entiere confession
Sans fraude et sans deception
Car ainsi le veult gracedieu
Qui na cure fors de net lieu Et conscience est la maison
La chambre et habitation
Ou elle fait sa demourree
Quant la trouue ainsi balice

Dwelling and habytacion
Ys trewly withoute offence
A verrey clene conscience

Part of the text from Rom. x. 10, is here referred to: "with the mouth confession is made unto salvation;" but the context is omitted.

"The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach; that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."—Rom. x. 8—10.

Bunyan shows more strikingly that the Gospel must first influence the heart, before the mouth can utter its feelings. "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

"Then the Interpreter took Christian by the hand, and led him into a very large parlour that was full of dust, because never swept; the which, after he had reviewed a little while, the Interpreter called for a man to sweep. Now when he began to sweep, the dust began abundantly to fly about, that Christian had almost therewith been choked. Then said the Interpreter to a damsel that stood by, 'Bring hither the water, and sprinkle the room;' which, when she had done, it was swept and cleansed with pleasure.

"Then said Christian, What means this?"

"The Interpreter answered, This Parlour is the heart of a man, that was never sanctified by the sweet grace of the Gospel: the dust is his original sin, and inward corruptions, that have defiled the whole man. He that began to sweep at first is the law; but she that brought water, and did sprinkle it, is the Gospel. Now, whereas, thou sawest, that as soon as the first began to sweep, the dust did so fly about, that the room by him could not be cleansed, but that thou wast almost choked therewith; this is to show thee, that the law, instead of cleansing the heart, by its working, from sin, doth revive, put strength into, and increases it in the soul, as it doth also discover and forbid it, but doth not give power to subdue. Again, as thou sawest the Damsel sprinkle the room with water, upon which it was cleansed with pleasure; this is to show thee, that when the Gospel comes in the sweet and precious influences thereof to the heart, then, I say, even as thou sawest the Damsel lay the dust, by sprinkling the floor with water, so is sin vanquished and subdued, and the soul made clean, through the faith of it; and consequently fit for the king of glory to inhabit."

The Pilgrim's Progress.

Repentance thus continues in De Guileville:—

Vnto my byfme^a [human hearts] submitted be¹
Off lownesse and humylyte
That they be swept clenly at al
And that the hammer breke smal
Ffyrst by trewe contricyon
And verrey iuste confession
Than a noon my yerde^b I take
And amendys for to make
By repentaunce in divers wyse
With my yerde I hem chaftyse
Put hem to penaunce of entent
To brynge hem to amendment

Various modes of penance^c are then enumerated, such as visiting the poor and sick, performing pilgrimages, fasting, &c. Repentance says that no sin can be passed over without punishment by rods; those must be beaten who have consented to commit sin.

² And therefore thys yerde I holde
Wych namyd ys of iuste refon

¹ Sa mon balay soubzmis il est^d
Et se bien balye en est
Et quant le voy ainsi contrit
Et bien confes comme iay dit
Adonc pour le bien chaftier

De mes verges le batz et fier
Peine luy donne et batement
Afin que preingne amendement
² Des verges se voulez le nom
Dictes font satisfaction

^a Besom or broom.

^b Rod or staff.

^c Dan. iv. 27.
Ecclus. xvi. 12.
Pf. xxxvii. 28.

^d f. xvi. b.

^a Sufficiently.	Trewe satysfaccion And fothly yiff I shal not feyne Satysfaccion ys to feyne Affeth ^a that ys mad for synne And that a man haue withinne As myche forewe and repentaunce As he hadde ffyrst plefaunce	Himself at the last Supper, which He partook of with his disciples when he took bread and blessed it, and she gives the assurance that it will sustain the faith of all his followers ^b who partake of this Sacrament in remembrance of Him, but of which none can be worthy recipients who have not first submitted to her inflictions and become contrite, and cleansed from their offences."
^b Rom. xi. 5. Luke xxii. 19.	Here the doctrine of Penance appears distinctly as something more than Repentance; and the superior views of Bunyan shine forth with the splendour of the Gospel in contrast with the human idea of self-justification by mortifying the flesh, and a strange aspect is presented of the high Christian privileges of Prayer, attending to the wants of the poor, the sick, and miserable, when they are classed as part of the punishments of sin.	Again; we must observe that the view taken by De Guileville of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is partial: he speaks of the bread only, whereas our Saviour says,
^c Long ago.	Our Saviour says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." In De Guileville, Repentance beautifully adds, "that she is commissioned to succour all the weary and heavy laden; to those pilgrims anxiously trying to follow the narrow path she offers the consolation appointed by our Lord	"Take, eat; this is my body. And He took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins."—St. Matt. xvi. 26—28.
^d f. xvii.	Car satisfacion vault tant Que faire assez ou tout autant De peine sans nul contredit Comme au peche eut delict ¹ CHARITE. Je suis la mere des vertus ^d Celle qui reueft les gens nudz Qui saint martin fis despoillier Pour poure vestir et aïsier Je suis nourrice d'orphelins Hosteliere de pelerins Qui les maux dau truy fais les myens Et a tous communs sont mes biens Sans laquelle saint paul disoit ^e Que riens nauoit qui ne mauoit Et quelque bien faire ne peust Si non quavecques foy il meust Aussi certainement ne fait Car sans moy nest aucun bien fait Mon nom se sauoir le voulez Charite vous mappelleriez ^f Car charite tient en cherte Ceulx quautres ont en grant vilte Je repais les gens familleux Et visite les langoureux Je suis celle qui dau truy bien	Suis ioieuse comme du mien Celle qui debonairement Seuffre tout et paisiblement Celle qui descouter nay cure Sufurracion ne murmure Celle qui oncques ne mesdis Dau truy ne a au truy messis Et non pour tant si ay ie fait Aucuns maux faire sans meffait Se point auez ouy parler Du roy iesus et racompter Comment vout homme deuenir Et pour les hommes mort souffrir Sauoir deuez que celle suy Qui faire luy fis tel ennuy Car du ciel ie le fis descendre Pour la vostre humanite prendre A lestache le fis lyer Et despines le couronner Les bras fis en la croix estendre ^g Et son coste percier et fendre Les piedz et les mains atacher En la croix luy fis et ficher Sang fiz yffir de son corps tendre Et luy fiz son doulx esperit rendre Tous lesquelz maux souffrir luy fis Pour vous tous qui estiez perils Quant en enfer vous ala rembre ^h
^e 1 Cor. xiii. 3.
^f 1 Cor. xiii. 6, 7.
^g 2 Cor. v. 14, 15.
^h Eph. i. 7.

CHARITY.¹

* * * * *

I made feyn martyn yore agon^c
Al be that he hadde but on Hys mantel to kutte a tweyne

And dyde al hys byfy peyne
 To clothe the poore wych nakyd stood Myd off the gate devoyde of good
 I am noryce^a of al nedy
 And I herberwe^b commonly Al pylgrymes in ther nede
 And I am she yt ys no drede
 That ffele as myche harm in me
 Off other ffolkys aduerfyte
 As they hem fylff that yt endure
 And al my goodys I ensure Be common unto every whyht
 Whan they ha nede as yt ys ryht
 Seyn poul sayd ek in hys wrytyng
 Off vertu he hadde no thyng
 Withoute that he hadde me
 And that he myghte in no degre
 Withoute me do no good dede
 And trewly who taketh hede
 No good dede nor good entent
 Ys worth but yiff I be present
 Among estatys hih nor lowe
 And yiff ye lyst my name knowe
 I am callyd dame charyte
 That haue al folk in certe
 And other that folk haue in despyt
 Hem to cheryfshes ys my delyt
 I feede folk that hongry be
 And part^c with hem off my plente
 And vyfete hem that lyggen seke
 And dwelle with folkys that be meke
 And for no coste I do not spare
 To be glad of the welfare
 Off euery other maner whyht
 As off myn owne of verray ryht
 I am she that patiently
 Kan suffren and benygne
 Alle forwes wel apefe
 And I am she that kan don efe

Al hevynesses to recure
 And I am she that set no cure
 Off grucchyng nor detraction
 Ffor thys ys my condicion
 Harm to spek neueradel
 But off ech man to sey wel
 Wych I holde in gret vertu
 And yiff ye haue off Cryft Ihū
 Any maner Remembraunce
 I made hym for to ha plesauce
 Off mercy as I reherfe kan
 Ffor loue to become a man
 And taken your humanyte
 And suffren by humylyte
 Deth for your sake and passion Made hym fro hevene come a don
 And suffren ek as yt ys founde
 To a pyler to be bounde
 And tendure that lovd most fre
 With sharpe thornys crownyd be
 And sprede hys armys on the rood
 And for your sake shede hys blood

I made hym for your sake
 Tendure off entencion
 To make your redempcion
 That wer for synne loft echon
 And to helle I made hym gon
 To sette hem out that lay ther bounde
 The devels power to confounde
 Wych hadde grievyd man so fore
 And I shal telle you euermore
 How thys kyng most fovereyne
 To forn hys passion and peyne
 And hys tormentys wonder stronge
 Or he the deth sholde underfonge^d
 He forgatt nat off entent
 Ffor to make hys testament
 The forme ther off to endyte

^a Nourisher.

^b Lodge or entertain.

^c Share.

^d Underwent.

Et de la mort denfer defendre
 Ce sont les maux que iay fait faire
 Sans peche voir et sans meffaire
 Or vous diray que ce roy fist
 Avant que ces paines souffrist
 Quant il vit la mort approucher
 Ne vult pas en oubly laisser
 Que son testament il ne fist

Il mappella ie luy escrips
 Et en ceste forme le mis
 Testament de paix est nomme
 Et le vous ay cy apporte
 Afin que ses lois vous faiches
 Et ce que vous en duynt ayez
 Je le vueil lire or lescoutez
 Et entendez se vous voulez

^a f. xvii. b. "Ces trois lettres sont assavoir."

^b Peace.

^c Is or shall be.

^d Feels no symptom of pain.

^e One.

He callede me yt to wryte
Ffor to make the forme bettere
My sylff wrot yt euery lettre
And namyd yt yt ys no les
The trewe testament off pes
Wych to for you alle I brynge
That ye may ha knowelychyng
That maner thyng ther on doth sue
And what to you ther off ys due
I wyl yow reden the sentence
Yiff ye wyl given audyence
So thys yt ys herkneth echon
As I shal her reherse anon
The testament¹ off cryft Jesu

One clause of this will or testament bequeaths to mankind Pax Triplex—"triple tranquillity." The three things signified by the three initial letters, at the three corners of a right-angled triangle, formed by the stem and one limb of a Latin cross are—X, the initial of Χριστός, "Christ;" A, of Anima, "the soul;" P, of Proximus, our "neighbour." When these three are properly disposed towards each other, there is a firmly established peace of mind; since they indicate the whole duty of man's life, viz. his love to God and his neighbour.²

And overmore thys lettrys thre^a
Ar tooknys that in unyte
He sholde ha verray love and pes^b
With thre thynges douteles
He that he hath poceffioun
Off thys jowell most off renoun
And he to whom cryft hath yt take Sholde keep for hys sake
Pes with every maner whyht
And fyrst above as yt ys ryht
Wher as the X condygnely Ys set alofte as most worthy
By wych ziff yt be espyed
I am trewly sygnyfied

In tookne that noon be rekkeles
Fyrst to haue parfyt pes Wyth god and me byth^c al on
And may neuer assonder gon
And also as I shal devyse
That he in no maner wyse
Ne do no thyng in no degre
Wych that sholde dysplese me
And yiff yt happe off neclygence
Ageyn me that he do offence

Ther by ys pleyntyly understonde
The fowle of man with whom ech whyht
Sholde ha pes of verray ryht
So that in a manhys thought
^a Synderesis^d ne grucheth nouht Thorgh no trespase nor offence
By no remors of consience
Lat every man tak hed herto
And with your neyhebour also Ye most ha pes and unyte
Wych ys ytokenyd by the P
And ys yset fyrst off echon
And that ye sholde be al on
The xample techeth yow ful wel
Yiff ye confydren everydel
How ye bothen in o^e lyne
Stonde and may yt not declyne Lyneally yt ys noon other
As brother verrayly to brother
Nature wyl that yt so be High and lowh off o degre
Bothe tweyne ymade lyche
The pore man and ek the ryche
At the 'gynnyng as ye shal lere
Al forgyd of one matere
Touchyng ther fyrst orygynal
And bothe tweyne be mortal
The ton the tother in certeyne
They be but wermes bothe tweyne

¹ The testament is given in the analysis.

² See Woodcut VIII.

³ The following lines appear on the margin of the MS. (f. 74, b.) in explanation of the term "synderesis:"
Synderesis to speke in pleyne

Ys as myche for to feyn
By notable description
The hiher party of Refon
Wherby a man shal best discerne
Hys consience for to governe

For al shal passe by o passage
And by on hole off gret streihtnesse
Poverté and ek rycheffe
Al goth o way bothe gret and smal
Excepcion ys noon at al
To helpen in thys streihthe nede
Wherfor euery man take hede
Thorgh pryde to be nat rekkeles
Thys ryche jowell callyd pes
To kepe yt wel and lose it nouht
And euery man in herte and thouht
Do hys dyllygent labour
To ha pes with hys neihebour
As roote off al perfeccion
Vp to parforme the patron
Off vnite and sothfoft pes
Tendure and lasten endelès
So as yt ouht off iust refon
As tookne off the tabellyon
Wyth wych in pes and vnyte Al testamentys sholde be Sygned and markyd commonly
And ek confermyd openly
And tovyng her thys wryt present
Callyd off cryft the testament
Wyth tookne of tabellion
I marke off entencyon
• • • •

GRACEDIEU speketh:

Thys lady goodly spak to me^a Kom ner my sonne tak hed to me
Loo her yiff I shal nat feyne
Thylke ryche Giftyys tweyne Wych I behihte^b whylom to the
And thou shalt not deceyved be Loo her a Skryppe and a Bordon
The wych of hool entencyon
I gyv to the now kep hem wel
Confydre the maner everydel
How they be ryht necessarye
To forthre the^c thou shalt not tarye
To helpe the in thy vyage
And to spede thy pylgrymage
Thow shalt off hem haue ay gret nede
Yiff thou lyft thy journee spede

Nedful to pylgrymes all
And seyt^b thy skryppe thou shalt calle Wyth oute wych may nat be Brouht aboute no journee
Nor vyage that may awaylle
Ffor thy bred and thy vytaylle
Ther in thou shalt alway conserue
And all tymes thou shalt obserue
Thys skryppe wel in thy bandon^d
In euery cyte and euery ton
In al thy moſte feythful wyſe
And also for to auctoryſe
Touchyng thys skryppe callyd ffeyth
Herkne what thapostel ſeyth
In a pyſtel^e that he endyteth
And to the Romayns pleyndly wryteth
The ryhtful man withoute ſtryff
By this skryppe lat^f hys lyff
Thys to feyne that ffeyth off ryht
Giveth lyff to euery maner whyht
As Abachuch that hooly man
In hys wrytyng reherſe kan
The ſeconde chaptyl off hys book
Who ſo lyft lyft vp hys look
And thys skryppe withoute wene^g
Off hys colour mot be grene
Wych colour who ſo look a ryht
Doth gret comfort to the ſyht
Sharpeth the eye yt ys no dred
And ſo doth ffeyth who taketh hed
Yt maketh pylgrymes glad and lyht
With hem abydyng day and nyht
And in ther weye I dar reporte
Gretly doth hem recomforte
For good pylgrymes everychon^h
On pylgrymage wher they gon
Only ffeyth doth hem fuſtene
By example as the greene
The gentyl colour glad and lyht
Giveth clernesſe to the ſyht
Whan the grene al withoute
Ys ſpreyntⁱ with dropys rond aboute
Off red blood who kan entende
Then the ſyht yt doth amende
Fful gretly I dar wel feyne
Ffor ther ys drope noon certeyn

^a Vitell. C. xiii. f. 99, b. f. xxiii. b. "Voy cy leſcharpe et le bourdon."

^b Promiſed.

^c Advance thyſelf.

^d Keep in thy power.

^e Epistle.

^f Leads.

^g Doubt.

^h Every one.

ⁱ Sprinkled.

^a "Mixed," or "mingled with."

^b Shed in purity,
i. e. the green of the scrip was shaded with the pure blood of the martyrs.

^c "Perfectly," or "once for all."

^d Will.

^e Saints who suffered thus are gone.

^f Scabbard.

^g Gone or vanished.

^h On earth.

ⁱ Jeopardy.

^k Vitell, C. xiii.
f. 108. "Or en-tens ben de ce bourdon."

^l I advise thee.

^m Jesus Christ.

But yt ys worth and off more prys
To pylgrymes that be wyse
Than outhere perle or margeryte
And as I dar ryht wel endyte
Yt ys mor ryche and precyous
Mor off valu and vertuous
The bloody dropys whan they be spreynt
Vp on the grene and ymeynt ^a
To make a man mor strong and lyht
And tofforce with hys syht
Than any other ryche ston
Ffor to rekne hem euezechon
The green ys good in specyal
Whan the rede ys meynt withal
Off blood for pleyntly the rednesse
Wyth that was shad in clenness ^b
Off glorious martyrs longe agon
That spente her blood and leste noon
But suffrede al the vyolence
And the mortal ek sentence
Off Tyrantys tyrannye
And sparede nat platly ^c to dye
Ther legende so wryt and seyth
Ffor to dyffende Crystys ffeyth
Ffor wych vp on thys skryppe off grene
The bloody dropys ther ysene
Shewyn in conclusion
Ther martyrdom ther passion
Off ther owne volunte ^d
Only to given vn to the Verrayly an exemplayre
Wherfo ever thou repayre
To suffre deth for crystys sake
Rather than thou shust forsake
Thy skryppe in any maner wyse
Off wych thou hast here me devyse Ffor seyntyng ^e wych that suffrede so
I wot ryht wel that they be go
To paradys and entryd in Ffor the swerd off cherubin Wych whilom at the gate stood
Ys so blonted with her blood
That yt ys I dar wel seyn
In the skawberk ^f vp ageyn
But now adayes yt stant so
Hooly seyntyng ben all ago ^g

That wer so myghty and so strong
And dradde nat to suffre awrong
Ffor the ffeyth yt to dyffende
Her lyff her blood ther on to spende
Redy they wern and that anoon
But nowh aunerthe ^h ther ys nat on That wyl hym putte in jupartye ⁱ
Crystys feyth to magnesye
Nor make myhty refistene
Ageyn Tyrantys by dyffence

But ffyrst tak hed off the Bordon ^k
How yt ys good in ech seson Ffor he nat fallett commonly
That leneth ther on stedfastly
Ffor wych thou shalt as yt ys ryht
With al thy force and al thy myght
Ther on reste what so be falle
Trewly thou shalt nat falle
What perillous passage that thou go
As longe as thou takest hed ther to
And tavoyde a way dyspeyr
Wher so thou goft in foul or ffayr
Or what fortune the be falle
Good hope alway thou shalt yt calle
Thys the name off thy bordon
Off trust and trewe affection
Wych ys callyd Esperaunce
After the speche vfyd in fraunce
And the maner of that language
And look alway in thy passage
That thou holde the wel ther by
And theron reste feythfully
In peryllous pathys wher thou wende
And by the pomellys as the ende
Holde the strongly I the lede ^l
Ffor they shall in al thy nede
Suftene the thou falle nouht
The hiher pomel yiff yt be souht
Ys Ihū Cryst ^m haue hym in mynde
And in Scripture as thou shalt fynde
He ys the merour cler and bryht
Wyth oute spot bothe day and nyht
In the wyche a man by grace
May beholde hys owne fface
In wych merour as I tolde

All the worlde ouhte beholde
In wych also men may fynde
All thynges wrouht be kynde^a Refte vpon hym with herte and thouht
And go furly and dred the nouht
And to hys helpe alway calle
And trust wel thow shalt not falle

Com ner, quoth she, and ha no drede^b
Look up on hih and tak good heede
Upon thys perche^c the harneys se Wherwith that thow wylt armed be Pertynent to thy vyage
And needful to thy pylgrimage
Then saw I helmys and habergiouns
Plate and maylle for champiouns
Gorgetys ageyn al vyolence
And jakkes^d stuffys of defence
Targetes and sheldys large and longe
And pavys^e also that wer stronge
For folk to make refistene
Talle that wolde hem don offence

Thys helm callyd attempraunce^f
Ys nedful in thy dyffence
Ffor to make refistene
At nose at ere and at the bybi^g
That yt hem kepe and clofe aryht Ffor this helm for assurance Wych ys called attempraunce
As worthy and noble off fame
Seyn Poul gaff therto a name
And callyd yt ffor gret delyt
The helm off helthe and off profyt
And commanded men tak hed
Ffor to sette yt on ther hed
As ffor ther chef salvacon

Ffor yiff thys helm be mad aryht
Yt shal not have to large a fyht
Lyft some arowe sharpe ygrounde

Entre myghte and gyue a wounde
And at the erys ek also Thow mustest taken hede ther to That yt be not too large off space
Lyft that by the same place
Entrede by collusion
Som noyce off fals detraction

Tave a swerd ek by thy fyde^h
A better was ther neuer founde
Off stel forgyd whet nor grounde
Wych shal ynowh suffyse
The to dyffende many wyse
Yiff any enemy the assaylle
Outher in skarmush outhere bataylle
I the ensure in al thy nede
Whyl thow hast yt thow shalt not drede
Off non enemy nor no dystresse
The name off wych ys Ryhtwyfnesse
A better swerd was neuer wrought
Off prince nor off kyng ybought
For the swerd off good *Oger*ⁱ Off Rowland nor off Olyver
Was not for to reknen al
Off valu to this swerd egal
So trusty nor so vertuous
To folk in vertu coragous
Ffor this swerd haueth so gret myht
To ryche and poore for to do ryht

MEMORY.²

The Pilgrim, fearful that he shall forget the good advice which Grace has given him, summons to Memory to carry his armour. He is surprised to see the latter without eyes, and complains that she will not be of use to him; but he is assured that her eyes are at the back of her head, and that she is the treasurer of much knowledge; for although she cannot foresee, she has complete information of the ^a Are reproduced or represented.

^b Vitell. C. xiii. f. 114, b. f. xxx. b. "Or regarde."

^c Pole or rod.

^d Stuff for making furcoats. A "jack" was a buff jerkin worn by soldiers.

^e Bucklers.

^f Vitell. C. xiii. f. 121, b. f. xxxii. b. "Le heaulme, &c."

^g Mouth.

^h Vitell. C. xiii. f. 123. f. xxxii. b. "Par son nom, &c."

¹ Ogier, Roland, and Oliver, were three of Charlemagne's peers. (Vide Biog. Univ. sub. v "Oger," et alibi.) The two latter were so equally matched in strength and valour that it was doubtful which was superior: hence the saying, in reference to the blows they inflicted, "of giving a Roland for an Oliver," which has passed into a proverb in our own language.

² See Woodcut XI.

^a Eph. vi. 11.

^b Zech. ix. 8.

^c Lukexi. 21, 22.

^d 1 Peter ii. 11.
Gal. v. 16—19.
Rom. vii. 22, 23.

^e Matt. vi. 25.
Gen. ii. 7.
1 Cor. ix. 27.

^f Vitell. C. XIII.
f. 144.

^g f. xxxvi. b.

^h f. xxxvii. b.

ⁱ Ecclesiasticus
ii. 18.

^k James ii. 26.

past, and will recall to him her advice, and prove a most useful attendant. Grace, however, warns the Pilgrim that he is not the good warrior ^a who requires his armour to be carried; but he who wears it continually, and who is always ready with it in time of need, even in his own house ^b where he is never free from warfare. She also informs him that in the country to which he is going he will be always encompassed with enemies, and that the sling and stones (she had given him) would not be sufficient to defend him unless he was accustomed to his armour, without requiring the assistance of his armourbearer; for it would excite scorn and derision were he to allow her to carry it who was so much weaker than himself.

The Pilgrim inquires the reason why, after taking off his armour, ^c he should experience so much pain in putting it on again?

Grace ^d bids him remember she had told him he was too fat, and too stubborn.

The Pilgrim acknowledges that she had admonished him of this—but thinks that it should be a reason for his being stronger and more valiant.

She next inquires whether he is aware who he is? whether he is single or double? whether he has not another besides himself to nourish, govern, and maintain?

The Pilgrim replies, that he is astonished at her question, that she must be aware that he has only himself to govern and take care of.

Then she says, “Understand, and listen diligently, for I will instruct you otherwise: know that you nourish one who is your greatest enemy—that you clothe him, and feed him with the costliest viands—that ^d you are his slave; but, notwithstanding, he deceives you, both when he is moving and when he is at rest.

‘Soit en allant ou quant il gist.’

He it is who will not allow you to carry your armour, and who is always your adversary when you would do any good thing.”

The Pilgrim inquires his name, that he may revenge himself on his enemy by killing him.^e

Grace replies, that he is not permitted to do that, but that he may punish him and give him pain, by making him work, fast, and submit to penance, without which he will never succeed in revenging himself upon him. She adds, that if he had well understood the matter he would have seen that Repentance ^a was the mistress and chastiser, who, with her rods, would cause his enemy to become a good servant; and she tells the Pilgrim that he ought to desire that more than the death of his foe, for he is lent to him to lead him to the haven of eternal life, and to preserve him from peril; that this enemy is his body and his flesh, which can be called by no other name than that of a foe.

The PILGRIM replies:

Ma dame quod I what may thys be ^f
Whether dreme I other ellys ye

¹ GRACEDIEU.

¶ Ne te souient dit elle pas
Que ie te dis questoye trop gras
Par trop remply et par trop peuz
Ainsi quencord es et trop druz

LE PELERIN.

¶ Bien men souient dis ie mais tant
Estre ien deusse plus puissant
Et plus fort aux armes porter
Comme il me semble et a marmier

GRACEDIEU.

¶ Scez tu dist elle qui tu es
Se tu es seul on se double es

Se nul fors toy as a nourrir
Na gouverner na maintenir

² Penitence est la maistresse ^h
Et de luy la chastierresse ⁱ
Bailles le luy si le batra
Et tellement le chastiera
De ses verges que bon seruant
El le fera doreinauant
Et ce dois tu mieulx desirer
Et mieulx vouloir et procurer
Que tu ne dois faire la mort
Car baille test pour luy a port ^k
De vie et de salut mener
Et de tous perilz le gecter
Cest le corps et la chair de toy
Autrement nommer ne le doy

Appendix.

XXV

Ffor as fer as I kan espye^a
I merveyll off your fantasye
Or by what weye ye wolde gon Ys nat my body and I al on I trowe yis and ellys wonder
Or how myhte we be assunder Ys he a nother than am I
I pray you tel me ffeythfully
And me declareth the sothnesse
Withouten any dowbylnesse
What that ye mene verrayly Ffor her ys no whyht but ye and I
Except only my chaumberere Wych that solweth ous ryht here
A noon to me doth synifye
Wher yt be trouth or fayrre^b
Shal we shold ben on or tweyne
Tel on a noon and doth not ffeyne

Grace inquires of the Pilgrim whether he would wish to abide always where he could have joy, repose,^c and his own will.

Ma dame quod I dysplese you nouht
I say ryht as lyth^d in my thought
Myn hertys ese for to fewe^e
I wolde abyde and not remewe Ffor myn ese euer in^f on Rather than thenys for to gon
Ffor yt ys profytable tabyde
Wher that a man on euery fyde
Ffyndeth vn to hys plesaunce
Soiour^g with oute varyaunce

Ys that verrayly quod she Soth that thow hast sayd to me
I understonde by thy language^h
Thow woldest leue thy pylgrymage
And platlyⁱ fettyn hyt asyde
Only for reste and ther a byde

Ma dame quod I for my dysport
Wher I find ese and connfort
I wolde a byde a whyle there
Tyl I sawh tyme and good leyser^k

To me she sayde a noon ryht than O wrecche o thow vnhappy man

Tak hed and be more ententyff
How here in thys mortal lyff^l
Thogh that a man renne euermore
He may never haft hym to fore^m
To kome to tymelyⁿ to that place
I putte^o caas that he ha space
Fforth to procede day by day
At good leyser vpon hys way
Her vpon I axe the Yiff thow haddyst lyberte
Joye merthe and al solace
Woldestow fro thylke place
Yiff thow haddyst fre choys at wylle
Remeven or abyde styll

Allas quod I what may I feyn
I kan nat wel answer ageyn
But o thyng I wot ryht wel
The cyrcustancys euery del
Confydryd vp on euery fyde
Par caas rather I sholde abyde^p
Than ben to hasty to procede^q
Tyl I sawh I muste nede
Goon forth off necessitye
In caas than wolde I haste me

Quod Gracedieu yt semeth wel
Thow hast not lernyd euery del
Thynges nouter hih nor lowe
Syth thy sylff thow kanst not knowe
The wych a boue all other thyng
Ys the beste knowelychyng
That man may han in thys lyff here
And yiff thow lyft platly lere^r
To knowe thy sylff ys bet knowing
Than to be Emperour outhur kyng
And for to knowe al syences
Practykes and experyences
Or to han al the rycheffe
Off thys world in sothfastnesse

And I shal telle the ffeythfully
In thys matere trewely
What that I fele in my entent
Shortly as in sentement
The body fyrst be nat in doute

^a Col. ii. 5.

^b Illusion.

^c Isaiah lxvi. 13.

^d Lieth.

^e Follow or procure.

^f i.e. Remain in one (place).

^g Sojourn.

^h Ps. lxxiii. 26.

ⁱ Entirely.

^k Leisure.

^l Gal. vi. 10.

^m He can never hasten too eagerly.

ⁿ Too soon.

^o Even granting.

^p Gen. xii. 1, 2.

^q Psal. xlix. 20.

^a Gen. i. 27.

^b Gen. ii. 15.

^c To have dwelt or lived.

^d Job x. 8.

^e Kindred or relationship.

^f Psal. lxxxiii. 6.

^g Murmurs.

^h Arose.

ⁱ The fruit resembles the tree.

^k Profit or advantage.

^l Rom. viii. 13.

^m An action in the field or pitched battle.

ⁿ Beat him down.

Off wych I spak clofyd withoute
Whan yt ys fro the segregat
Dyffeveryd and separat
Than off the I dar wel seyn
And afferme yt in certyn
Off god thow art the portraiture
Thymage also and ffygure^a
And off nouht yiff thow kanst se
He ffourmede and he made the
That lord ffyrst in thy creaunce
To hys owne refemblaunce
And ymage wych of lyknesse
Most dygne and worthy off nobleffe
A prent to speke off dygnyte
He myghte nat ha set on the Mor worthy nor more notable Than to hym syllff refemblaible
He gaff to the off hys goodnesse^b
Cler fyght off refon and ffayrnesse
And off nature to be mor lyht
Than any ffoul that fleth in flyht
And never to deyen ek withal
For he made the immortal
Permanent and even stable
And tadwellyd immutable^c
Yiff thow not haddyst off entent
Forfetyd hys commandement
Than haddystow thorgh thy renoun
Excellyd in comparyfoun^d Comparyfoun myghte noon ha be
To thy nobleffe and dygnete
Off hevene nor erthe in certeyn
Nor to declare and speke in pleyne
Bryd nor outhere creature
Except off angelys the nature
God ys thy fader tak hed her to And thow art hys sone also Most excellynge off kynrede^e
That euer was withoute drede
Most noble and off gretest style
Ffor off Thomas de Guilleveyle
Thow art not sone on that party
I dar afferme and seyn trewley^f
Who euer gruchche^g or make stryff
That he nat hadde in al hys lyff
To seke in al hys nacyon

No sone off swych condycyon
Douhter nouthere yt ys no fable Off kynrede so notable
But off engendrure bodyly
Thow haddyst off hym thy body
Wych kam off hym by nature
The wych body I kan assure Ys to the tak hed her to Thyn enmy and thy gretest foo
On that party yiff thow lyst se
Roos^h fyrst the grete enmyte
Nature hath yt so ordeyned
But yt thorgh vertu be restreyned Ffor the ffrutⁱ what euer yt be Bereth the carage off the tre

• • • • •
And her vp on yiff thow lyst se
The same lord he made the Off his goodnes for thy prowth^k
And in the body wher thow art now
He the putte as I dar telle
Ther a whyle for to dwelle^l
And ther tabyde thys the cheff
Ffor tassaye the by preffe
And by thy port also dyscerne
How thow sholdest the governe
Prudently both fer and ner
And yiff thow dydest thy dever
To dyffende thy party
Yiff ye wolde holde chaumpartye^m
Ageyns the in any wyse
Ffor as I shal to the devyse
A twyxe yow yt ys no ffaylle
Ther ys werre and strong bataylle
And contynuelly ther shal be But so falle thow yelde the
And put the in subiection Thorgh hys fals collusion
By hys deceyt and flatrye
Evere to haue the maystrye
Over the in conclusioun
Why! he hath domynacioun
But yiff that thow as yt ys ryht
Dyscomfyte hym by verray myght
And by force betⁿ hym don
Lyk a myghty champyon

Than shal tow bothe fer and ner
 Over hym han ful power
 That he shal neuer for no quarelle
 Ageyns the dor rebelle
 To interrupte thy entente
 And trowly but thy sylff assente
 He shal neuer be so bold
 The to withstonde as I ha tolde
 He ys Dalyda thow art Sampson ^a Thow art strong as by refon
 Sturdy on thy feet to stonde
 Suffre hym nat the to withstonde
 Nor over the to han maystrye
 Ffor no glosing nor flatterye
 And yiff thow tak hed ther to
 She ne kan nat ellys do
 But with flatterye and deceyt
 Nyht and day lyn in a wayt
 And swych wach on the doth make
 To make thyn enmyes the to take
 At mescheff whan they may the fynde
 And yiff thow wilt she shal the bynde Sher^b thyn heer whyl thow dost slepe
 But thow konne thy sylven kepe
 And overmore I the ensure Thy counsayl al he wyl dyscure^c
 And thy secretys eveichon
^dTo pyghystres ^e that be thy ffoon^f
 Other frenschepe truste me
 He hath pleylny noon to the Know thes and to my speche entende
 How thow wylt thy sylff dyffende
 Be nat to thy confusion
 Deceyved as whylom was Sampson

• • • • •
 Quod Gracedieu a noon to me
 What thow hast sayd tak hed quod she
 And understond ffyrst in thy syht
 By the sonne that shyneth bryht^g
 Thy soul cler in especyal
 Wyth inne thy body wych ys mortal
 Off thys mater we haue on honde
 Ther by thy soule I understonde
 Thy body yiff thow kanst espye^h
 Ys dyckⁱ as ys a clowdy skye
 And lyk also who can dyscerne

To a murky blak lanterne
 And nat^k for thy I dar expresse
 Men may sen thorgh the bryhtnesse
 Off the soule yt ys no doute
 And the clernesse fer withoute
 Clerkys recorde yt in ther skolys^l
 And other wene^m that be but ffolys
 In ther follysh fals demyng
 That al the cler enlumynyng
 Wher off that pore skye lo
 Wherwyth the fowle ys shrowdyd so Eclypsed off hys ffayr bryhtnesse
 And ne were the gret darknesse
 Off thys skye who loke a ryht
 The fowle sholde han so cler a syht
 At oⁿ look fro the oryent
 To sen in to the occident
 Ffor off the body truste me
 The eyen no verray eyen be^o
 But lyk to glas I dar wel feyn
 Wher thorgh the clere soule ys feyn
 And outward with hys bemys bryht^p
 Giveth ther to clernesse and lyht
 Ffor the fowle who taketh hede^q
 Off bodyly eyen hath no nede

• • • • •
 But for thy sake a noon ryht^r
 I shal assayen and provyde
 Thy body for to leyn asyde^s
 Ffro the take yt yiff I kan
 That thow mayst conceyve than Off hym hooly the governaunce
 And what he ys as in substaunce
 But thow mustest in certeyn
 After sone reforte ageyn
 To thyn olde dwellyng place
 Tyl that deth a certeyn space
 Schal the despoyle and make twynne^t
 Ffro the body that thow art inne
 And Grace dieu a noon me took I not wher that I slepte or wook
 And made for short conclusion
 My body for to falle adoun
 And after that a noon ryht
 Me sempte that I took my flyht
 And was raviished in to the hayr

^a Judges xvi. 4.^b Sheer or clip thine hair.^c Discover or betray.^d Judges xvi. 18, 19.^e Philistines.^f Foes.^g Ecclef. i. 5.^h 1 Cor. ii. 14.ⁱ Thick.^k Notwithstanding this.^l Schools.^m Suppose.ⁿ One.^o Matt. v. 16.^p Luke xii. 35.^q Mark viii. 17, 18.^r Vitell. C. xiii.
f. 152, b.^s Isaiah xlii. 16.^t Separate thee.

^a Whether.

^b Touched its head, so as to be sure that it was my body.

^c Prov. xii. 28.
Prov. ix. 13—15.
Prov. ii. 13.
Prov. ix. 10.
Prov. xix. 1.

^d 1 Cor. xii. 4—6.

^e Vitell. C. xiiii. f. 174, b.

^f Polifber.

^g Ecclef. vi. 7.

^h f. xlii. b.

ⁱ James v. 3.

A place delytable and ffayr
And me thought ek in my fyht
I was nat hevy but verray lyht
And by beholdyng was so cler
That I sawh bothe fer and ner
Hih and lowe and overal
And I was ryht glad with al
Al was wel to my plefaunce
Save a manner dysplefaunce
I hadde off o thyng in certyn
That I muſte go dwelle ageyn
With inne my body wych that lay
Lyk an hevy lompe off clay
Wych to me was no forthryng
But perterbance and gret lettyng
Thyder to reforte off newe
Tho wyft I wel that al was trewe
That grace dieu had feyd to me
And thanne I went for to fe
Wher ^a the body ſlepte or nouht
And when I hadde longe ſouht,
Taſtyd ^b hys pows in certeyne
And gropyd euery nerff and veyne
I find in hym no breth at al
But ded and cold as a ſton wal
And when I dyde al thys eſpye
Hys gouernance I gan deſye
Tho Grace Dieu ſpak unto me
Leſt up thyn eyen beholde and ſe
Yiff thou konne now clerly
Knowe in erthe thy gret enmy
He that wolde nat ſuffre the bere
Noon armys nor noon harneys here
The Pilgrim arrives at a path which branches into oppoſite direſtions : to the right is ſeated Induſtry, and to the left Idleneſs; the “Pelerin” inquires the way to the city of Jeruſalem, beyond the ſea (of this world). In- duſtry replies that the oppoſite path conducts

¹ LABEUR.^h

¶ Certes diſt il ainſi eſt il ¹
Ainſi que le fer eſt en peril
Du lacier dont riens on ne fait
Que toſt apres rouille ne ſoit
Auſſi l'homme qui oyſeux eſt Et riens ne fait en peril eſt pilgrims into great peril, but that the one wherein he is, was always diſcovered to be ſafe to thoſe who continued in it; but that many turned out of their way, through the hedge which led them back into the other path,^c (the ſtile in By-path meadow.) The Pilgrim then inquires why he carries on the humble employment of net-maker. He replies, that he ought not to be blamed for ſo doing; that it is not every one who can make gold crowns:^d

“Chacun ſi ne peut pas forger Couronnes dor ou lor changer;”

that an honeſt trade is not to be deſpiſed, however humble, provided it is purſued with diligence, ſince labour was good for its own ſake; adding the following ſimile:—

THE NATTE MAKER.¹

So as a ſwerd I dar expreſſe ^e
Y ffadyd ys off hys bryhtneſſe
And off hys clerneſſe ek alſo Whan men take noon heed ther to But ruſteth and ffareth al amys
Ryght ſo a man that ydel ys
And kan hymſylf not occupye
By reſemblance thou mayſt eſpye
Into hys fowle thus I begynne
The ruſt off vyces or off ſynne
Doth a way withoute geſſe
Off all vertu the clerneſſe
But exerceye in ſentence
And contynual dyllygence
Born vp with vertuouſ labour
Ys bet than any fourbyſhour ^f
Ageyn the ruſt off ydelneſſe
Off vertu to gyue perſyft clerneſſe

The Pilgrim expreſſes ſurpriſe ^g at his an-

Quaſſez toſt bien fort enrouille
Ne ſoit par vice et par peche Mais quant il ſe veult occuper
Et en labeur exerciter
Celuy vault vng bon forbiffeur
Et vne lime et vng limeur
• • • • •

swer, saying, he had looked upon him as a silly old man—to which Industry replies, that it was generally^a the case that he who did not wear fine clothing^b was held in little estimation; and that a foolish man, well dressed, was more prized^c than a poor man with much learning; he adds:—

¹ And for to speke my general
I sustene and ber up al
And yt ys I ech hour and space
That makyth the tyme shortly pace
Without envy or perturbatione Ffor I am he by remembrance
Syth Adam the appple ate
Which with labour and with swet
Have yove^d ffoode and pasture
To every levynge creature
Bothe to best and ek to man
Syth tyme that the world began
Where off I am no thyng to blame
And my verray ryhte name
Ys without mor farmon
Labour and Occupation

The Pilgrim then inquires of the young person seated on the other side, which were considered the best paths for pilgrims.

But I knowe be wel certeyn^a Yiff I shall the trouthe seyn Thys the weye most royal
Called the kynges hih^b weye
And her withal I dar wel seye

¹ Et touteffois ie suis celluy
Qui a trestous donne du pain
Et sans moy pieca mort de fain
Fust dadam tout le parente
Rien ny vaulsist larche noe
Je suis celluy qui fais passer
Le temps briefment sans ennuyer^k
Celluy a qui est ne tout homme
Pour le mauuais mors de la pomme
Car appelle suis par mon nom^l
Labeur et occupation

² OYSIUETE.^m

¶ Bien scay et pour vray te dyⁿ
Que cest cy le chemin royal Ou gens de p'e et de cheual
Et pelerins passent le plus
Bien vois quil est le plus batus

Yt ys most esy off passage
To ffolkys old and yonge of age
Smothe and pleyn yt ys no nay
And most yused nyght and day
And by thys ylke same weye Gladly ffolkys I conveye
Swich^o as love paramours
Toward the woode to gadre flowers
Soot^f rosys and vyolettys
There of to make hem chaplettys
And other flourys to her plesaunce
And in thys weye I teche hem daunce
And also for ther lady sake Endyte lettrys and songys make Upon the glade somerys days
Balladys roundelys vyrelays
I teche hem ek lyk ther ententys
To pleye on sondry instrumentys
On herpe lut and on gyterne
And to revele at taverne
With al merthe and mellodye
On rebuke^g and on symphonye
To spende al the day in ffablys
Pleye at the ches pley at the tablys
At treygolet and tregetrye
In karrying^h and in jogoloryⁱ
And to al swych maner play
Thys the verray ryhte way

The Pilgrim inquires her name and condition. She replies that she is the daughter of Idleness, that she is lazy, tender, and soft:

Par luy ie meyne gens au bois
Cueillir fleurs violettes et nois
En esbatement en deduit
En lieu de ioye et de delict
Et la leur fais oyr chanfons
Rondeaux balades et doux sons^o
De herpes et de simphonies
Et plusieurs autres melodies
Dont long le parlement seroit
Qui toutes dire les voudroit
Et la leur fois ie veoir danseurs
Jeux de basteaux et de iogueurs
Jeux de tables et deschiquiers
De boules et de mereilliers
De cartes jeux de tricherie
Et de mainte autre muserie

² Bunyan and Spenser both adopt the simile of the "highway."

^a 1 Cor. iv. 12.

^b Luke vii. 25.

^c Tobit iv. 7.

^d Given.

^e Such.

^f Sweet.

^g Rebeck, a kind of violin.

^h Legerdemain.

ⁱ Jugglery.

^k Pf. cxxviii. 2.

^l Ecclef. xl. 1.

^m f. xlv.

ⁿ Prov. xxviii. 10.

^o Prov. iv. 14, 15.

^a Eph. v. 3, 4.

^b Prov. xvi. 2.

^c Ecclus. xxxiii. 27.

^d See the description of "Pen-nance" given above.

^e Job xxxvi. 13. Eccles. xi. 10.

^f Vitell. C. XIII. f. 233, b.

"Suis oyseuse, tendre, et succree."

She says that she loves better to play with her gloves than any other occupation; ^a that she is the friend of his body when he sleeps or wakes—saving it from trouble, ^b and seeing that it is well taken care of; she warns him to be-ware which way he takes—that the one oppo-site is long and narrow, and that hers is wide, which is apparent to everyone.

The Pilgrim inquires who had placed the hedge between the paths; for if that were not there it would all appear as one and the same road.

Idleness answers that it was placed there by a great persecutor of pilgrims, ^c named Re-pentance, who held all those who went her way in great hatred, and that when they wished to turn into the other they could not, without being pierced with thorns, and other-wise wounded; that Repentance came there to make brooms, rods, and hammers; for that she was severe beyond measure, and therefore she was little loved and praised. ^d

The Pilgrim calls to his remembrance the lady with the broom and rods, answering ex-actly to this description, and he considers it better to turn into the "Nat-maker's" road before he passes the hedge which was so grievous and prickly. ¹

In journeying on, the Pilgrim, after en-counter and escaping from Gluttony and Lust, meets Wrath ^e and ² Tribulation.^f He is assailed by the former, who is represented as a four-looking ugly old woman holding two stones in her hands—one of them called De-spote, the other, Animosity—and a saw in her ¹ Y is called the letter of Pythagoras, (not because he invented it—for Palamedes invented it from the flight of cranes—but) because he used it to signify the bifurcation of the good and evil ways of men.

Novimus Pythagoram Samium vitam humanam divisisse in modum litteræ Y scilicet quod prima ætas incerta sit, quippe quæ adhuc se nec vitia nec virtutibus dedit: bivium autem litteræ Y a juventute incipere quo tempore homines aut vitia, i. e. partem sinistram, aut virtutes, i. e. partem dextram sequuntur.

Servius, Comment in Virg. Æn. vi. 136.

Dicunt enim humanæ vitæ cursum, Y, litteræ esse similem; quod unusquisque hominum, cum primum adolescentiæ limen attigerit, et in eum locum venerit, partis vbi se via findit in ambas hæreat mutabundus, ac nesciat in quam se partem potius inclinet. Si ducem nactus fuerit, qui dirigat ad meliora titubantem, hoc est, si aut philosophiam didicerit, aut eloquentiam, aut ali-quid honestæ artis, quod evadat ad bonam frugem; quod fieri sine labore maximo non potest: honestam, acco-piosam vitam, disputant, peracturum: Si vero doctorem frugalitatis non inuenerit; in sinistram viam, quæ melioris speciem mentiatur, incedere; id est, desidæ, in-ertæ, luxuriæ se tradere; quæ suavia quidem videntur ad tempus, vera bona ignorant; post autem amissa omni dignitate, ac re familiari, in omnibus miseriis, ignomi-niaque victurum. Nos igitur melius, et verius, qui duas istas vias, cæli, et inferorum esse dicimus, quia iustis immortalitas, iniustis pœna æterna propozita est.—Lactantius, vi. 3.

For they say that the course of human life is like the letter Y; because every man, when first he shall have touched the threshold of youth, and shall have come to that place where "the way splits itself into two parts," may stick doubting, and know not to which part he would rather bend himself. If he shall have found a guide who can direct a faltering (man) to better things, that is, if he shall have learned philosophy, or eloquence, or anything of any honourable art, he may reach fruit for good (purposes), which cannot be done without very great labour, they maintain that he will pass through an honourable and wealthy life: but if he shall not find a teacher of temperance, (they say) that he goes to the left-hand road, which falsely assumes the appearance of a better (road), that is, that he gives himself to sloth, ignorance, (and) luxury; which indeed seem sweet at the time to him who knows not true good; (but after-wards) all rank, family property, being lost, (they say) that he will live in all misery and disgrace.

Wherefore we affirm better and more truly that those ways are two, of heaven and hell, because immortality is placed before the just, and eternal punishment before the unjust.

Et tibi quæ Samios diduxit litera ramos, Surgentem dextro monstravit limite callem.

Perfius, Sat. iii. l. 56, 57.

But you have pass'd the schools; have studied long,
And learn'd the eternal bounds of Right and Wrong,
And what the Porch, (by Mycon limned, of yore,
With trowsered Medes) unfolds of ethic lore,
Where the shorn youth, on herbs and pottage fed,
Bend o'er the midnight page, the sleepless head:
And sure, the letter where, divergent wide,
The Samian branches shoot on either side,
Has to your view, with no obscure display,
Marked, on the right, the strait, but better way.

Gifford's Perfius, Sat. iii. l. 99—108.

Quumque iter ambiguum est et vitæ nescius error
Diducit trepidas ramosa in compita mentes.

Ibid. Sat. v. l. 34.

Pythagoræ bivium ramis pateo ambiguis Y.

Ausonius, Idyl. 348-9.

² See Woodcut XII.

mouth, the use of which she thus describes :—

¹This sharp sawe in verray dede
Wych that callyd is hatrede
And with thys sawe tak hed her to Ys I sawe and kut a two Perfyt loue and unyte
Concord and fraternyte
Off charyte and allyaunce
Maad also dyssveraunce
Yt cut a two ech vertu
In Jacob and Esu
Thow mayst se a playn fygure
Yiff thow rede the scrypture
Thys sawhe made hem gon affonder
The ton her the tother yonder
And long tyme affonder were
And thys sawh also I bere
As thow seest her in my mouth
Wher ever I go both est and south
Off entent be well certeyn
Whan ever I pray or shold seyn
My pater noster nyht or day
Than I sawh my sylf away
Ffrom the hooly trynnye
I preve ^a yt as thow mayst se
I pray God off entencyoun
Off my synnes to han pardoun
Evene lyk to my socour
As I forgyve my neighbeour
In my prayere ek I sette
That he forgyve me my dette
As I forgyve folk thoffence
That to me dyde vyolence
And to conclude yiff yt be souht
I forgye her off ryht nowht

Than must yt folwe off equyte
My prayere ys ageyns me
To ward my sylf by mortal lawe Wrongly I tourne thys ylke sawhe
In the wych ys no profyt
Worthepe honour but fals delyt
But gret damage and harm ful offte
And he that sholde stonde alofte
Holdyng thys sawhe thys the caas
He ys benethe and stonde most baas
In sygne wheroff who lyst knowe
Sathanas he ys most lowe

Wrath also carries a hawk, representing Murder, with which she girds her agents—citing, for example, Barabbas,^b and the tyrants who formerly put the martyrs to death.

“ Beste sauuaige non pas hom Cil est qui porte ce fauchon ;”

“ (A wild beast, and not a man, is he who bears this hawk.)”

Wrath warns the Pilgrim to defend himself against her assaults ; to which he answers, that he will resist unto the death.^c

Descending the hill whence he had come, he then perceives Tribulation, who commands him to lay down his staff and protect himself with his shield and sword. She tells him that she carries the instruments for forging—only requiring an anvil upon which to forge him a crown—the crown of life ;^d and that his not possessing this, renders him in peril of being destroyed by the first stroke of her hammer, which is Persecution^e—by which Job was severely tried, and by which those who are not ^a Prove.

^b Mark xv. 7.

^c Col. iii. 6.

^d 1 Pet. i. 6, 7.

^e 2 Tim. iii. 12.

¹ Et est celle see ^f nommee Ffayne de laquelle est see Union de fraternite
Et alliance dunité
En iacob et en esau
Tu en as la figure veu
Je les fiai et les desioncs
Et lun de lautre enuoyay loinge
Aussi ay ie maint autre fait
Dont raconter auroit trop plait
Aux dens ceste see ie porte
Afin que se la pater nostre
Je dy que ie soie bien see

De dieu le pere et separee
Car quant le pry quil ait mercy
De moy et me doint tout ainu
Mes meffais comme les pardonne
Et qua nully ie ne pardonne ^h
Bien scay que contre moy ie prie
Et deuers moy tourne la fie
En ceste fie a si trespeu
De bien de louenge et de preu
Que qui la tient et maistre en est
Au deffoubz et au plus bas est
En signe que le sathenas
Le tendra en la fosse bas

^f f. lxi. b.

^g Matt. v. 22.
Gen. xxvii. 41.

^h Matt. vi. 12.

^a Prov. i. 32.
¹ Chron. xxi. 1.
Job ii. 7.

^b Job i. 21.
Rom. v. 3.
Ecclus. xxxv. 20.
Psalm. lxxi. 20.

^c Vitell. C. xiii.
f. 241.

^d Tongs.

^e Stern.

^f Vitell. C. xiii.
f. 241, b.

^g f. lxvii. g.

^h Pf. cxvi. 3, 4.
Hab. iii. 16.

ⁱ Job vi. 10.

well armed are confounded, even unto the death.^a The Pilgrim remembers that St. Bernard had advised him in all trouble to resort for aid to the Virgin Mary, to whom he makes his prayer. Tribulation then ceases to assault him, finding he has not given up his staff, and has sought a good and sure refuge.^b

How much more scriptural than this is Bunyan's "key of promise," which unlocks the door of Doubting Castle!

Tribulation describes herself in De Guilleville, as being like the wind which scatters some of the falling leaves and drives others into various corners for refuge, and speaks as follows:—

¹Som like leavys I whirl away^c
Wych by the ground ful lowe lay
But thoro my commissioun
I ha tourned them up se doun
And many another ek also
With my trouble and with my wo
And with my toonges^d I hem chace
Agayn the Lord whann they trespace
That I cause hem for to fle
To God on hem to han pyte
And some I have ek caused offte
To fien up to the sterre^e aloffte
To whom thow fleddyft with gret labour
Ffor to have of hym succour
Comfort and consolacioun

¹ TRIBULATION. ^g

¶ Je suis dist elle tout ainfi
Que le vent qui maine a labry
Et destourne les fueilles cheues Ou les rachasse vers les nues^h
A refuge tay fait aler
Et vers les nues regarder
Qui es une fueille seichee
Et deiectee et desuoyee
En cestuy chemin maleureux
Ou nest pas (dont meschief est) seulz
Ceulx qui bien ne vont ie rauoye
Et point aise ie ne feroye
Jusqua ce que trouue auroient
Ung destour ou se musseroient
• • • • •
Les vngs chaffe a la pitie dieu
Ou a grace qui tient son lieu
• • • • •

Ageyn al tribulacioun

• • • • •
I have to the Partly declaryd myne offys
As thow mayst fele yiff thow be wys
Without any gret outrage
Don to the or gret damage
Withouten any wordes mo
A dieu farewel for I wyll go
And be war in thy passage
That thow do well thy pylgrymage
And in thy way be iust and stable
Lych a pylgrym good and hable

The Pilgrim then prays that God will guard him from any worse evil, for he feels that he has no power in himself, that his only reliance is on his staff (faith); but that as Tribulation has threatened to return again, he cannot trust his own heart should she do so, for it is wavering, and only too ready to follow different designs, and he proceeds in the following words:—

²And as I stood allone al fool^f
Gan compleyne and make dool
Havyng no thyng up on to reste
Save as me sempte for the beste
I lenede me on my bordoun
For thogh that Tribulacioun
Wer departyd in certeyn
She sayde she wolde kome ageyn

Mon deuoir iay fait a present
Sans oultrage tresdoulcement
Ailleurs ie vois va bon chemin
Com doit faire bon pelerin

² LE PELERIN.

Or me garde dieu de pis auoirⁱ
Car en moy nay aucun pouoir
Ne sur moy rien ou ie me fie Fors le bourdon ou ie mapuye
Se tribulation sen va
El dit bien quelle reuiendra
Se ne me tiens a mon refuy
Ou me suis mis et mon abry
Mais certes ie voy bien et scay
Que tenir ie ne my pourray
Pour mon cueur qui trop volaige est
Et a diuers propos tost prest
Ainsi comme seul meditant
Men aloye mon frain rongcant
Vng val pfond en vng boicaige

But I wherfo I woke or slepte
 With my refuge ay I me kepte
 To have by hyr protectioun
 Ageyn ech tribulacioun
 But for that I by gret owtrage ^a
 Was of my port wyld and savage
 Dyvers ^b of my condycioun
 And al day turnynge up and down
 Full of chaunge and doublynesse
 Having in me no stabylnesse
 And whyl I wente thus musynge
 Withinne myselff ymagynynge
 I fyll anoon in my passage
 In to a woode ful savage
 Me thouhte the weye peryllous
 And by to pafs encombrous
 I knew not what was leste to doone
 For in a woode a man may soone
 Lose hys weye and gon amys
 But he be war ^c and thus yt ys
 As pylgryms know wel ech on That on pylgrymage gon
 Passage they fynde narow and streyth
 Brygantys lyn ek in aweyt
 And wyld bestys many on Tassayle pylgrymes wher they gon

Bunyan expresses a similar idea thus:—
 "Now at the end of the Valley of Humiliation was another, called the Valley of the Shadow of Death, and Christian must needs go through it, because the way to the Celestial City lay through the midst of it. Now this valley is a very solitary place; the prophet Jeremiah thus describes it: 'A wilderness, a land of deserts and of pits, a land of drought, and of the shadow of death; a land that no man (but a Christian) passeth through, and where no man dwelt.' (Jer ii. 6) . . . About the midst of this valley I perceived the mouth of hell to be, and it stood also hard by the wayside. Now, thought Christian, what shall I do? And ever and anon the flame and smoke would come out in such abundance, with sparks and hideous noises, (things that cared not for Christian's sword, as did Apollyon before,) that he was forced to put up his sword, and betake himself to another weapon, called 'All-Prayer,' (Eph. vi. 18.); so he cried in my hearing, 'O Lord, I beseech Thee, deliver my soul.' (Psalm cxvi. 4.) Thus he went on a great while; yet still the flames would be reaching towards him: also he heard doleful voices, and rushings to and fro; so that sometimes he thought he should be torn in pieces, or trodden down like mire in the streets. This frightful sight was seen, and these dreadful noises were heard, by him for several miles together; and, coming to a place where he thought he heard a company of fiends coming forward to meet him—he stopped, and began to muse what he had best to do. Sometimes he had half a thought to go back; then again he thought he might be half way through the valley; he remembered also how he had already vanquished many a danger, and that the danger of going back might be much more than for to go forward; so he resolved to go on. Yet the fiends seemed to come nearer and nearer—but when they were come even almost at him, he cried out with a most vehement voice, 'I will walk in the strength of the Lord God;' so they gave back, and came no farther."

¹ After his encounter with Tribulation, the Pilgrim is assailed by Avarice and Necromancy,

^a By the great violence I had suffered.

^b Restless.

^c Unless he take care.

Horrible lait et moult sauuaige
 Vy deuant moy par ou passer
 Me conuenoit sauant aler
 Je vouloye dont esbahy fu
 Car par bois on a tost perdu
 Sa voye et mains perilz y font
 De pelerins qui tous seuls vont
 Larrons et mains bestes sauuaiges
 Souuent en croz et tapinaiges

Y font pour nuire aux trespasans
 Et leur faire destourbiers grans

¹ The narrative from this point is taken from the MS. Tiberius A. vii. of which mention has already been made. Vitellius C. xiii. is unfortunately lost after the meeting of Tribulation with the Pilgrim; but the story is continued in Tiberius A. vii. (which is also a translation of portions of De Guilleville's "Pèlerinage"), and the coloured drawings are facsimiles from the latter MS.

when a messenger comes, sword in hand, (like Greatheart), to his rescue, and is represented in the illumination as a Crusader, with an escutcheon on his breast, and a red cross, or rood tree in the centre of it—he has then to encounter Hereſye, Sathan, Dame Fortune, Dame Idolatrye, Sorcerye, Scilla, Conſpiracyon, Gladneſſe of the world, or “world’s ffals ſolace,” (the Vanity Fair of Bunyan;) with each of theſe he has long colloquies, juſt as he has in De Guileville’s poem.

In his diſtreſs, by the ſide of a great water, he perceives a ſhip ſailing towards him, and preſently Gracedieu lands, and opens a fountain in the rock. In this water he is waſhed and purified, and ſhe offers him the choice of a refuge in various monaſteries; he makes his choice, like De Guileville, of the monaſtery of Ciſteaux.

GRACE.

Voy la Cluny voy la Ciſteaulx
Voy la Chartreux voy la preſcheurs
Voy la croifiez voy la mineurs
Su en vois la de toutes guifes

• • • • •

^a f. lxvii.

^b Ezekiel v. 17.

^c Daniel vii. 4.

^d Ezek. xxi. 11.

^e Mark ix. 42.

^f Avarice, according to St. Auguſtin, is an inſatiable and depraved luſt after vain-glory or anything elſe.

¹ Agiographie, or Hagiographie, ſignifies “Holy writings,” or “Scriptures,” and may have ſuggeſted to Bunyan his name of Evangelist.

² . . . ainſi que ie deſcendoye ^a

Dedans ce val et auloye
Une grant vieille deſguiſſee
Et autrement pis faconnee
Que par auant veu ie nauoye
Lors vy qui eſtoit en ma voye
Et ſembloit que la maſtendist
Et que courre ſus me vouliſt ^b
Nulle tel beſte en daniel ^c
Nainſi faiſte en ezechiel
Nen lapocaliſe ne vy
Et dont autant feuiſſe eſbahy
Boiteuſe elle eſtoit et boſſue
Et dun gros viel burel veſtue
Repetaiſſe de viel penneaulx
De vieulx haillons et pendillaux
Ung ſac auoit pendu au col
Et bien ſembloit que faire vol
El vouliſt car dedens boutoit
Grain et fer y enſachoit
Sa langue quelle auoit hors traicte
Ne leur contenance ainſi fiere
Luy aidoit moult a dedens meſtre
Mais meſelle tout elle eſtoit
Et furiſmee come ſembloit
Six mains auoit et deux moingnons

LE PELERIN.

Dame dis ie puis qua choiſ ſuy
Le chaſteau de ciſteaulx ieſly

Or according to the old Engliſh tranſlation :—

“ Madame quod I whan al ys fought
I have choſe off herte and thought
Off cyſtews in eche ſyde
In that caſtel to abyde.”

The porter of the gate then fetches him over in a boat. His name is Drede off God. He is welcomed by Charity. Leſſoun, who is the Lecon or Conſcelliere of De Guileville, gives him inſtruction. Agiographie ¹ ſhows him a wonderful mirror. Theſe are ſucceeded by Obedience, Diſcipline, Abſtinence, Poverty, Chaſtity, Prayer, Infirmity, Old Age, and Death.

² On deſcending into the valley, (after having been attacked by Tribulation,) the Pilgrim encounters an old woman, diſguiſed in ſuch a manner as he had never ſeen before, who flood

Deux des mains ongles de griffons
Auoient que moult ie redoubtay
Et quant gy penſe peur en ay
En vne de ſes autres mains
Ainſi que ſe deuiſt lymer frains ^d
Une lyme taillant tenoit
Et vne balance ou pezoit
Le zodiaque et le ſoleil
Pour meſtre en vente ſans rapel
Une eſcuſelle en lautre main Tenoit et vng ſachet a pain
En la quinte auoit vng crochet Et ſur la teſte vng mahommet
La fixefme main appuyee
Deſſus la hanche eclopinee
Auoit et ſouuant la leuoit
Juſqua la langue et la mangeoit
Celle vis ie tantoſt venir
Encontre moy pour maſſaillir ^e

AVARICE.^f

Par mahommet diſt elle a moy
Qui eſt mon dieu en qui ie croy
Je tatendoye a moye lauras
Mal y venis tu y mourras
Meſtz ius teſcharpe et ton bourdon
Et fay hommaige a mon mahon Ceſt celluy par qui ſuis louee Saige reputee honnoree in his path and appeared ready to run towards him—he says, “No such beast is described in Daniel, Ezekiel, or the Apocalypse.” She was lame and humpbacked, clothed in tatters, and having her head covered with old rags; a bag was suspended round her neck, evidently for the purpose of theft,¹ for she stuffed into it all sorts of fragments; her tongue was thrust out of her mouth: but her haughty countenance prevented her being able to collect many contributions, and she appeared therefore weak and miserable. She had six hands and two stumps—two of these were furnished with griffin’s claws, which the Pilgrim feared greatly; in another hand she held a file, just as though she were going to file horses’ bits—and scales, in which she weighed the zodiac and the sun; in the fourth she held a porringer, (escuelle), and a wallet for bread; in the fifth a hook—and on her head was a mawmet, or idol, of gold and silver—the metals she so much covets, and of which she speaks as follows:—

² AVARICE.

Or est temps que ie te parolle Finablement de mon ydole^a
Mon ydole est mon Mahommet
Le denier dor ou dargent est
Ou quel lempainte est figuree
Du seigneur de celle contree

Celluy sans qui nul nest prisé
En la terre nauclorize
Celluy par qui font honorez
Mains grans folz et saiges clamez^c
A luy fault que tu te soubmettes
Et de le servir tentremettes
Et puis apres honteusement
Mourir te fault et villement

¹ A similar description is given by Chaucer in the “Romaunt of the Rose.”—Vide Clarke’s Riches of Chaucer, vol. ii. p. 278.

“This Avarice held in her hand
A purse which hung by a band
And that she hid and bound so strong Men must abide wonder long
Out of the purse ere there came ought For that ne cometh in her thought
It was not certain her intent
That from that purse a penny went.”

AVARICE.

Now wole I speke of my mawmet^a
And of myn ydol that is so oold
Made of silver and off gold
In the which I the ensure
Is the ymage and the figure
And the prynte as thow mayst see
Off the lord of the contree

She next swears to the Pilgrim that by the “mawmet,” which she worships, she will have his life, and commands him to give up his scarf and staff, and to pay homage to her “mawmet,” through whose instrumentality she is accounted wise and honourable; to which also he must submit himself, and afterwards die miserably.

The Pilgrim inquires her name, to what nation she belongs, and the use of her idol to which she wishes him to render such abject service—for he accounts it unreasonable^b to serve or pay homage to a “mawmet,” which is blind, deaf, and dumb, he himself being of noble lineage.

Before, however, she consents to answer these questions, or to give him any further information regarding herself, she leads him to the top of a lofty embankment overlooking a wide plain. Here he beholds a large cathedral, built near a court-house,^c and sees, as it were, a personified game at chess. There were kings, rooks, knights, &c.—all of them with their

^a Levit. xxvi. 1.
Deut. xii. 3.
¹ Cor. x. 14.

^b Wisdom xiv.
8—11.

² Bunyan’s Demas. (Cf. 2 Tim. iv. 10.)

³ Mawmet, or mammet, a corruption of the word “Mahomet,” and hence applied to anything worshipped with idolatrous reverence. In De Guilleville’s poem the word mawmet is called the “ydole Mahomet,” meaning in this case the particular idol worshipped, i. e. “money.”

⁴ Escbiquier. This word is thus explained by Roquefort:—“Lieu ou s’assembloient les commissaires que le Roi, les Princes souverains ou grands vassaux envoioient dans leurs domaines. Dans la province de Normandie cette cour étoit permanente, et en 1250 on y portoit appel des sentences des baillifs.”—See also Du Cange’s Glossary, sub. voc. “Scacarium.” The word is introduced here as being radically connected with the game of “eschecs,” or “chess,” which is described, and the reader will at once recognize in it the origin of our Court of Exchequer.

^c Eph. v. 5.

^a Jer. vi. 13.
Pſalm lxxix. 1.
Judith vii. 29.

^b Prov. xix. 4.

^c Lament. i. 1.

^d Micah vii. 3.
Matt. vi. 19.
1 Tim. vi. 10.

^e Malachi iii. 5.
Hab. ii. 9.
Pſalm lxii. 10.

^f Zech. v. 3.

^g Hoſea vii. 1.

^h Exod. xxii. 15
Prov. xi. 26.
Pſalm lv. 11.

ⁱ Matt. v. 45.

swords drawn, and charging at each other with great violence. But not even thus were the combatants satisfied, for after having assaulted one another, they rushed savagely with one accord and laid siege to the cathedral—so violently, that no living creature could remain in or near it, and everything around was reduced to the most complete ruin. Upon the Pilgrim's complaining ^a to Avarice of the destruction of the cathedral, and of the horrible grief and destitution that must be caused thereby, she assures him that in very truth he has himself now seen how that she holds all mankind in subjection,^b that every one pays court to her, and that all kinds of business have reference to her—of this, she adds, Jeremiah prophesied when he said, "How doth the city sit solitary, that was full of people! how is she become as a widow! she that was great among the nations, and princess among the provinces, how is she become tributary!"^c "Jeremiah knew very well," she adds, "that all are my pupils—that king, and rooks,¹ (i. e. all potentates,) are subservient to me, and sooner or later all devote themselves to my handicraft."^d "I am named Covetousness," she continues, "because I covet the riches of others; and Avarice, because I guard too well mine own. I have six hands to seize with in six different ways, and to put my prey into my bag. The first is named Rapine;^e it seizes and kills pilgrims, and entraps its prey everywhere. My second hand, which is behind me, robs secretly; it is called Cut-purse; it forges seals and signatures—it is a false locksmith and treasurer; this hand despoils the dead, and keeps doors and windows closed till it has gleaned all it wishes for; and if it is the administrator of goods, or the executor of wills, it takes the largest portion to itself^f—and even those who travel by night are not free from its ravages, being conducted by false guides.^g

"The hand which holds the file is Usury;^h it hoards up corn in granaries till it is dear, and then sells it at double the price—it destroys life by little and little."

The Pilgrim inquires why she weighs the zodiac and the sun?

Avarice replies, that *Gracedieu*ⁱ has placed the zodiac round the heavens, and appointed the sun to shine equally for the good of all; but that this was displeasing to her, because she perceived that if she did not take possession of time, so as to regulate the bargains by it, she should be able to accomplish but little work with her file. For this reason, therefore, she had taken possession of the zodiac,² and had placed the sun in her scales for the purpose of weighing out certain portions of time, according to which she retailed her goods for periods of seven, eight, fifteen days, months, or even years; charging in proportion to the rate of interest to the which her customers were willing to give.

Some conversation then ensues between Avarice and the Pilgrim, as to some standing wood

¹ Still keeping up the metaphor of the game at chess, the "rook," or "castle," being the next piece in value to the king and queen.

² Grace de dieu iadis assist!
Entour le zodiaque et mist
Le soleil pour luire a chascun
Et pour estre au monde commun
A tous veult que general fust
Et que nully faulte nen eust
Or te dy que ce me despleut
Pour mon prouffit qui pas ny geut
Car bien vy que se ie nauoye
Le temps et ne laproprioye
A moy bien peu pourroye ouurer
De ma lyme et peu lymmer
Par quoy a moy iappropriay
Le zodiaque et vsurpay

Le temps et le soleil men fis
Et en mia balance le mis
Je men suis faicte pesereffe
Et par mon poix reuendereffe
Par iours le vens et par semaines
Par huitaines et par quinzaines
Par mois et par ans tous entiers
La liure ien vens vingt deniers
Le moys en vends neuf solz ou dix Et la semaine cinq ou six
Et selon que chascun en prent
Selon le poise et le vend

³ The zodiac was, of course, placed in the scales to typify the rate of interest to be charged by the month, each sign corresponding to a month, and the sun, as he completes his course through the zodiac in a year, was to show the rate of interest by the year.

Avarice XIII

Le nigromancien XIV

XV

XVI

Appendix.

which had been once offered to the latter by a woodman, at a very cheap price. To this Avarice replies, that the woodman, no doubt, wanted ready money, and therefore sold the wood standing, and at a low price; but that if the Pilgrim had waited for another year, the woodman would have asked him more—because the growth of the wood, and, consequently, its value, would have by that time increased. Hence in old times, she adds, wood was measured after it had been cut down, and it was sold according to the measure; and this, she says, is legitimate, since interest^a should be charged for time.¹ Wherefore, she does not believe that the woodman would have sold the wood standing to the Pilgrim, and still^b allowed it to stand where it did, without charging him according to the yearly increase of its value in proportion to its growth.

Avarice then goes on to inform the Pilgrim that the hand in which he sees the porringer “is called Roguary, and Mendicancy;^c it is always crying out for presents, and stuffs its scrip full of meat, which becomes foul and tainted before it can be consumed: it is ever begging for bread in the name of God—never paying for anything which it uses, or returning any courtesy that it may have received: it labours to support itself by shameful methods; and it is that which causes me to be clothed and covered with rags—for it pays no attention to anything but keeping fast hold of boxes, bottles, or anything else it can beg. This hand leads me to shady spots, where passengers, pilgrims, and grantees are in the habit of passing, and I obtain alms from some of them by feigning great distress, from others by pretending to be crippled, and in various other ways; but still, even although I have plenty, I curse them for not giving me more. This hand of mine also teaches gentlefolks how to beg—for they, too, know very well the art how to appropriate and secrete matters in their large gloves which they wear for hawking, and they know very well, too, how to take them off when they would filch anything. Thus they go, without shame or hesitation, to the monks, and beg for leather for their hawks’ hoods, and for their dogs’ leashes, choose garments, blankets, horses, chariots, ploughs, and many other things—all of which they sometimes pretend to borrow, but take good care never to return.^d And when they ask for these things, not only will they take no excuse from the monks for not lending them, but are even angry at being denied; as if, forsooth, the poor monks were only interested to supply them with means of living. You may suppose, then, how dear I am to the nobles, since it is I who supply them with the receptacles for that which they have begged; and how much, now that they have adopted this novel method of obtaining their living, they reverence me, since they are willing to serve me, even grey-haired old hag that I be.

“The hand with the crook,” she continues, “formerly belonged to Simon Magus, and to Gehazi, who made me a present of it; but the crook was given to me by the former. Now the letter S, which is the first letter of his name, is shaped like a crook; and this shows that I am the abbess of an ancient and dishonest abbey, which is called Simony,^e from Simon. This hand it is which admits robbers into the household of Christ Jesus, and false^f shepherds into his fold—men who for the sake of temporal gain would thrust aside and depose God’s grace, and who are ever ready to chaffer with the highest bidder. But in such transactions there must be two parties—the buyer and the seller. Now, the sellers are called Gebazites,^g and the buyers Simonites, although the latter term generally comprehends both classes.^h Such

¹ This is, of course, a sophistical argument used by Avarice to deceive the Pilgrim, by confounding the word “interest” with “usury;” for although the former, according to an equitable rate, was allowed even by the Mosaic law, the latter was strictly forbidden by

it. (See Levit. xxv. 14—37; Neh. v. 7; Psal. xv; Ezra xviii. 8; et alibi: and Cf. Matt. xxv. 29.)

² This curious distinction is made because Gehazi wished to receive a gift from Naaman as the purchase-money or price for his cure, (See 2 Kings v. 20—27,) xxxvii

^a Isaiah xxiv. 2.

^b Lev. xxv. 23—27.

^c Luke vi. 30.
Prov. xxviii. 20.

^d Ecclef. xii. 2
—4.
Deut. xxiii. 17.

^e “Simonia est studiosa voluntas emendi vel vendendi aliquid spirituale.”

^f John x. 1—16.

^g “Giezi in veteri testamento et Symon Magus in novo fuerunt Symoniaci.”

^a Prov. xx. 10
—23.

^b Prov. xi. 9.

^c Pl. xxxvii. 14.

^d Jeremiah xxiii.
11—13.

as these would even sell Jesus Himself for ever so small a sum, and are even worse than Judas, for when he saw that he had acted wickedly he restored the price he had received; but these men will never, by any process of reasoning, be induced to surrender their gains. And if thou wouldst know the reason of this, I give thee to understand that such gains go into the bag which I wear so cunningly round my neck, and which is like a fish-net; for whatever once goes into it, never escapes again.

¹“My sixth hand is cozening, trickery, fraud, and deceit. It is this hand which easily cheats the unsuspecting dealer, or deceives the wary by using false weights^a and thus acting contrary to the law of God. This also it is which palms^b off colours which will not stand, sells bad linen for good, and unsound horses for sound. It travels round the villages, exposing fictitious shrines and fairs to the simple population, and thus obtains money falsely from them. At other times, in order to bring gain to the priests, it takes old images, in the heads of which it pours oil, wine, or water, which descends to the bottom, and then the image is said to perspire, and a miracle to have been worked, which gets exaggerated until the image becomes renowned: then I go to any needy rogue, and induce him to pretend that he is maimed, or deformed, or blind, or deaf, and he presents himself to the image and prays to it to restore him; and when the spectators behold him sound again, not knowing that his maladies were all assumed, they think that a miracle has been worked, and this brings gain to the priest of the image. Again, when dead children are brought to be baptized, I cause them to be laid upon an altar which appears quite solid, but in reality is hollow inside; then, by certain subterranean passages, I cause burning charcoal to be introduced beneath, into the cavity which warms the altar, and whereas Simon Magus offered to give money to Peter and John in order to purchase the power of imparting the Holy Spirit. (See Acts viii. 17—24.)

¹ Mon autre main dicte est barat
Tricherie tricot hazard
Et si est nomme deceuance
Laquelle de tricher sauance
• • • • •
Moult fait ceste main cy de mauix
Couratiere elle est de cheuaulx
Et fait les mauuais bons sembler
A ceulx qui veulent acheter
Souuanteffois par le pais
Faulx saintuaires et saintiz
Va monstrant a la simple gent
Pour faullement tirer argent
Autre fois prent en ces monstiers^c
Aucuns ymages qui sont vieilz
Et fait pertuiz dedens leurs testes
Pour faire venir gaing aux prestres
Es pertuiz qua fait huille meest
Ou vin ou eau ce qua plus prest
Afin que quant celle liqueur
Descend a val dicte sueur
Soit et que cest fait par miracle
Et soit renomme tel ymage
Et afin que plus colore
Soit ce miracle et renomme^d
Je men vois aux coquins parler
Et leur faiz faire simuler
Que boisteux ilz soient ou contrefaits Sours ou muetz ou contrefaiz
Et en tel point venir les fas Deuant lymage et crier las

Sainct ymage gariffes moy
Et lors de ma main ie les lieue
Et tous fains en heure tres brieue
Les monstre merueilles nest pas
Car malades ilz nestoient pas
Et seulement mon mal auoient
Que les presens pas ne cuidoient
Mais cuidoient que miracle soit
Et que par lymage soit fait
Et par ainsi gaigne le prestre
Et est faicte vne faulse feste
Aucuneffois faiz baptises Daucuns petiz enfans mors nez Dessus lautier ie les faiz meestre
Qui ressemble tout massis estre
Mais il est tout creux par dedens
Et par certains soubsterremens
Des charbons ardans ie soubzmeestiz
Et lautier eschauffer ie faiz
Qui a lenfant donne chaleur
Et puis ie monstre que vigueur
Il ya et dy quil est viuant
Ja soit ce quil soit tout puant
Et tel puant ie le baptize
Et par ainsi a moy iatise
Or et argent a ma prebende
Qui chose est horrible et horrende
De baptizer vne charoigne
Pitie est quautrement nen soigne
Le prelat en quel euefche
Est fait si horrible peche
Mains autres mauix ceste main fait Et fera et tous les iours fait thus imparts heat to the child, and then I declare that it is still alive, and I baptize it. Thus I obtain money for my priests; and shame and pity it is that the bishops in whose diocesses these foul sins are committed should not take notice of such atrociously disgusting proceedings; but this hand of mine is and ever will be employed in this and many other similar deeds of wickedness.

"But now I will tell thee why I place this hand on my hip and thence transfer it to my tongue. The former of these I call Lying,^a because it has a limp,¹ and the latter Perjury.^b Now, deceit is most familiar and friendly with both of these, and willingly betakes itself to them, for deceit cannot be carried on without perjury and lies,^c and these three things in conjunction subvert truth. This, therefore, is the reason why I so often apply this hand to my halting limb, and to my tongue."^d Avarice then points out at some length to the Pilgrim the various plans and methods in which lying is practised. "Some," she says, "obtain a livelihood by it; and others exalt themselves by it, inasmuch as they are employed in telling falsehoods^e of their neighbours. It is found in the courts of kings, and advocates at the bar do not disdain to use it when they defend a cause which they know to be bad. My tongue, therefore, like that of a balance, always inclines to that side which is heaviest, and I defend that side which I know will pay me best.

"You perceive also that I am humpbacked; and this typifies the religion of those who indulge in superfluities instead of living according to proper religious rules,² for the hump signifies superfluity. Hence a rich man^f is likened to that humpbacked animal the camel, which cannot pass in by a narrow entrance on account of the bulk on his back.³ And thus sometimes religious people miss the narrow way to life; for even although they came naked into the world, and for some years live frugally, yet many of them learn to indulge in superfluities until they become humped, and that so incurably (for it is the nature of this hump that nothing can cure it) that they can never retrace their steps so as to become truly religious again.

"And lastly, my idol whom I worship is gold or silver⁴ bearing the mark of the sovereignty of the country. It is a divinity which is often wrapped in swaddling-clothes, in order that it may be concealed; sometimes, too, it is hidden in beds or secreted in holes, corners, or cabinets—nay, even buried in the earth amongst the field-mice. It frequently blinds people, and makes them look downwards towards the ground. This, too, it is which makes men humpbacked like I am. This my idol is generally loved so much that he is lauded like a god upon earth, and I endeavour by all possible means to gain his favour and make him dwell with me. On his account St. Lawrence was broiled upon charcoal,⁴ because he

^a Psalm v. 6.

^b "Perjurium est nequiter decipere credentem."

^c Levit. xix. 12.

^d Matt. v. 33.

^e Prov. xxvi. 18—28.

^f Matt. xix. 23, 24.
Mark x. 25.
Luke xviii. 25.

^g "Regulares nil debent habere proprium; et qui nihil habent proprium non possunt facere testamentum."

¹ Eparvain (éparvin), a veterinary term signifying, literally, a "spavin." Hence it is applied to the limping limb of Avarice, in consequence of the "lame" excuses and stumbling statements often made by habitual liars.

² This refers, of course, to the monastic rules touching abstemiousness in food, plainness of apparel, &c. which were imposed upon religious houses.

³ i. e. current money bearing the proper government stamps.

⁴ St. Lawrence was born at Rome in the third century, and was made treasurer of the church revenues by Sixtus II. when he ascended the papal chair, A.D. 257. When the Emperor Valerian published his edicts against the Christians, Pope Sixtus was one of the first who suffered martyrdom, and St. Lawrence attended him to the place of execution, lamenting that he was not thought worthy to share the Pope's sufferings. Sixtus, however, predicted that St. Lawrence would not be long in following him; and, foreseeing the rapine which was about to commence, commanded him to sell the sacred vessels and sacred deposits which were in his hands, and to distribute the money amongst the poor. Upon hearing of this the city prefect ordered St. Lawrence to appear before him, and bring with him all the church treasures which were in his keeping. The saint obeyed the order; but instead of gold and silver, he took with him all the poor old men, widows, and orphans whom he had relieved—a deed which so enraged the prefect that he ordered him to be broiled on a gridiron over a charcoal fire. The saint bore this frightful torture with great composure, and died praying for his murderers. His martyrdom took place August 10, 258, on which day his feast is kept by the Roman Catholic Church.

^a Jer. xv. 17.

^b Job xxix. 8.

^c Prov. xxviii.
16.

^d Coloss. iii. 5.

^e 1 Cor. x. 6, 7.

^f Wisdom xiv. 8.

^g Deut. xviii. 9
—12.
^h 2 Chron. xxxiii.
1—6.
Eccles. i. 15.
Ecclesi. xii. 13.

ⁱ Tib. A. vii. f.
Verard's Ed. f.
lxxiv.

^j Scabbard.

^k Cruel.

^l Notwithstanding and in spite of.

^m Art.

ⁿ Same.

^o Which look at.

^p To signify.

^q Ezek. xviii. 4-

^r Ezekiel xviii.
27, 28.
Rom. vi. 23.

^s Dove.

^t Before I was aware.

^u Old woman.

stole him from me. I dote upon him, and play ^a at various kinds of games of hazard in order to propitiate him; and therefore, because I love him so much, I command you to regard and serve him. Take care, therefore, what you are about, for if you do not I will persecute you continually."

After Avarice has finished this description of herself, Youth ^b comes forward and declares that she will interpose to rescue the Pilgrim.¹ Upon which Avarice abuses ^c her, and says, that although she can do nothing against ^d him at present, yet she swears by her idol that she will keep her eye constantly upon him, so that she may be able to find him wherever he goes.

The Pilgrim then once more proceeds upon his journey, until he enters a vast forest, where, as he is passing along, he hears a loud voice uttering cries in a language quite unknown to him. Upon advancing further he perceives that these sounds proceed from a person who stands in his path brandishing a large unsheathed sword, apparently ready to slay him therewith. He tells the Pilgrim he must immediately go and speak with his mistress. ^e As he was standing in the midst of the road in a large circle marked with a great many figures and bore the signet of a king, the Pilgrim was much rejoiced when he saw him, supposing him to be one of the king's messengers. Under this impression, he asks him what had made him cry out so loud in that strange language? and who that mistress was to whom he had alluded? and for what purpose he was to appear before her? ^f Upon this the other lifts up his finger, and points out to the Pilgrim a large tent standing on the left of him. It was black as charcoal, and on the top of it there was a nest, and a raven fluttering with its wings and croaking. In front of it he beheld

^g NECROMANCY.

^h Off whom I greetly was afferd ⁱ

In the mydde of a book shee helde a swerd
Other scawbeck ^j had sche noon
And as I byhelde anoon
Sche hadde in sothe as thought me
Large whynges ffor to ffile
And by a maner ffelonye ^k
Sche began loude ffor to crye
And me manasyng off pryde
Bade me that I schulde abyde
And ellis ^l mawgrey al my myght
I schulde not skape out off her syght
Till I hadde in partye
Somewhat seyne of her mayffreye ^m
And towarde me her look sche caste
And gan to come up on full faste
But as sche kam it sempte me
That sche fate hygh upon a tre
And pleynty gan to speceffye
Hor name was "Necromancye"
Whiche by my craftte in substaunce
Whan folke encreffe and wel chaunce
That bee in my subiecyoun
And lyfte to learne my lessoun

This ilke ⁿ Book wolte se ^o
Is callyd "Mors Animæ"
Whiche is in Englysche ffor to ^p seyn
Dethe of the sowle incertayne ^q
And this nakyd swerd whiche I hoolde
As thou mayste thisilffe byholde
Therewith ffor schorte conclusyoun
Whanne thew haste herde my lessoun
There with thou schalt slayne be
And thus sche gan manasse me
Where off I stood in full greet drede
But off grace as I toke hede ^r
A white dowve ^s I dyde se
Ifteen sodeynely towards me
But with me where as I stood ^t Sche ne made no longer abood
And I ne made no greet delay
But wente fforthe upon my way
And I mette or I was war ^u
An oolde oon ^v whiche that ffagot bar

¹ The reason of Youth's undertaking to rescue the Pilgrim is, of course, because avarice is generally regarded as the vice of Old Age.

² See Woodcut XIV. and coloured drawing B.

B

C

Appendix.

xli

Upon hir bak and eke thereto
In hir hand sche heelde also A peyre cyfours sharpe igrunde
And to me ward as sche was bounde
Sche bad ffor schorte conclusioun
Ffor to leye my skryppe adoun
And gan upon me ffor to ffrowne Lowde cryde hyr lyfte not rowne ^a

¹ HERYSYE.

Ffor but thow leye here adoun
I schal to thi confusoun
Schape the skryppe off newe array
Ffor it is not to my pay
I schal it kutte in other wyse
Lyche as my sylven lyfte devyse ^b

The PYLGRYME.

Thow oolde vekke ^c as semeth me
That thow mayste not clerely se
Wherefore me lyfte ^d by thi bydding
Ffor to do no maner thyng
But zeve to fforne ^e I know and se
Thy power and thyn autorite
Thy werke also and thyne office
I wol firste knowe in myn avyce

HERYSYE.

Ffor pleyne off lasse ^f and more
Evene after my fadris lore
I wole off bothe ffalse and trewe
The skryppes kutte and schape newe
Off pylgrymes greet and smale
Kutte hem alle on pecys smale
Ffor it was I my filse allon
That schope the skryppes zere agon ^g
Firste off this Pellagys
And also off these Arryens
And off other sectys newe
I founde ffalse and untrew
As oolde bokes specifeye
Ffor I am called "Heresye"
The whiche do away ^h my labour
To bringe folke in greet errour

That folke my condysfiouns
Only by ffalse oppynyouns
Make her hertis to declyne
Ffro the trouthe off juste doctryne
And cause hem ffor to do their cure
And mys ⁱ to expown holy scripture
And trewely nadde bene ^k
The great councayle at Nycene
Ordained by greet Constantyn
And nadde ben also Augustyn
And many other greet doctours
Ffor to anulle myn errours
The skryppes off holy churche echon
I have ffordon ^l full zere a goon
Off pylgrymes that passe by the way
Sythen goon fful mane aday
And zit ^m I schal what so by ffale ⁿ Assayl the among them alle
And myn oolde purpos holde
In ffyre though that I brenne ^o shulde
I wold my wythes ^p alle applye
Hardy with obstynacye
Continue til the ffyre be hoot
Therefore I beere thys ffagot
And firste thow schalte me not escape
But newe I wole thy skryppes schape
Or ellis I dar undertake
That thow schalt it here fforfak ^q
And leve it with me utterly My ffader is here ffaste by Whiche hathe power as thow mayste se
And bothe upon londe and see
Thow shalt not scape hym in certayne
But with daunger and greet payne

The PYLGRYME.

Myne eyen then I gan unffolde
And anoon I gan byholde
In the weye me byfforne
An ^r hunte stood with his horn
Off chere ^s and look ryght pervers
And the passage in travers
With cordes he gan it overleyne
Frette with nettys alle the pleyne

^a She cried loudly, do not run.

^b Just in the shape I please.

^c Woman.

^d Why I do not choose.

^e Unless beforehand.

^f Less.

^g Years ago.

^h Always.

ⁱ Fail.

^k There was need of.

^l Destroyed.

^m Now.

ⁿ Whatever else happen.

^o Burn.

^p Wits.

^q Titus iii. 9—11.

^r Mien.

¹ See Woodcut XV. coloured drawing D.

² See Woodcut XVI. coloured drawing C.

^a Despite of.

^b Unless.
² Sam. xxii. 5, 6.

^c Stoppage, arrest.

^d Pleading.

^e Frightened.

^f Freeze.

^g Every one.

^h Unhappy.
The reading in the text is conjectural, as the two words are entirely obliterated in the MS.
Jeremiah xviii.
22.

And he brought in hys companye
The ffalse vekke herysye
And that men schulde hym not knowe
His horne he gan fful lowde blowe
As it were to cacche his pray
Ryght so he blewe on the way
And his doughter heresyde
The passage to kepe and guyde
That I schulde not in no fyde
Ffrom ther damage my sylfe provyde
And trewely as I have sayd
The nettys were so narewe layd
In londe on water and in the hayr
That I myght haue no repayr
To passe freely that passage
It was so fful off mortal rage
Off daunger and aduersitie
That but yiff that I amydde the see Durste swimme ther was no way
Ffor me to passe nyght nor day
And there he dyde also malygne
To leyne out nettys and affigne
There to stoppen my passage
So that I ffonde noon avauntage
From his dawngere to declyne
Ffor many a hook and many a leyne
Were caste in to that peryllous se
Off entente to letten me
That mawgre ^a alle my force and myght
But zeve ^b I koude swimme aryght
Amonge the wawys ffeerfe and ffele
I muste under his daunger dwelle
But ffyrste while he his trappys leyde
Unto the hunte thus I sayde

THE PYLGRYME.

Hunte quod I telle me now
What maner officere art thou
Whiche lyggeste on the way
Unlawefful to cacche pray
Thus to make thyn areftis ^c
Namely on the kynges beestis
I trow thou haveste no lycence
Ffor to don so greet offence

I dar afferme eerly and late
Swych hunters the kyng doth hate
And it seemyth by thi manere
Off his thow art noon officere

THE HUNTE.

Quod he what makyste thou swyche stryff
Thow art wonder inquisityff
Besy also by argument
To hoolde with me a parlement
By langage and longe pletynge ^d
Ffor though I longe not to the kyng
And thou conceyue aryght I wys Som tym I was oon off his
And though I have no conge
Off hym to hunte in this contre
He suffryth me here in this place
At his beestis ffor to chace
And assaute on hem to make And whanne that I by fforce hem take
Be it by day be it by nyght
I cleyme hem to ben myn off ryght

THE PYLGRYME.

And while I herde alle hys refous
And ffoward oppynyouns
Myn herte abaschyde ^e gan to colde ^f
Namely whaune I gan byholde
Pylgrymes by greet aduersite
Fful many oon swimme in the se
And they were clothyd everychon ^g
And som off hem I sawe anoon
Ther ffeet reversed upfodown
And som in myn inspectyoun
Swamme forth fful clene and ryght
And som hadde whynges ffor the flyght
That afforcyd hem fful offte
Ffor to flowe. fful hygh alofte
And though ther purpos was so sette
The see hath hem fful offte lette
Som by the ffeete were bounde stronge
With knottys off herbys longe ^h
And som with wawys wood and rage
Were [so ^h un-]sweat in their vysage

¹ See coloured drawing E.

That they loften look and fyght
And feeble were off fforce and myght
And by dyuerse apparylle
The rage so gan hem assayle
In many another dyverse wyse
Mo than I may as now devyse

The HUNTE.

I do fful wel quod he espye
Where on thou castyste so thyn eye
Ffor alle thi wyles and thi jape^a Thow schalt not so ffrome me eskape
I schal the cacche by som crook
I haue leyde ffor the las^b and hook
As thow mayste thy sylven se
Thow schalt not skapen by this se

The PYLGRYME.

Telle me anoon and lye nought
As it lythe ryght in thy thought
These pylgrymes alle that I se
Who hath thus putte hem in thys see

The HUNTE.

Is not thys quod he anoon
An high way for ffolke to goon
There by alle day in ther vyage
Swych as goon on pilgrymage
I hadde not ellis as I haue sayde
Myn hookis and my nettis leyde
To cacche alle in thys place
Ffolke that fforby here do pace
Ffor this greet large see Whiche that thow here dost se
It is the worlde ay fful of trowble
Fful of many wawys dowble
And fful off woo and grete torment
In whiche fful many a man is schent^c
With bellewys blowe on every syde
Which that myne owne doughter pryde
Is wonte with hir ffor to bere^d
Good pylgrymes ffor to dere^e
And many a pylgryme thow mayste se Swymme in this perelous see
Som off hem whiche is not ffeyre^f
Ther ffeet han upward in the ayre

And alle swyche zeve thow lyfte se Ben thylke ffolke that charged be
With the sac of covetyse
And overlade in many wyse
That they to swymme be not able Ther burthen is so importable
Whiche by ffalse affecyoun
Ploungeth her heedes low adoun
Under the wawys off this world here
That they may not in no manere
Swymme ffor the hevynesse
That they bere off grete rycheffe^g
Other ther ben that swymmen ryght
And haue eke wynges ffor the fflyght
And they ben ffolkes whiche in this lyffe
In herte ben contemplatyffe
In wordely thyng haue no plesaunce
Save in ther bare sustenaunce
For this world ther joye is nought
For alle ther herte and alle ther thought
And ffynall truste off ther workynge^h
Is sette upon the heuenly kynge
But ffor alle that I the assure
In this see they must endure
Bodely by greet penaunce
In hevne hemselfe to avaunce
And ffor the lawe off Crist ihu
They make hem whynges off vertu
To ffeen by clene affectyoun
To the heuenely manfyouⁱ
Whiche greetly displefeth me
Theder whaunc I se hem ffe
Swyche ffolke refemblen alle
Un to a bryd that clerkes calle
Ortigometra^k in ther bokys
And this bryd caste in his lokys
Tofforne hym prudently to se
Whanne he schal swymme in the see
This ffoul hath whynges ffor the fflyght
Be he anoon off kyndely ryght
Whanne he is wery off travayle
And that his feders do hym ffayle
Anoon off his condiscyoun
In to the water he ffalleth down
And thanne to swymme wole not ffayle
Off his o whynge he makith a ffayle

^a Cajolery, mockery.

^b Snare.

^c Sunk.

^d Carry.

^e Annoy or injure.
Psaln cxlii. 3.

^f Pleasant.

^g Ezeziel xxxiii.
31.

^h Job xxxix. 21.

ⁱ Pf. xxxvii. 29.

^k Water-quail.

^a In the same short period of time.

^b Jonahⁱⁱ. 8.
Prov. xvii. 4.
John viii. 44.

^c Prov. xxxi. 30.
James v. 2.

^d Beauty.

^e Like.

^f Blinded.

^g Are often sunk before they are aware of it.

^h Luke xviii. 22.

ⁱ Forgiveness.

^k Delay or hesitation.

^l Yet.

^m 1 John iii. 10.

ⁿ Make war against.

^o Tib. A. vii. f. 55.

^p 1 Chron. xxi. 1.

^q Cease.

^r Dominion or subjection.
Ecclef. ix. 12.
Hab. i. 15.

^s Tib. A. vii. f. 56, b.

^t Epistles.
1 Pet. v. 8, 9.

Amonge the sturdy wawys alle
To keep hym safte that he not falle
Til he resume ageyne his myght
Off acustom to take his flyght
Thus stoundemel^a ye may hym se
Som tyme swymme som tyme flee
In bokys as it is iffounde
But they that haue ffeet ibounde^b
With herbes and with wedes greene
That they may not aryght sustene
Newther to swymme nor to flee
They be so bounden in the see
Off wordely delectacyoun
In ther inwarde affectyoun
Ffor alle ther hool ffelicyte
Is sette in verrey prosperite
Off the world and in rycheffe
Fful off chaunge and dowbleness
With whyche they be fore bounde
That her foulis yt wole confounde
Ffor they haue power noon nor myght
Newther to swymme nor ffeen aryght
So fore the world doth hem constreyn
That it were to hem greet payne
Her hertes ffro the world to unbynde
And som also be makyd blynde
Ther eyen cloos they may not se
Ffor to confidere the vanyte
Off this worldis ffalfe veyne glorie^c
Evere onsure and transitorye
And fful off motabyte
Whyche shewith to hem fful greet bewete^d
By maner off apparence
But it is ffalfe in existence
That is fful ffoul doth schewe ffayre
Lyche^e afflour that doth apayre
Whanne it is plukked and leyde lowe
Or with som sodeyne wynde iblowe Whyche bewete as wryte Salomoun
Is but a ffalfe deceptyoun
And ffolkes that beth therewith blente^f
Or they be war beth offte schente^g
For lak ther eyen be not clere
Eke som ther swymis as ze may lere
With hand and armys stretchyd out^h
Swyche as parte good aboute

To pore ffolkes that haue neede
And swyche unkynde her ffeete in deede
From wordely dilectacyoun
And off devout entencyoun
By councel off her confesseure
And bynde her ffeet by greet laboure
Ffor to goon in ther vyages
Barffote to seke pylgrymages
Off ther synnes to haue pardoun
Fforgevenesseⁱ and remysfeyoun
Whanne ther menyng trewley
Is voyde ffrom al ypocryfy
And thus as now without flouthe^k
To the I haue tolde the trouthe
And trewley zit^l overe alle thyng
I hate trowthe in my workyng^m
And off malys bothe day and nyght
Werreyⁿ trouthe with al my myght

^o By neme called I am Sathan^p
The whiche as ffer as evere I kan
I worke in myne entencyon
Ffor to cacche in my bandoun
Alle pylgrymes as thow mayest se
That swymmen in the wawy see
Off this world fful off disseyte
And evere I lye in greet awayte
And no moment I ne ffyne^q
For to leyne out hook and lyne
My lyne by demonstracyon
Icalled is temptacyoun
And whanne that ffolke in ther entente
Off herte and wille therto consente
Thanne on myn hook by ffalfe awayte
They be icacched with the bayte
And thanne by fful mortal lawe
To my bandoun^r I hem drawe
I lay out nettes nyght and day
In water and londe to cacche my pray
• • • • •
I am a ffoulere eke som whyle
Ffor alle that high or lowe goon
I make nettes ffor everych oon
• • • • •
Ffor as saint Petre lyste endite^s
And in his pyftelys^t ffor to wryte

XVII

Derainne on esbatentent mondain XVIII

XIX

Draïson

XX

I go and ferche day and nyght
 With all my force with all my myght
 Lyche a ravenous lyoun
 Ffor to devour up and down
 Alle ffolkys zonge^a and oolde
 That lambre^b be of cristis ffoolde

• • • •
 And I warne the outerly
 Thow shalt not lyghtely zeve I may^c Fro my daunger scape away

The PYLGRYME.

Wher thow be wel or yvel mayd^d
 In the wordes that thow haft sayd
 I haue founden a greet dyffence
 To make ageyne the resistence
 And conceyue it in my thought
 Blowe thyne horne and spare nought Ffor thow schalt ffayle zeve that I may
 To make off me schortely the waye
 And to be more strong in vertu^e
 With the crofs of Crist ihū
 And off his grace most benygne
 I can me crosse and eke sygne
 Ffor to assure my passage
 Ageyne his laafs^f so fful of rage
 And by my crosseynge I anoon
 Gan to passe hem everichon
 They hadde no power ffor to laste
 Ffor by the vertu they to brafte^g
 And I anoon gan ffaiste fflce
 And wolte haue taken anoon the see
 But long or I entre myght
 And as Sathan of me hadde a fyght
 He gan to crye so stood the cas
 Out and anoon allas allas

• • • •
 The PYLGRYME answereth to SATHAN :—
 O Sathan thi displeaunce
 Was to me fful greet plefaunce
 Releuyng me off my distresse
 I took ther off greet hardynesse
 Made as tho no lenger lette
 I spared newther hook nor nette

But trustynge in conclusyoun
 Upon my skrippe and my burdoun
 And there upon I byleued me
 Whanne I entryd in to the see
 And in swymmyng to be more stable
 Methought my skrippe profitable
 To kepe me sure in herte and thought
 In my way that I erred nought^h
 Trewely in this dredefful see
 Is gret myscheef and aduersyte
 Many a perel I yow ensue
 And many a straunge aventure
 I ffelte there in my passage
 Off wawys and rokkis rage
 And many a tempeste in certeyne
 Off thundryng lyghtnyng and off reyn
 And other perells that befelle
 That zeve I schulde hem alle telle
 Or the myscheves alle endyte
 They were too longe to wryte
 But while that I in my passage
 Byhelde the see sterne and sauage
 Methought I sawe belyde meⁱ
 That there stood a greene tre^j
 And I was glad alle thilke while Wenynge^k there hadde been an yle
 In hope that I schulde londe
 Hastely up at some stronde

• • • •
^l And evere round as thoughte me
 This whel^l wente aboute the tre Wheroff I astonyd was Whanne I sawe this sodeyn caas
 Upon whiche tre anoon
 I sawgh nestys fful many oon^m
 And brydes that I koude knowe
 Som hygh and som lowe
 Ther nestis made I toke good hede
 Grete and small it is no drede

• • • •
 And there I sawe a lady stonde
 Amonge the wylde wawys trouble
 Upon a whel dyverse and double
 • • • •

^a Young.^b Lambs.^c If I can help it.^d Whether thou meanest good or evil.^e Psal. cxxiv. 7.
James iv. 7.
Hosea iv. 12.^f Snares.^g Burst asunder.^h Micah vii. 19.ⁱ Luke vi. 43.^j Supposing.^k Wheel.
Ecclus. xxxiii. 5.^l Jer. xlix. 16.
Ezek. xxxi. 6.
Prov. xvii. 16.
Hab. ii. 9.^l This is a description of "the wheel of Fortune." See Woodcut XVII. coloured drawing F.

^a Said with sudden emotion.

^b Then.

^c Roused myself.

^d Expound to.

^e To ask me how I govern myself.

^f Laugh.

^g Countenance.

^h White is here put for "lucky." Thus, "cretā an carbone notandus" was said, among the Romans, to signify a lucky or unlucky day.

ⁱ Scornful grins.

^k Moon.

^l Waiting in every place.

^m Tib. A. vii. f. 62.

ⁿ Bent.

^o Laugh on.

^p Practise. Isaiah lxx. 11, 12.

^q At some time or other.

^r f. lxxviii.

Thanne was I greetly agaste
And my burdoun I heelde ryght faste
And dyde also greetly my peyne
To grype it with myne hands tweyne
And seyde off sodeyn moscyoun ^a Bordoun quod I bordoun bordoun
But thow me helpe in this caas
I may wepe and seyne alas
My peynes ben so scharpe and kene
And but thow helpe to sustene
Myn nown powere and impotence
That I may stonden at diffence
Upon my ffeet and that anoon
Ffarwel my joye is alle goon
But tho ^b thorough helpe off my bordoun
I roos up as a champyoun
But whanne this lady did espie
That I was up sche gan to hye
Ffor to have putte me doun ageyne
And I trow ryght and certeyn
That but I hadde spoken ffayre
And off my porte be debonayre
I hadde ben ful ffleble of myght
Upon my ffeet to stonde vp ryght
But I abrayde ^c and bade in deede
That sche scholde taken heede
To thilke party that was ffayre
Off hir and putte me fro dispayre
And schewe lyke hir countenance
Som comfforte or som plessaunce
And that sche wolde expowne ^d me What lady that sche schulde be Hir name hir power every del
Bothe off hir and off hir whel
And off the tre and off the croppe
And off the nestis in the toppe
And do me some avauntage
To ffurthre me in my vyage

FFORTUNE.

In me schortely to expresse
Ther is no maner stableneffe

¹ Elle vers l'arbre s'en ala
Et desconforte me laissa
Toujours dessus la roe tournant
Et a son mouvement mouuant

Ffor be hereoff ryght wel certeyn
Alle that I worke is uncerteyn
Lyke my dowble contaunce
I am so ffyl off variaunce
Therefore to axe how I me guye ^e
It is no wysdom but ffolye
I worke nothyng in certeynte
But ffyl off grete duplycyte
I am what evere I do provyde
For I lawe ^f on the ryght fyde
And schewe a cher ^g off greet delyte
On the party that I am white ^h
Than men me calle glad ffortune
But no while I do continue
Ffor longe or ffolke may apperceyve
I kan hem sodeynly disseyve
And make her joye go to wrak
With ffroward mowhes ⁱ at the bak
Thanne I lykened to the mone ^k
Ffolke wole chaunge my name sone
And ffro my whel whanne they are falle
Inffortune they me calle
To ffolke unworthy and not dygne
I am somewhile moste benygne
Lyggyng awayte in every coofte ^l
Off ffolkes whom that I cherishe most
And who that on me sette his luste
I kan disseve hym off his truste

• • • • •
Off my staff and off my crook ^m
Wronge ⁿ at the eende as is an hook
And whanne I loke with eyen clere
Lawye on ^o and make hem cheer
Thaune lygge I ratheste in awayte
Ffor to don ^p hem som disseyte
Lo here is al go fforthe thy way
And truste wel zeve that I may What wey euere that thow go
Or thi pylgrymage be do
Turne it to foure outhor to sweete
Ones ^q I schal with the meete

¹ FFORTUNE IS WALKYD.

Mais assez tost ie tumbay ius
Car tenir ie my peu plus
Helas dis ie que feras tu
Chetif dolent que diras tu

After Fortune has left him, the Pilgrim sustains various encounters with vices—personified as usual—until he meets Worldly Gladness, which is typified by a revolving tower and a Syren, which he describes as follows:—

* But as I stood thus in awher^b
And drowh me toward the rever
† A towre I sawh wyld and savage^c
And square abouten off passage
Whiche hadde round ffenestrallys
Perceyd thorough upon the wallys
At whiche hoolys out off doute
Smoke and flawme passed oute
And yet this toure who loke wel
Turned aboute as a whel^d
Vpon the ffloodes envyroun^e
With the wawys vp and down
Som whyle as I koude knowe
The hyeste party was moſte lowe
And also eke I sawe fful offte
The loweste party sette aloffte
And thus by transmutacyoun
It turned alway vp so doun
And in this while euere among
I herde a meledious song
Off oon as I koude vnderſtonde
That bare a phetele^f in his honde
And thys mynſtral ſoth to ſeyne

Or es tu venu a ta fin
Pourquoy fuz oncques pelerin
Mieulx il te vaulſiſt quauvorte
Tu euſſes eſte et mort ne
Qui te pourra iamaſ aider
Qui conſeiller qui viſiter
Tu as perdu par ta folie
Grace ta treſloyalle amye
Helas tres douce penitence^m
Pourquoy fis iamaſ redoubtance
De ton vtile haye paſſer
Pour mes erreurs mediciner
Tes verges et tes diſciplines
Tes poinctures et tes eſpines
Maintenant me fuſſent oingture
A ma grande meſauventure
Helas armeures pour marmer
Toute ma vie regreter
Je vous deuray ſe ie vy plus
De vous vne fois fus veſtuz
Et aourne moult cointement
Mais las chetif car longuement
Pas ne fu ains toſt vous mis ius

Was departyd evene atweyne
From the myddel up a man
Downward as I reherſe kan
A bryd whynged mervellouſely
With pawmys ſtreynynge mortally^s
Now this beeste fful ſavage
Lyke a man off his vyſage Spake to me fful curteyſly^h
And thus he ſeyde murielyⁱ

GLADNESSE OFF THE WORLD.

Tel on to me and ſay not nay
What maner ſolace or what play
Loveſte thow beſte tel on lat ſe^k
And I ſhal pley n to forre the Ffor I kan lyche to thyn entent
Pley on every inſtrument
Ffor to make lordys cher
Both at cheſſe and the cheker
The draughtys ther off fful wel I kan
Ye bet then eny other man
And whanne that ylke play ys do
Ffor ſheppardes I kan alſo
At the merels^l beſte of alle
Whanne ſo that they lyſte me calle
Pype and tabour in the ſtreete
With luſty folkes whan they meete
At weddinges to do pleaſaunce
I kan karole well and wel daunce

Plusieurs maux men ſont aduenusⁿ
Et maintenant ou aſſez toſt
Jen ſeray liure a la mort
Helas ſacremens de legliſe
Je ne ſcay ſaſſes ie vous priſe
Jay grant doubte quen vain receuz
Ne vous aye qui ſuis rencheuz
Maintenant tout evanouy
Et en danger deſtre pery
Et ne me puis eſtre tenu
A mon bourdon ne ſoubſtenu
Helas ieruſalem cite
Ou daler ieſtoie exite
Comment vers toy me excuſeray
Et quel reſponce te ſeray
Promis ie tauoye en couraige Que ſeroye le pelerinaige
A toy pource que ie te vy
Ou bel mirouer et poly
Or ſuis du tout cy arreſte
Ta ſoit quaſſes ie foye tourne

^l See Woodcut XVIII. coloured drawing G.

^a Tib. A. vii. f. 76, b.

^b Longing or deſire.

^c Job iv. 16. Ezek. xxvi. 9.

^d Wheel.

^e Round about.

^f Violin, or guitar.

^s Hands ſtretched out like thoſe of a human being.

^h Courteouſly.

ⁱ Merry-makings.

^k Let us ſee.

^l Merry-makings.

^m Eccluf. xx. 3.

ⁿ 1 Sam. xxxi. 9.

^a Exod. xxxii. 6.

^b Always.

^c Job i. 6.

^d Tower.

^e Lofe.

^f Seeth.

^g Here.

^h Sweet.

ⁱ Jer. xv. 17.

^k Fiddle.

^l Island.

^m Confusion.

ⁿ In company.

^o f. lxxxvii. b.

^p Psal. lxxix. 9.
Prov. iii. 5.

In euery play I do excelle
And it were to longe to telle
The disportes and the playes ^a
That I vse on fomer dayes
My joye is al in myrthe and game
And Wordely play that is my name
Men may me calle off equyte
A mermayden off the see
That syngge off custome ay ^b gladdeste
To fforne a storme and a tempeste
So make ek ffolke this my laboure
To fforgete ther Creatoure
And ffolk in my subiectyoun
I brynge hem to distructyoun

THE PYLGRYME.

Though thou bygygne in gladnesse
Thow eendeste euere in wrecchydnesse
Ellys I wolde ffor my plesaunce
With the hauen acqueyntaunce
I praye the putte me out off doute
Off this toure turnynge aboute
What maner thyng that it may be Fyrste off alle that wolde I fe

WORDELY GLADNESSE.

Fyrste yiff thou lyste to fe
The greet amyral off the see Whiche that callyd ys Sathan ^c
This tour ^d sothely he began
Ffor he ffuste off entencyoun
Made there his habytacyoun
And other schyp ne hath he noon
Amonge the floodys ffor to goon
In the whiche by gret diceyte
He lythe euere in awayte
With pylgrymes holde stryff

And to make hem lese ^e her lyff
He seth ^f bothe by hylle and vale
Thorough thylke hoolys fmale
By what weye that they gon Amonges whiche thou art on
And to disceyve hem in her way
Her ^g he maketh me fytted and play
With soote ^h songe and armonye
Alle pylgrymes to espye ⁱ

And this mynstril than anon
Made his ffythele ^k ffor to gon
And fange with al fful lustyly
And wyth hys syngynge sodeynly
To me he gan turne his tayle
And with his pawmes scharpe as a nayle
By the arme he gan me streyne
Mawgre my myght and al my peyne
Horybely he caste me
Amyddes off the greet see

I gan swimme with inne a while Ageyne vnto that fame yle ^l
Ffro the which that I kam ffro
Whanne the mermayde was go
I mene this worldes fals solace
That gan so sore at me to chace
But lyste sche scholde haue taken me
I swam fful ffaste mydde the see Ffor drede off hir I was in were ^m
But Youthe and sche to gydere yfere ⁿ Ful great joye they gan to make
And thus hath Youthe me fforfak
For thanne I lost hir in certeyne
That sche to me kam ner ageyne

¹ And down I fate ffor werynesse

¹ Lors ie massis a terre ius^o
Si las que ie nen pouois plus
Helas dis ie que feras tu
Tu es en ceste yle venu
Qui perilleuse grandement
Et venu perilleusement
Y es par firtim et scillam
Par caribdim et firenam
Et par bithalaffum auffi
Et encores assure ycy
Nes pas et ne scais ou aller

Le tu te remectz a noer
Par la mer tu y periras
Ou ne scez a quel port venras
Helas chetif que feras tu
Bien ie voy que tu es perdu
Hors suis de sente et de chemin
Je mattens quonques pelerin
Ne fut plus foruoye que moy ^p
Beau doux sire dieu ayde moy
Tu es le pommeau treshaultain
De mon bourdon ie te reclaim

Appendix.

xlix

And gan compleyne in greet distresse^a Allas quod I myd off^b my wo
 Allas allas what schal I do
 How schal I wretche eskape away
 Out off this yle weyle^c away
 Ffor by five enchauntereffys
 I am brought in gret distressys
 In greet pereyl dowteles
 Ffor Scilla fyrst and eke Cyrtis
 Han caused me to gon amys^d
Syrenes and Karibdis
 And Bytbalassus worfte off alle
 Ben^e attonys on me ffallle
 And mortally me to beguyle
 They han me brought in to this yle
 Longe in forewe to sojourne
 And kan noon other wey retourne
 To fflynde focoure in this caas
 I may wel forewe and seyne allas
 Out off my way in ounerteine
 And kan no mene to kome ageyne
 Was neuere pylgryme in swyche poynt
 Trewely nor in swyche disioynt
 Now good God off thi greet grace
 Be my focoure in this place
 Ffor thow ffor my salvacyoun
 Art the Pomel off my Bordoun
 To the as ffor my cheff comfforte
 In this nede I ha reforte
 To brynge me thorough thy greet myght
 In to the weye I may go ryght
 And ben supported ffer and nere
 With that charboucle bryght and clere
 Whiche that with his bemes bryght
 Giveth on to my bordoun lyht
 Now parte with me off thy clernesse
 And brynge me out off my distresse
 Out off this deedly mortal rage

Ffor sythe tyme off my tendre age
 My truſte and my affyaunce
 My joye and all my suffyaunce Alle hooly hath ben in the Ageynes alle adverſite
 In euery peyne and eche labour
 To fflynden comfforte and focour
 And now that ſtonde in ſo greet drede
 Helpe me in this greet nede
 And while I gan me thus compleyne
 Even amydde off alle my pene
 I ſawgh amyddes off the ſee
¹ A ſhippe ſaylle towards me^f
 And evene above upon the maſte
 Wherefore I was the laſſe agaſte
 I ſawe a croſſe ſtonde and not flytte
 And there vpon a dowve ſytte
 White as any mylke or ſnowgh
 Where off I hadde joye enowgh
 And in this ſhippe ageyne alle ſchoures
 There were caſtels and eke towres
 Wonder dyverſe manſyouns
 And ſondry habytacyouns^g
 By reſemblance and ſeemyng
 Lyche the loggyng^h off a kyng
 And as I took good hede ther at Alle my forewes I fforgettⁱ

The Pilgrim is rejoiced beyond meaſure at perceiving Gracedieu deſcend from the veſſel; he expreſſes his gratitude to her for relieving him in his great diſtreſs; ſhe inquires where he has been, and what has brought him to that perilous iſland which is named Scylla.² The Pilgrim aſſures her he has no pleaſure in remaining there, and that he will willingly quit it to return into the way which by his folly he has quitted, and which has brought upon him ſo many evils.

Afin quen toy et par toy voye
 Par la ou ie prendray ma voye
 Sainte eſcharboucle reluifant
 Dont mon bourdon eſt fait luyſant
 Eſclere moy par ou giray
 Tu es le pommel ou toute ay
 Mon port ma ſeure ma fiance
 Et tousiours eus des mon enfance
 A toy me rends a toy mappuy
 Ayde moy ou perdu ie fuy

• • • • •
 Dame diſ ie bien eſt mon gre
 Bien doit le recreu pelerin
 Deſirer court et brief chemin
 Recreu ie ſuis et traueilles
 Le court vueil aller voulentiers
 Et vous mercy treſhumblement
 De voſtre bon confortement

¹ See Woodcut XIX. coloured drawing H.
² The "valley perilous" of Mandeville.

^a Jer. xv. 17.

^b In the miſt of.

^c Woe is me.

^d Aſtray.

^e Are all at once.

^f Iſaiah lx. 9.

^g Deut. xv. 11.

^h Lodging.

ⁱ Pſal. cxix. 29.

^a Nurse.
Tib. A. vii. f.
91, b.

^b If thou carest to learn it.

^c To signify.

^d Rom. xv. 4.

^e In times of yore.

^f Truly.

^g More than one.

^h Dissemble.

ⁱ Lying.

^k Numb. xvi. 26.
Jer. v. 25.

^l Stingy.

Gracedieu tells him, that, if he will enter her ship, she will receive him from the pity she feels for him, and will convey him by a short passage into the safe path; but that he must expect to meet with Repentance, the stile, the hedge, and the thorny plants again, just as he had met them before.

He answers, that every weary pilgrim should desire a short voyage, that he is himself weary and way-worn, and he thanks her very much for her comfort; he then promises that if she will take him on board the ship he will amend his faults. Upon which Gracedieu reproaches him for having required his armour to be carried, and for not being able to endure the weight of it himself; and she also tells him that his professions are great, but that he does not carry them into practice.

She then leads him to a rock from which water flows, in which he is washed, and afterwards conducts him to the vessel; he inquires its name, and is told it is Religion.

They then embark, and steer for the Monastery of Cîteaux. Upon their arrival there they are received by the porter, Crainte de Dieu, ("Drede of God;") and upon Gracedieu leaving the Pilgrim, he is conducted to

¹ AGYOGRAPHE.

I am quod sche chieff noryce ^a
To alle ffolkes that ffeen vyce
No cloyster is worthe who looke aboute
On no syde whan I am out
I make cloystris fferme and stable
Worshippe and honourable
And my name zeve thow lyfte se ^b
Is callyd Agyographe
Whiche is to feyne ^c I the ensure Off holy wrytyng the scripture ^d
• • • • •

The PYLGRYME.

And off a merour that I ffonde

Whiche that I heelde in myne honde
I preyed hir without schame
To telle me there off the name

AGYOGRAPHE.

Hyt were good to hye and lowe
That alle ffolkes sholde know
And there off hadde a trewe syght
Justely what thys merour hyght
That ffolkes ffor greet lak off lyght
Were not deceyued in her syght
This merour by descripcyoun
Is called Adulacyoun
This is withouten eny blame
Verily his ryght name
Ffor take good hede that fflatteryng
Is engendred off lesyng
Some callen hir "Placebo" ^e
Ffor sche han maken an Eccho
Answere euere ageyn the same
Because that he wole haue no blame
There is no contradicyoun
Ffor bothe off newe and zore ^f agon Ffolkes sothely ^g mo than on ^h
Han in adulacyoun
Ffinde fful greet decepcyoun
Lordes wherffore I feye alas
Han be disseyved in this caas
And by adylacyoun
Brought to ther destrucyoun

FLATEKYE.

For this custum hath fflatterye
To feyne ^h thus by losengerie ⁱ
Whanne hym lykyth to begyle Ffalsely by his fotel while To hem that be moste vycious ^k
How that they are vertuous
And though they ben to vyces thral
They feyne eke they be liberal
Though they be streyte ^l and ravynous
And greet nygards in her hous

¹ See coloured drawing I.

² Placebo, "I will please," the name given to Flattery, from her endeavouring to curry favour with every one. The "Echo" is in reference to the "Placebo," which was the name given to the vesper hymn for the dead.—Du Cange.

They calle ffame and high renoun
Raveyne^a and ffalfe extorcyoun
Though they be ffooles and off no prys
They afferme that they be wys

• • • • •
The PYLGRYME.

Madame quod I zow not displese
Thys myroure schal do me noon cese
Wher so that I leese or wynne
I wole neuere looke ther inne
But ryht anoon myne happe it was To loken in another glasse
In the whiche withouten wene^b
I sawe my sylff ffoule and vncleue
And to byholde ryght hydous
Abbomynabel and vecyous
That merour and that glas Schewyd to me what I was

Wherefore off rancour and dysdeyn
The same merour I caste ageyn
Without a look in her pavere^c
Ffrowarde off look and eke^d off chere
And gan my bak away to turne
And therefore soon I gan to morne

AGYOGRAFHE.

Now I se wel by contenance
And also by thy governaunce
Thow hafte no luste to loke and se
In the merour yt semeth me
Callyd the merour off concyence
Whiche shewith by trewe experyence
Without eccho or ffatterye
Or any other lozengerye
Vnto a man what ymage
He bereth aboute or what vyfage
The portraiture ryght as it is
And in what thyng he dothe amys^e
After the Pilgrim had held converse with Obedience, Discipline, Poverty, and Chastity, two messengers next appeared to him, one of whom had wings extended, whilst the other held in her hand a wimble, which she held up aloft towards the heaven, as if she would pierce the sky. She says she is to reward all people who act uprightly, that she is called Prayer^f (oraison), the good and swift messenger which has wings to fly and to bear a message to God for all mankind. "Before Him," she says, "I appear swiftly and present boldly the commission which has been entrusted to me; and know," she adds, "that if you send your request to Him it shall not be refused; and if you wish to enter the city where you see so many pilgrims go, I will be your messenger, and will prepare you a house where you may take up your abode—no one shall enter there who has not sent me before him. You know that it was so with the thief who was crucified with the King.^g I believe you will do the same, for you have great need of it, and so I hasten the more readily to perform your message."

¹ There was another who held a horn which gave a pleasant sound, whose name was Latria, (worship or service)^h and who thus speaks:

Off this place ffolkes alleⁱ
Latrya they me calle
Myne offys is moſte in wakyng
To kepe the gate aboute the kyng
I wacche there on day and nyght
Do my fforſe and eke my myght
Ffor to lyue aye in awayt
That there be ffounden no dysceyt

• • • • •
For bothe at eeve and eke at morew
I kepe the houres off ryſyng
To do worſchipe to the kyng
Alle ffolkes vp I calle
That no ſlomber on hem ffalle Myne horne is Invocacyoun
Off Deus in adjutorium
I blowe myn horn toward mydnyght
To reyse vp ffolkes anoon ryght
I fuffre hem not off ſleep to deye
Myne^j orgones I tempre ffor to pleye^k

^a Plunder.

^b Doubt.

^c Basket or wallet.

^d Also.

^e Job xx. 2.
Ecclef. vii. 5, 6.
Daniel x. 21.
Mark xii. 24.
Ephesians v. 6.
Col. iii. 22.
^f 1 Theſ. ii. 4—6.
^g 1 Pet. iii. 21.

^h 2 Chron. xxx.
27.
Mark xi. 24.
ⁱ 1 Peter iii. 7.

^j Luke xxiii. 42.

^k Pſal. xcvi. 9.

^l Tib. A. vii. f.
104, b.

^m I manage my muſical inſtrument ſo as to play.

¹ See Woodcut XX.

² The "Virginals" of Bunyan.

^a Sound.

^b Psalmody.

^c Psalm cii. 23.
Heb. ix. 27.

^d Jer. xlv. 11.
Ecclus. xviii. 21.
Rom. vi. 18, 19.
2 Cor. xii. 9.

^e Isaiah xl. 30.

^f Deut. xxxiii.
25.
Gen. xxv. 8.
Job xii. 12, 13.

And vpon hem I make a sown^a
With outen intermyssyoun
And trewely alle my melodye
Is in songe off perfalmodye^b
And devoutely in myne ententis
I calle so myne instrumentis
For thylke kyng that is moste stronge
Most hym delytyth in swiche songe
To hym it is moste pertynente
Whanne it is songe off good entente
In clerneffe and in purete

At the last, after Gracedieu's return, two old women appeared,¹ at the sight of whom the Pilgrim's heart trembled; one supported herself on crutches, and seemed to have leaden feet—she carried a box on her back, whilst her companion had a couch bound on to her head. These were Infirmity and Old Age, who advanced towards him and said:—"Death^c sends us to you to announce that she comes without delay; and she has enjoined us not to leave you until we have conquered you."

The Pilgrim says that he is not acquainted with them, or with their mistress Death, and inquires their names. They tell him it is useless to argue with them, for, however strong a person may be, as soon as Death comes to him she vanquishes him; for she has complete control over human life, and kings and dukes fear her more than poor people who labour under life's burthens. "Death, however," they continue, "is no respecter of persons—into many places she enters often without having sent us before her; we are her messengers, and will tell you our names."

Then the one who carried the couch said:—"I am named Infirmity.^d wherever I find Health I attack her to make her submit; I recal Repentance when she is forgotten. He who created Nature, when He perceived that He was disregarded, summoned me, and said thus:—"Go quickly to Death, and say that I send you to serve her, and to do according to her pleasure. But first you shall go into the world; and, when you are there, whomsoever you find the most hardy, who think to live the longest, and because they have health despise me, and put me out of their thoughts, those correct, chastise, and bind down so strongly on your bed that they cannot rise, nor turn according to their will, nor have any taste for eating and drinking, in order that they may implore my mercy, and by amending their lives have some regard for their own salvation.' Thus have I been in many places, and have pulled down young and old.^e Prepare yourself, therefore, for I shall attack you and lay you down on your bed." The other then spoke:—"I am she whom you never thought to behold:^f I have leaden feet; I walk slowly—nevertheless I come towards you and acquaint you that Death is approaching. No messenger can speak more truly; my companion often deceives; for different reasons prevent her from performing her message, but nothing can impede me. I am named Old Age, the greatly feared, the skin-dried, and the wrinkled. My head is sometimes grey, and sometimes bald; I am able to give sage counsel, and ought to be much honoured—for I have seen in times past both much good and much evil; I have proved what writings are the most sensible, and what are the best means of acquiring knowledge; for without practice and experience no science can exist."

The Pilgrim then informs Old Age that she is not agreeable to him, and he wishes that she would depart; but she tells him, that, whether he likes her or not, she will remain with him—and before Death comes she will make him crooked and feeble by the blows which she will give him; but still, she says, that if he is wise, he will derive great advantage from her—for she will lend him those crutches² which she herself has to lean upon: but yet she does not wish to deprive him of his staff, inasmuch as a spiritual support is useful as well

¹ See Woodcut XXI.

² Mr. Ready to Hail's crutches.—Bunyan.

XXI

XXII

Misericoorde

XXIII

as a temporal one—for by this means if a man is assaulted on one side he is supported on the other.^a “Take, therefore, my crutches,” she concludes, “for you will find them very useful, since my blows are hard to bear, and that you shall soon know.” Then she said to her companion, “In order that he may not think that we feign, let us at once knock him down, and lay him upon your couch.” Infirmity and Old Age accordingly lay hold of the Pilgrim, and place him gently upon it, and tell him that Death will soon arrive.^b Whilst, however, he is lying there, a lady, of a kindly and pleasing countenance, approaches him:¹ she has in her hands a cord, and upon her inviting the Pilgrim to go with her to the Infirmary he joyfully assents, but first begs that she will tell him who she is.

“I am,” she replies, “named Mercy, and I should be excessively welcome after a severe sentence is passed in any judgement. The King,^c when He commanded that all the human race should die for their offences, when I came to Him, forbore his hand, and made over to me all that remained; and I induced Him to place in the heavens a bow without a string, as a sign of concord—the string remains with me, as the bow does with Him:^d so that without this cord He cannot use the bow, and for that reason I keep it in my hands; and, inasmuch as I rescue the wretched from misery, and draw the degraded from their woful positions by means of this cord, I am called Misericorde (Mercy).^e The maker of this cord was Charity, and it is not possible for any one to ascend to heaven who breaks it.”

After Mercy has further explained to the Pilgrim her various offices, such as relieving the sick, the poor, the captives, the humble—and professing her readiness to serve him—he asks her if she cannot rid him of Death's messengers, Infirmity and Old Age. This, she says, she cannot do; but she will, by means of her cord, convey him secretly to the Infirmary,^f where, although the messengers will not even then leave him entirely, yet he may put off for some little time longer the arrival of Death.

Accordingly, she binds her cord to his bed, and, at the same time, Infirmity and Old Age also approach him so closely that he has no strength remaining.

After he had arrived at the Infirmary, and had lain there for some little time, the porter, called the fear of God,^g enters, bringing with him two other messengers—one of whom was the lady^h with the wimble, of whom mention has already been made, whilst the other extended her arms towards heaven as if she would fly. The porter then informed the Pilgrim that he had brought these messengers, of whose aid he could avail himself, if he wished to send them before him to Jerusalem, for that he could no longer tarry on earth, and if they did not go before him he would not be able to enter the holy city. Their names were Prayer,ⁱ and her companion Almsgiving,^j (aufsmone): the latter has always her hands extended ready to give, and makes wings of them with which to fly—and she is willing to go at once to the King to beg for admission for the pilgrims into the heavenly mansions. The Pilgrim answers, that he would willingly employ her, but he possesses nothing—having renounced all he had when he entered the convent, everything there having been in common. He says that she should be sent before kings, and great and wealthy people—that the rich, being pilgrims as well as himself, must also be admitted by their staff and scarf (i. e. hope and faith) into the heavenly city—and he therefore trusts that God will provide an humble and poor man like himself with an habitation.^k He then welcomes the other messenger,^l and commissions her to go before him; to which she answers, that she would do so most readily, according to her promise to him in the Church

^a Prov. xxii. 6.

^b Psalm lxxi. 9; xcii. 14.

^c Ecclus. xviii. 13.

^d Gen. ix. 13.

^e Deut. v. 10.

^f Prov. xxii. 9.

^g 2 Chron. xix. 7.

^h Prov. xv. 29.

ⁱ Luke vi. 30; xi. 41.

^k Heb. xii. 22.
^l 2 Cor. v. 6.
Heb. xiii. 14.

¹ Tobit iii. 1.

¹ See Woodcut XXII.

² The lady with the wimble or auger was Prayer;

she was described before as holding it, because “she seemed as though she would have pierced the heavens.”

where he had seen her before: whereupon Infirmity interferes, and says it is now too late for the intercession of Prayer, that the Pilgrim had plenty of time to employ her during his life, but that now she (Infirmity) claims him. Prayer, nevertheless, departs on her errand; and whilst the Pilgrim is fearing that she will be too late, and that he will perish,¹ an old woman mounts on his bed, who alarms him extremely; she holds a scythe, and also bears a wooden coffin—her name is Death. She has already placed one of her feet upon the Pilgrim's body, and he has begged her to spare him a little while longer that he may ask her one or two questions, when Gracedieu appears to him and reassures him by saying,² "I perceive you are now at the narrow entrance which is at the end of your pilgrimage. Death is near you, who is the end of all terrible things; she will mow down your life, and place your body in a coffin for the worms to destroy it. This is the common end of all flesh. Man, in this world, is exposed to Death as the grass in the field is to the scythe; so he also is flourishing one day, and is withered the next. You have prospered a long time; you must now be reaped and separated into two parts—the entrance is narrow, the body and soul cannot pass through together; the soul will enter first, and the body, after having seen corruption, will be regenerated and join the great assembly in the city to which you are hastening. You are now at the wicket-gate, which, when you saw it imaged in the mirror, you so longed to reach. You will be received within it if you present yourself there unburdened and naked. Nevertheless, you must first implore the Father for mercy,³ and promise to Penance, that if you have not undergone sufficient suffering for your sins, you are willing to expiate them still further in Purgatory."⁴ Upon this *Death*⁵ seemed to run him through the body with her scythe; and he awoke with a start, scarcely knowing whether he were dead or alive, until he was certified of the fact of his being alive by the sound of the convent bell and the crowing of

¹ 1 Cor. xv. 3.
Ecclus. xiv. 12.

² Job xxi. 26.

³ Isaiah xl. 7.

⁴ Job xix. 26.

⁵ Rev. iii. 12;
xxii. 14.

⁶ John xiv. 6.

⁷ Heb. ix. 27, 28.

⁸ Rev. xiv. 13.

¹ See Woodcut XXIII.

² GRACEDIEU.

Je voy bien qua lestroit passaije
Tu es de ton pelerinaije
Voicy la mort qui de pres test
Qui des choses terribles est
La fin et le terminement
Ta vie tantost faulcher entent
Et la meſtre du tout afin
Et puis ton corps en vng cofin
Elle meſtra pour le bailler
Aux vers puans pour le manger^b
Ceste chose est toute commune
A tout chascun et a chascune
Homme en ce monde est expose
A la mort comme lherbe au pre
Est a la faulx aussi est ce foin
Qui huy est verd et sec demain^c
Or as este verd vng long temps
Et si as receu pluyes et vens
Mais fault maintenant te faulchier
Et en deux pieces despiecer
Lhuys est estroit lame et la cher
Ne pourroient ensemble passer
Lame premiere passera
Et puis apres la chair yra
Mais si tost ne sera ce mie
Avant sera la chair pourrie
Et autre fois regeneree
En la grant commune assemblee^d
Doncques regarde sappoincte

Deuement tu es et appareille
Sa toy ne tient tantost verras
La grant cite ou tendu as Tu es au guichet et a lhuys
Quou mirouer pieca tu vis
Se tu es despoille et nuz^e
Dedans tantost seras receuz
Celle entree tu auoies moult chier Lors quant tu la vis au premier Et touteſois tant ie te dy
Qua mon pere tu cries mercy
En promettant a penitence
Que se nen as a souffisance Fait volentiers tu la feras
En purgatoire ou tu yras

³ By the light of Divine Truth the reader must perceive that the atoning Sacrifice of the Son of God has been completely set aside in the advice here given to the Pilgrim. Fallen man must come to God as a Judge, but cannot come to Him as a Father, otherwise than by Christ as Mediator. Jesus saith, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me."^f

⁴ How can this be? when we read in the Bible, "and as it is appointed unto all men once to die, but after this the judgement, so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him shall be appear the second time without sin unto salvation."^g "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: (from the moment of their death :) yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."^h

the cocks. Hereupon he would have arisen, but lay still in bed musing upon his wondrous dream; concerning which, he informs the reader, that, if there be anything in it which seems to favour of vanity or untruth, it must be taken as the straw and the chaff is with wheat, and the whole so sifted that the good and true may remain and be remembered, whilst the light and worthless is forgotten and dismissed; and, finally, he concludes by recommending his work to all those who, like good winnowers, are skilled in separating reality from error, and truth from falsehood.

In the Pilgrim's Progress, Christian and Hopeful are described as at once entering into that perfect peace, and rest, and joy which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man to conceive, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."^a

"Now, upon the bank of the river, on the other side, they saw the two shining men again, who there waited for them; wherefore, being come up out of the river, they saluted them, saying, 'We are ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for those that shall be heirs of salvation.' Thus they went along towards the gate. Now you must note that the city stood upon a mighty hill; but the pilgrims went up that hill with ease, because they had these two men to lead them up by the arms; also they had left their mortal garments behind them in the river; for though they went in with them, they came out without them. They, therefore, went up here with much agility and speed, though the foundation upon which the city was framed was higher than the clouds.

* * * The talk they had with the shining ones was about the glory of the place, who told them that the beauty and glory of it was inexpressible. 'There,' said they, 'is the Mount Zion, the heavenly Jerusalem, the innumerable company of angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect.^b You are going now,' said they, 'to the Paradise of God, wherein you shall see the tree of life, and eat of the never-fading fruits thereof; and when you come there you shall have white robes given you, and your walk and talk shall be every day with the King: even all the days of eternity!^c There you shall not see again such things as you saw when you were in the lower region upon the earth—to wit, sorrow, sickness, affliction, and death—for the former things are passed away.^d You are going now to Abraham, to Isaac, and Jacob, and to the prophets; men that God hath taken away from the evil to come, and that are now resting upon their beds—each one walking in his righteousness.^e The men then asked, 'What must we do in the holy place?' To whom it was answered, 'You must there receive the comfort of all your toil, and have joy for all your sorrow; you must reap what you have sown, even the fruit of all your prayers, and tears, and sufferings for the King by the way.^f In that place you must wear crowns of gold, and enjoy the perpetual sight and visions of the Holy One—for there you shall see Him as He is.^g There, also, you shall serve Him continually, with praise, with shouting, and thanksgiving, whom you desired to serve in the world, though with much difficulty, because of the infirmity of your flesh. There your eyes shall be delighted with seeing, and your ears with hearing, the pleasant voice of the mighty One. There you shall enjoy your friends again, that are got thither before you; and there you shall with joy receive even every one that follows into the holy place after you.' * * * Now when they were come up to the gate, there was written over it, in letters of gold, 'Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.'^h

"Then I saw in my dream that the shining men bid them call at the gate, the which, when they did, some from above looked over the gate—to wit, Enoch, Moses, and Elijah, &c.—to whom it was said, 'These pilgrims are come from the city of Destruction, for the love that they bear to the King of this place.'

^a 1 Cor. ii. 9.

^b Heb. xii. 22—24.

^c Rev. ii. 7; iii. 4; xxi. 1.

^d Isaiah lxxv. 16.

^e Isaiah lvii. 1, 2.

^f Gal. vi. 7.

^g 1 John iii. 2.

^h Rev. xxii. 24.

^a Isaiah xxvi. 2.

^b Rev. v. 13, 14.

And then the pilgrims gave in unto them each man his certificate, which they had received in the beginning ; those, therefore, were carried in to the King, who, when He had read them, said, 'Where are the men?' To whom it was answered, 'They are standing without the gate.' The King then commanded to open the gate, 'That the righteous nation,' said He, 'that keepeth truth, may enter in.'^a

"Now I saw in my dream that these two men went in at the gate ; and lo, as they entered, they were transfigured ; and they had raiment put on that shone like gold. There was also that met them with harps and crowns, and gave them to them ; the harps to praise withal, and the crowns in token of honour. Then I heard in my dream that all the bells in the city rang again for joy ; and that it was said unto them, 'Enter ye into the joy of your Lord.' I also heard the men themselves, that they sang with a loud voice, saying, 'Blessing, honour, glory, and power, be to Him that sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever and ever.'"^b

These lines at the conclusion of Bunyan's

Dream show how similar are the metaphors employed both by himself and De Guileville in their parting addresses to the reader :—

Now, reader, I have told my dream to thee ;
See if thou canst interpret it to me,
Or to thyself, or neighbour ; but take heed
Of misinterpreting ; for that, instead
Of doing good, will but thyself abuse :
By misinterpreting evil ensues.

Take heed also that thou be not extreme
In playing with the outside of my dream ;
Nor let my figure or similitude
Put thee into a laughter or a feud.
Leave this for boys and fools ; but as for thee,
Do thou the substance of the matter see.
Put by the curtains, look within my veil ;
Turn up my metaphors, and do not fail
There, if thou seekest them, such things to find
As will be helpful to an honest mind.
What of my drops thou findest there be bold
To throw away, but yet preserve the gold.
What if my gold be wrapped up in ore ?
None throws away the apple for the core.
But if thou shalt cast all away as vain,
I know not but 'twill make me dream again.

The following Extracts on the glories of the New Jerusalem are quoted from Hymns written at three different periods:—The first by St. Bernard, (to whom reference is made in De Guileville's poem,) A.D. 1100. The second is taken from a Chap-book¹ in the British Museum, (1078 & 17,) to which no date is prefixed. The third is by a well-known modern Author, who has kindly permitted its insertion.

HYMN.

BRIEF life is here our portion,
Brief sorrow, short-lived care:
The life that knows no ending,
The tearless life is there.

O happy retribution,
Short toil, eternal rest!
For mortals and for sinners
A mansion with the blest!
That we should look, poor wanderers,
To have our home on high,
That worms should seek their dwellings
Beyond the starry sky.
So now we fight the battle,
And then we wear the crown
Of full and everlasting
And passionless renown.
There God, our King and Portion,
In fulness of his grace,
Shall we behold for ever,
And worship face to face.
To thee, O dear, dear country,
Mine eyes their vigils keep:
For very love beholding
Thy happy name they weep.
O one, O only mansion!
O paradise of joy!
Where tears are ever banished,
And smiles have no alloy:
Beside thy living waters
All plants are, great and small;
The cedar of the forest,
The hyssop of the wall.
With jasper glow thy bulwarks,
Thy streets with emeralds blaze;

The sardius and topas
Unite in thee their rays:
Thy ageless walls are bounded
With amethyst unpriced;
Thy saints build up its fabric,
And the Corner-stone is Christ.
Thou hast no shore, fair ocean!
Thou hast no time, bright day!
Dear fountain of refreshment,
To pilgrims far away!
Upon the Rock of Ages,
They raise thy holy tower;
Thine is the victor's laurel,
And thine the golden dower.
Jerusalem the golden!
With milk and honey blest,
Beneath thy contemplation,
Sink heart and voice opprest:
I know not, O I know not,
What social joys are there!
What radiancy of glory!
What light beyond compare!
And when I fain would sing thee,
My spirit fails and faints;
And vainly would it image
The assembly of the saints.
They stand, those halls of Zion,
Conjubilant with song,
And bright with many an angel,
And many a martyr throng:
The Prince is ever in them;
The light is aye serene;
The pastures of the blessed
Are decked in glorious sheen.

¹ See f. 2.

There is the throne of David,
 And there, from toil releas'd,
 The shout of them that triumph,
 The song of them that feast :
 And they, beneath their Leader,
 Who conquer'd in the fight,
 For ever and for ever
 Are clad in robes of white.
 Jerusalem the radiant !
 The glory of the elect !
 O dear and future vision,
 That eager hearts expect :
 E'en now by faith I see thee,
 E'en now thy walls discern ;
 For thee my thoughts are kindled,
 And strive, and pant, and burn.
 O land that seest no sorrow !
 O state that fear'st no strife !
 O princely bowers ! O land of flowers !
 O realm and home of life !

ST. BERNARD.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.

O MOTHER, dear Jerusalem, when shall I come to thee ?
 When shall my sorrows have an end ?
 thy joys when shall I see ?
 O happy harbour of God's saints !
 O sweet and pleasant soil !
 In thee no sorrow may be found, no grief, no care, no toil.
 In thee no sickness is at all,
 no grief, no toil, no care ;
 There is no death, nor ugly fight, but life for evermore.
 No dimning clouds o'ershadow thee, no dim nor darksome night ;
 For every soul shines as the sun, for God himself gives light.
 There lust nor lucre cannot dwell—there envy bears no sway ;
 There is no hunger, thirst, nor heat, but pleasure every way.
 Jerusalem, Jerusalem !
 would God I were in thee !

O that my sorrows had an end, thy joys that I might see !
 No pains, no pangs, no bitter griefs, no woful night is there ;
 No sigh, no sob, no cry is heard, no willaway nor fear.
 Jerusalem the city is of God our King alone ;
 The Lamb of God, the light thereof, sits there upon the throne.
 Ah ! God, that I Jerusalem with speed may go behold ;
 For why ? the pleasures there abound with tongue cannot be told.
 Thy turrets and thy pinnacles with carbuncles doth shine ;
 With jasper, pearls, and crysolite, surpassing pure and fine.
 Thy houses are of ivory ;
 thy windows chrystal clear ;
 Thy streets are laid with beaten gold, where angels do appear.
 Thy walls are made of precious stones, thy bulwarks diamond square ;
 Thy gates are made of orient pearl,—
 O God ! if I were there.
 Within thy gates nothing can come that is not passing clear ;
 No spider's web, no dirt, no dust, no filth may there appear.
 Jehovah, Lord, now come, I pray, and end my grief and plaints :
 Take me to thy Jerusalem, and place me among the saints :
 Who there are crown'd with glory great,
 and see God face to face.
 They triumph all, and do rejoice, most happy is their case.
 But we who are in banishment continually do moan ;
 We sigh, we mourn, we sob, we weep, perpetually we groan.
 Our sweetness mixed is with gall, our pleasures are but pain ;
 Our joys are not worth looking on, our sorrows still remain.

But there they live in such delight, such pleasure, and such play,
 That unto them a thousand years seem but as yesterday.
 O my sweet home, Jerusalem,
 thy joys when shall I see?
 Thy King fitting upon his throne, and thy felicity.
 Thy vineyards and thy orchards,
 so wonderfully rare,
 Are furnish'd with all kinds of fruits, most beautiful and fair.
 Thy gardens and thy goodly walks continually are green;
 There grow such sweet and pleasant flowers, as no where else are seen.
 There cinnamon and sugar grows;
 there nard and balm abound;
 No tongue can tell, no heart can think, what pleasures there are found.
 There nectar and ambrosia spring,
 the musk and civet sweet;
 There many a fine and dainty drug is trodden under feet.
 Quite thro' the street, with pleasant sound, the blood of life doth flow;
 Upon the bank, on ev'ry side, the Tree of Life doth grow.
 These trees each month do yield their fruit, for evermore they spring;
 And all the nations in the world to thee their honours bring.
 Jerusalem, God's dwelling place, full sore I long to see;
 O that my sorrows had an end,
 that I might dwell with thee!
 There David stands, with harp in hand, into the heavenly choir,
 A thousand times that man was blest who might this music hear.
 There Mary sings Magnificat, with tunes surpassing sweet;
 And all the virgins bear their part, fitting around her feet.
 Te Deum doth St. Ambrose sing,
 St. Austin doth the like;

Old Simeon and Zachary have not their songs to seek.
 There Magdalen hath left her moan, and cheerfully doth sing,
 With all blest fairs, whose harmony through every street doth ring.
 Jerusalem, Jerusalem!
 thy joys fain would I see;
 Come quickly, Lord, and end my grief, and take me home to thee.
 O plant thy name in my forehead, and take me hence away,
 That I may dwell with thee in blest, (fit,) and sing thy praises ay!
 Jerusalem, the happy throne,
 Jehovah's throne on high;
 O sacred city, queen and wife of Christ eternally!
 O comely queen, with glory clad,
 with honour and degree,
 All fair thou art, excelling bright, no spot is found in thee!
 I long to see Jerusalem,
 the comfort of us all;
 For thou art sweet and beautiful, no ill can thee befall.
 In thee, Jerusalem, I say, no darkness dare appear;
 No night, no shade, no winter foul, no time doth alter there.
 No candles need, no moons to shine, no glittering stars to light,
 For Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, for ever shineth bright.
 A Lamb unspotted, white and pure, to thee doth stand in lieu Of light so great; the glory is, thy heavenly King to view;
 He is the King of kings, beset in midst his servants right,
 And they his happy household all do serve him day and night.
 There, there the quire of angels bright, there the supernal fort
 Of citizens, who hence are freed from danger's deep resort.

There be the prudent prophets all,
 th' Apostles, fix and fix,
 The glorious martyrs in a row, and confessors betwixt.
 There doth the crew of righteous men and matrons all consist,
 Young men and maids who here on earth their pleasures did resist.
 The sheep and lambs that hardly 'scapt the snares of death and hell, Triumph in joy eternally, whereof no tongue can tell ;
 And though the glory of each one doth differ in degree,
 Yet the joy of all alike,
 and common as we see.
 There love and charity do reign, and Christ is all in all,
 Whom they most perfectly behold, in glory spiritual.
 They love, they praise, they praise, and love, they holy, holy, cry ;
 They neither toil, nor faint, nor end, but laud continually.
 O happy thousand times were I,
 if, after wretched days,
 I might with listening ears conceive these heavenly songs of praise,
 Which to th' eternal King are sung, by heavenly wights above :
 By sacred souls and angels sweet, to praise the God of love !
 Oh, passing happy were my state, might I be worthy found To wait upon my God and King, his praises there to sound.
 And to enjoy my Christ above, his favour and his grace,
 According to his promise made, which here I interlace :
 " O Father dear," said he, " let them, whom thou hast given of old
 To me, be there where so I am, my glory to behold,

Which I with thee, before the world was laid, in perfect ways
 Have had, from whence the blessed fun of glory doth arise !
 Again, if any man will serve,
 then let him follow me ;
 That where I am, be thou right sure, there shall my servant be.
 And still if any man loves me, him loves my Father dear, Whom I do love, to him myself in glory shall appear."
 Lord, take away my miseries, that there I may be bold,
 With thee, in thy Jerusalem, thy glory to behold ;
 And so in Zion see my King, my love, my Lord, my all—Whom now as in a glass I see, then face to face I shall.
 O blessed be the pure in heart, their Sovereign they shall see !
 O ye most happy heavenly wights which of God's household be !
 O Lord, with speed dissolve my bonds, those gins and fetters strong ;
 For I have dwelt within the tents of Kedar overlong !
 Yet once again I pray thee, Lord, to guard me from all strife ;
 Thus to thy hill I may obtain, and dwell there all my life.
 With cherubin, and seraphin, and holy souls of men,
 To sing thy praise, of Lord of hosts, for evermore. Amen.

THE SEEN AND THE UNSEEN.¹

ON THE GREAT EXHIBITION, 1851.
 HA ! yon burst of crystal splendour !
 Sunlight, starlight, blent in one ;
 Starlight set in arctic azure,
 Sunlight from the burning zone !

¹ Vide "Hymns of Faith and Hope," by Horatius Bonar, D.D.

Gold and silver, gems and marble,
 All creation's jewelry.
 Earth's uncovered waste of riches—
 Treasures of the ancient sea.
 Heir of glory,
 What is that to thee and me?

• • • • •
 What to that for which we're waiting,
 Is this glittering earthly toy?
 Heavenly glory, holy splendour,
 Sum of grandeur, sum of joy.
 Not the gems that time can tarnish,
 Not the hues that dim and die,
 Not the glow that cheats the lover,
 Shaded with mortality.
 Heir of glory,
 That shall be for thee and me!

Not the light that leaves us darker,
 Not the gleams that come and go,
 Not the mirth whose end is madness,
 Not the joy whose fruit is woe;
 Not the notes that die at sunset,
 Not the fashion of a day;
 But the everlasting beauty,
 And the endless melody.
 Heir of glory,
 That shall be for thee and me!

City of the pearl-bright portal;
 City of the jasper wall;
 City of the golden pavement;
 Seat of endless festival.
 City of Jehovah, Salem,
 City of eternity,
 To thy bridal-hall of gladness,
 From this prison would I flee.
 Heir of glory,
 That shall be for thee and me!

Ah! with such strange spells around me,
 Fairest of what earth calls fair,
 How I need thy fairer image,
 To undo the syren snare!
 Left the subtle serpent-tempter
 Lure me with his radiant lie;

As if sin were sin no longer,
 Life were no more vanity.
 Heir of glory,
 What is that to thee and me?

Yes, I need thee, heavenly city,
 My low spirit to upbear;
 Yes, I need thee—earth's enchantments
 So beguile me with their glare.
 Let me see thee, then these fetters
 Break asunder, I am free;
 Then this pomp no longer chains me;
 Faith has won the victory.
 Heir of glory,
 That shall be for thee and me!

Soon where earthly beauty blinds not,
 No excess of brilliance palls,
 Salem, city of the holy,
 We shall be within thy walls!
 There, beside yon crystal river,
 There, beneath life's wondrous tree,
 There, with nought to cloud or fever,— Ever with the Lamb to be!
 Heir of glory,
 That shall be for thee and me!

It may be interesting to some of our readers if we quote a letter from a Syrian gentleman who remarked that the translation of the "Pilgrim's Progress" into Arabic had done more good in Syria than any book, except the Bible; the parabolical mode of instruction of our Saviour being the natural form of expression in that country.

"You desire me," he writes, "to relate to you a few facts connected with the Arabic Pilgrim's Progress; I shall try to do so in this note, in the fewest words possible.

"The book was first translated for the 'Church Missionary Society,' by a first-rate Arabic scholar, a native of Mount Lebanon, and printed at their Arabic printing press, at Malta. It was extensively read, wherever the Arabic language was spoken.

"Soon after the breaking up of the mission at Malta, it became scarce, and another edition was called for.

"The American Missionaries, in Syria, had the book then re-translated, (by another native of Mount Lebanon,) and, by the help of the first translation, made of it a very good new edition. They put this new copy into the hands of one of the best Arabic scholars and poets (a native of Mount Lebanon also), who corrected it and saw it 'through the press.'

"The book has now become a classical one. It is read in all the American schools throughout Syria. Copies of it have gone into Arabia, Mesopotamia, India, Egypt, and the Coast of Barbary.

"During my first visit to England, I had the curiosity to go to Blackwall, to see the Niger Expedition, which was then fitting up for the heart of Africa; and on going into the first cabin of one of the steamers, I saw all its shelves filled with Arabic books. On asking the Missionary (Muller), who was then accompanying the expedition, why they took Arabic books with them, he answered me, that the Arabic was the medium of communication with the natives: and that the Arabic characters were used in all the interior of Africa, even when the language spoken by the tribes was not Arabic. Many copies of the Pilgrim's Progress were on the shelves.

"The book being full of figurative language, and allegorical expressions, has had a great hold on the mind of the simple people in the East.

"I was spending, not many years ago, a short time at Hasbaya, a town in Anti-Lebanon, several thousand feet higher than the level of the sea. I took a ride one fine afternoon to the top of the hills that overlook the town and country. As I wandered amongst the vineyards, admiring the beauty of the bold and majestic scenery, the 'Watchman' came down, and asked me to go up and sit with him in his bower; adding, that the view from it was the best in the neighbourhood.

"I must, however, explain to you what a

'watchman' and a 'bower' are. The vineyards in Syria cover many acres of land. The vines either lie on the ground, are supported by poles, or run up, and twine themselves round high trees. The fields being very extensive, and the land quite cheap, there are, of course, no hedges to the vineyards; the bear, the hyæna, the fox, and the dog, are very fond of grapes—and the visit of any of these animals to a vineyard costs the owner a basket of grapes. Although strangers are never molested if they help themselves to the grapes as they pass by a vineyard, yet the people of the village are not allowed that privilege. To watch then, over tame and wild depredators, town and forest visitors, the owners appoint a 'Watchman,' during the season of the grapes.—See Isaiah v. 1, 2.

"The 'Watchman' selects a large tree, generally an oak, on the top of the highest hill. He then lays poles on the centre of the branches of the tree, and ties them with cords, &c. and placing boards over these poles, and then covering the whole with other branches, he spreads his mat and bed on the boards, and in this bower he eats, drinks, watches, and sleeps, day and night.

"These men have such a good ear, assisted by a clear sky and pure atmosphere, that they can hear the least sound, and with a rifle, they are, indeed, not to be despised. By such a 'watchman' I was invited, and into such a bower I ascended.

"As I sat on the bed, admiring the scenery that was before me, I looked round me and saw some Arabic books, one of which was well used. I took it up; it was the 'Pilgrim's Progress.' 'You may well ask,' said Nicola to me, 'why this book is well used, more so than the others. You know that on becoming a Protestant what persecution I endured—how often I was hunted down, like a wild beast—how my wife deserted me for her father's house—how my two daughters were taken to my brother's home, to prevent their being contaminated by my principles. Well, this book was a comfort to me during my troubles. The man who wrote it seemed to have had just such a person as me before him. Then, in my solitude, nothing is more cheering than to read it early at morn and late at night. Such a book was never made for you men, who live in cities—who are ambitious, rich, and luxurious; but I who live in this tree, for three months in the year—I see the sun rise in majesty in the morning, and go down in power in the evening; I see the moon appear in glory, and set in splendour—with Anti-Lebanon for my habitation—and Lebanon, Hermon, and Iulan round about me: while the Jordan, taking its source at my feet, winds its way into the lakes of Huleih, Tiberias, and Lot, till they all vanish in the distance. I have need of such a book—I can understand it!

“Poor Nicola asked me, two years after, to go and see him at home. There were his wife, and two daughters. ‘We live now,’ said he to me, ‘together, and in peace; but the people often cause us trouble. They are always trying to throw discord amongst us. You know my daughters can now read; and they often read the Pilgrim’s Progress.’

“I called frequently at the cell of an old monk at Beirut, to pass an hour in disputation and friendly talk—and often saw him read the ‘Pilgrim’s Progress.’ ‘I am still of opinion,’ he would say to me, ‘that it is better not to marry. See what trouble this man had with his wife and family. I am alone—I have no trouble, because I have neither wife or children—I read this book during the long winter evenings and feel quite delighted to think that your Protestant friends have at least one good book to offer us. I really think that our friends, the Roman Catholic Priests, are wrong; for, in forbidding their people in this country to read Protestant books, they should have made an exception of the Pilgrim’s Progress.’ I really loved the man because he was sincere in being attached to the doctrines of the orthodox church.

“Not far from him lived another monk, young, handsome, and intelligent. He is one of the few amongst the Clergy, in Syria, who have liberal and enlightened views; desire to see the old Churches shake off their sloth, and take up the cause of Evangelical religion and general education. I have often seen him read the ‘Pilgrim’s Progress,’ and heard him say, that if he had the influence and the power he would make all the people study it. I have just heard from a mutual friend that this good gentleman has been promoted to the Bishopric of Tarsus. My friend wishes me to write and congratulate him on this promotion.

“I am quite sure that this new bishop will behave like a true Christian, and will do much good in his new sphere of action. Dear Gerasimus! may you never forget the long conversations we often held together; and may you be like Paul of Tarsus, a blessing to that part of Syria.

“I have seen another man day and night turn over the leaves of this book. I had given him the first translation when it was first printed. I brought him the new edition as soon as it came out. I saw this old man read it to his old partner in life, during the long winter nights; and when I returned late from some evening party, I found him with the book in his lap, reading, (and smoking at the same time,) waiting for me. ‘I could sit up,’ he would say, ‘the whole night reading it. I know the Arabic of the old edition is not so good as the new one; it has many defects, but I like it as an old friend. I like the new one for a change. This world is so full of wickedness—we live in sin, and the very breath we draw is so polluted with evil, that it is well we can, at home and alone, commune with the spirits of good men who have departed in peace.’ This man was my own Father.

“ANTONIUS AMBUNY.”

The following curious passage, extracted from a well-known periodical, shows the quaint form which the “allegory” sometimes took.

"Of the universal taste for allegory in the middle ages, we are furnished with a curious illustration by M. Jubinal, in his elegant publication of 'Les anciennes tapisseries historiques,' in the specimen he gives from the tapestry of Nancy, said to have been taken from the tent of Charles le Téméraire in 1477. In the first compartment, three boon companions, Dinner, Supper, and Banquet, meet with a company of bons vivants, called Bonne-Compagnie, Accoutumance, Passe-temps, Gourmandie, Friandise, &c. whom they invite to their bofets.

"In the second compartment they are represented at the hotel of Dinner; but at this performance Supper and Dinner take umbrage, and conspire against the convives: in the next compartment, whilst at Supper's hall the guests are suddenly attacked by the hired assassins, Gout, Cholic, &c. but they make their escape, and are pursued by Supper, who bruises many of them with his club. They next repair to the hall of Banquet, where, in the midst of their festivities, they are suddenly attacked by a troop of ugly women, armed with sharp knives, named Apoplexy, Paralysis, Epilepsy, Pleurisy, Dropsy, &c. The feasters are now slaughtered without mercy, and only a few escape from the hands of the assassins. These fly for aid to Lady Experience, who decides that the two companions, Supper and Banquet, shall be separated.

"In the remaining portions of the tapestry, Supper and Banquet are made prisoners, and carried for judgment before Dame Experience and her counsellors Galen, Ypocras, Avicenna, and Averrois, who pass sentence of death upon Banquet, whilst Supper is condemned to have her arms bound, and never to approach the dwelling of Dinner nearer than three leagues. The last of the compartments represents the execution of the sentence."—Gent. Mag. Dec. 1842.

In an American newspaper, entitled "The Christian Advocate and Journal," dated Aug. 9, 1843, the following satire appeared on the modern fashionable facilities of getting to heaven, called "The Celestial Railroad," by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The writer supposes that in a dream he visits the populous city of Destruction, from which the public-spirited inhabitants had recently established a railroad to the Celestial City. His curiosity induces him to visit the station-house, and there he had the good fortune to meet with a gentleman of the name of Mr. Smooth-it-away, a director of the railroad corporation, and one of its largest stockholders.

The vehicle rattles through the city, and at a short distance passes over a bridge of elegant construction. On both sides are seen a great quagmire. This Mr. Smooth-it-away informs him is the famous Slough of Despond, and the bridge is that which the engineers have constructed across the bog, by throwing in, for a foundation, books of morality, French philosophy, and German rationalism, works of Plato, Confucius, and Buddha, to make the passage agreeable to pilgrims—"yet, in spite of Mr. Smooth-it-away's assurances of its solidity, (says the dreamer,) I should be loth to cross it in a heavy omnibus, if each passenger had as heavy luggage as that gentleman and myself.

"The spacious station-house is erected on the site of the little wicket-gate, which old pilgrims recollect stood across the highway, and by its inconvenient narrowness was a great obstruction to the traveller of liberal mind and expansive stomach. It would have done Bunyan's heart good to see the number of passengers and the favourable change the community had undergone relative to the celestial pilgrimage. No more lonely ragged men, with huge burdens on their backs, hooted after by the whole city; but parties of the first gentry setting out for the Celestial City, as if the pilgrimage were a summer tour. The conversation was full of taste about politics, fashions, and amusements, and though religion was doubtless the main thing at heart, it was tastefully thrown into the background. An infidel would have found nothing to shock his sensibility.

A great convenience of this new method of pilgrimage was, that our enormous burdens, instead of being carried on our shoulders, as of old, were all snugly deposited in the baggage-waggon! The ancient feuds between Prince Beelzebub and the keeper of the wicket-gate have been appeased, and some of the Prince's subjects are employed about the station carrying baggage, collecting fuel, and feeding the engines.

"Greatheart refused to be breaksman, (stoker,) but went to the Celestial City in a buff; and so the directors chose a more accommodating man, whom you will probably recognise at once." The locomotive appears; and, to the astonishment of the dreamer, it is Apollyon himself, Christian's old enemy, still breathing fire and smoke through his nostrils, induced to become the company's chief conductor.

They overtake two old-fashioned pilgrims, trudging it on foot, whom they laugh at, and Apollyon envelopes them in an atmosphere of scalding steam.

The Interpreter's House is not one of the company's stations; and the passengers were glad to pass so quickly by the cross and sepulchre, where Christian lost his burden, for they possessed such a rich collection of favourite habits that they exulted in the safety of their baggage, which they hoped would not be out of fashion in the polite circles of the celestial world!

To facilitate the passage of the Hill Difficulty, a spacious tunnel has been constructed through the heart of this rocky mountain, and the materials from the heart of the hill have been employed in filling up the Valley of Humiliation!

"A wonderful improvement indeed!" said one of the passengers, 'yet I should have been glad to visit the Palace Beautiful, and be introduced to those charming young ladies Prudence, Piety, and Charity, and the rest.' 'Young ladies!' cried Mr. Smooth-it-away, as soon as he could speak for laughing, 'why, my dear fellow, they are old maids, every one of them—prim, starched, dry, and angular—and not one of them, I will venture to say, has altered the fashion of her gown since the days of Christian's pilgrimage.' So the traveller consoles himself for the disappointment.

"Apollyon was now putting on the steam at a prodigious rate, anxious to get over the ground where he had so disastrously encountered Christian. Consulting Mr. Bunyan's road-book I found we were fast approaching the Valley of the Shadow of Death, into which doleful region I trembled to plunge at the present accelerated speed, and I told my apprehensions to Mr. Smooth-it-away; but he assured me it was as safe as the best railroad in Christendom. At this moment we shot into the dreaded valley, and my palpitations were calmed on finding that the engineers, to dispel the gloom and supply the defect of cheerful sunshine, had collected the inflammable gas into pipes, and thus established a quadruple row of lamps along the whole passage! But this radiance, hurtful to the eyes, glared upon the visages of my fellow passengers; and, as compared with natural day-light, there is the same difference as between truth and falsehood. Here the fear of running off the track, beside which was the bottomless pit, made my heart quake—for the noise of the train reverberated like thunder through the valley, and soon there followed a tremendous shriek, careering along the valley, as if a thousand devils had burst their lungs to utter it: but this proved only to be the whistle of the engine to announce our arrival at a station!

"Rattling onward again, we at length made our escape from the valley and its lurid lights, at the end of which is the cavern where, in John Bunyan's time, dwelt two cruel giants, called Pope and Pagan. But these old troglodytes are no longer there, and the cave is now occupied by another terrible giant, a German by birth, called the giant Transcendentalist; but as to the form or features of this huge miscreant, neither he for himself, nor anybody for him, has ever been able to describe. As we rushed by the cavern's mouth we caught a hasty glimpse of him—he looked much like a heap of fog and duskiness. He shouted after us, but we could not understand his lingo.

"Late in the day the train thundered into the ancient city of Vanity, where the fair is still at the height of prosperity, and the new railroad brings with it a great influx of strangers.

"If the Christian reader have had no accounts of the city since Bunyan's time, he will be surprised to hear that now almost every street has its church, and the reverend clergy are held in high reverence—and well do they merit this high estimation—for their maxims of wisdom and virtue come from as deep a source as those of the sagest philosophers of old. I need only mention the distinguished names of the Rev. Mr. Shallow-deep, the Rev. Mr. Clog-the-spirit, the Rev. Dr. Wind-of-Doctrine, &c. The labours of these eminent divines diffuse an homogeneous erudition. Literature is etherealized; knowledge deposits all its heavier particles and exhales into a sound, which steals into the ever-open ears of their auditors. These ingenious methods constitute a sort of machinery by which thought and study are done to everybody's hand, whilst another species of machine is employed for the manufacture of individual morality. All these wonderful improvements in ethics, religion, and literature, being made clear to my comprehension by Mr. Smooth-it-away, inspired me with a vast admiration of Vanity Fair.

"It is true that, while loitering through the bazaars, some of the purchasers, I thought, made very foolish bargains. Some spent a splendid fortune in the purchase of diseases, and a heavy lot of repentance on a suit of rags. There was a sort of stock or scrip, much in demand, called conscience, which would purchase anything. Indeed, few commodities could be bought without paying a heavy sum in this particular stock, which was the only thing of permanent value! Tracts of land, and golden mansions, situated in the Celestial City were bartered, at very disadvantageous rates—for a few years' lease of small, dismal, inconvenient tenements in Vanity Fair.

"The place began to seem like home; but I was at length reminded of the idea of pursuing my travels to the Celestial City by the sight of the same pair of simple pilgrims at whom we had laughed so heartily when Apollyon puffed smoke and steam into their faces."

These pilgrims, whose names are Mr. Stick-to-the-right, and Mr. Go-the-old-way, remonstrated with the railroad traveller, and warned him that the whole concern was a bubble and delusion; that he might travel upon it all his lifetime without ever getting beyond the limits of Vanity Fair; that the Lord of the Celestial City had refused, and ever would refuse, to grant an act of incorporation for the railroad. Wherefore, every person who buys a ticket must expect to lose his purchase-money—which is the value of his own soul!

"'Pooh! Nonsense!' said Mr. Smooth-it-away, dragging me away; 'these fellows ought to be indicted for a libel. If the law stood as it once did in Vanity Fair, we should see them grinning through the iron bars of the prison window.'

"This incident made a considerable impression upon my mind, and another strange thing troubled me: amid the occupations or amusements of the Fair, nothing was more common than for a person—whether at a feast, theatre, or church, or trafficking for wealth or honours—suddenly to vanish like a soap-bubble, and be never more seen of his fellows. And so accustomed were they to such accidents, that business went on as if nothing had happened!

"Finally, however, I resumed my journey with Mr. Smooth-it-away by my side. A little beyond the suburbs of Vanity we rapidly passed the ancient silver mine of which Demas was the first discoverer, and which is now wrought to greater advantage than ever; and a little further onward, the spot where Lot's wife stood as a pillar of salt, but which curious travellers have carried away piecemeal.

"The next remarkable object was a large edifice, formerly the castle of the redoubted giant Despair, but since his death, Mr. Flimsy— faith has repaired it so flimsily as a house of entertainment that I feared it would some day thunder down on the heads of the occupants. 'We shall escape, at all events,' said Mr. Smooth-it-away, 'for Apollyon is putting on the steam again.'" The road now plunged into a gorge of the Delectable Mountains—but a drowsiness came over the passengers as they passed over the enchanted ground, but they awoke as they arrived at the final station in the pleasant land of Beulah; and here Apollyon outdid himself in screwing out of the whistle of the steam-engine the most infernal sounds and uproar, that the discord must have reached to the celestial gates. "This horrid clamour still rang in our ears when a thousand instruments of music seemed to announce, in an exulting strain, the approach of some illustrious hero who had fought a good fight and won a glorious victory. This, we found, was to welcome the two poor pilgrims we had insulted, on our way, and at Vanity Fair, with taunts and gibes! 'I wish we were as secure of a good reception,' said I; but my friend answered, 'Never fear, never fear! Come, make haste—the ferry-boat will be off directly, and in three minutes you will be on the other side of the river: no doubt you will find coaches to the city-gates!' A steam ferry-boat, the last improvement on this important route, lay at the river-side, puffing and snorting, ready to start. I hurried on board with the other passengers, some bawling for their baggage, some exclaiming the boat would explode or sink, some tearing their hair as they looked on the ugly aspect of the steersman, &c. Mr. Smooth-it-away stays behind, and laughs at all this, like an impudent fiend, with a wreath of smoke issuing from his nostrils, and a twinkle of livid flame darting from each eye, proving that his heart was all in a red blaze! I rushed to the side of the boat to fling myself on shore, but the paddle-wheels, beginning to turn, threw a dash of spray over me, so cold—so deadly cold—with the chill that will never leave those waters until death be drowned in his own river—that, with a shiver and a heart-quake, I awoke. Thank Heaven, it was a dream!!!"

With regard to John Bunyan's "dream," perhaps no opinion so generally prevails as that of his having written his Pilgrim's Progress during his imprisonment in Bedford jail, which he is said to call a "den."

The circumstance which has mainly contributed to this popular impression, if not the very foundation of it, is the insertion of the word Goal, or Jail, opposite to the word Den in most of the editions subsequent to those he corrected himself. Whoever may have been the author of this interpolation, certainly it was not Bunyan. Nothing of the kind appears before the seventh edition. Thus it is evident he did not intend to make his readers believe he wrote his dream in prison, and it becomes necessary to look for the origin of the expression elsewhere. It is a Saxon word derived from the time when the country was only partially settled. Such of the land as was cultivated soon received appellations expressive of habitation, as wick, village—bam, homestead, (the original of our word home,)—ten or town, a collection of houses, &c. While the uncultivated border was named, according to the different localities, wood, dele, den or dale, "a wooded valley;" bolt, "a wood;" burst, "a thicket;" &c. There are many places whose names prove this—as Tenterden, Betherfden, Horsmonden, Hawkburst, Ticeburst, Penfburst, &c. To settle the conflicting claims of parties who had right of common within the Dens, a separate jurisdiction called the Court of Dens, was established, which continued in full vigour down to the time of Charles II.

Mr. John Mitchell Kemble, in his Saxons in England, says:—"I will lay this down as a rule, that the ancient mark, march or meare, is to be recognized by following the names of places ending in den, which always denoted cubile ferarum, or pasture, usually for swine."

Edinb. Rev. Jan. 1849, p. 168.

Hence, therefore, it may be assumed that Bunyan by no means intends to convey to his readers the idea that he dreamed the dream of the "Pilgrim's Progress" in prison, but rather that it appeared to him in some wooded and sequestered spot in the country; and the similarity of his work to that of De Guileville, and the various ancient writers who have been quoted, is sufficiently shown no less by this circumstance, than by the several other examples which have been adduced throughout the volume.

w. g. n.

hly z

